1794. — Statute-barred debt—Necessity for notice to next of kin.—Deceased died intestate & a lunatic in a county lunatic asylum. At the time of his death he was indebted to the guardians. Subsequently the guardians were informed that deceased was entitled to a small amount of property. Their debt was then barred by the Stat. Limitations. The only next of kin of deceased was a lunatic daughter in the same asylum & also indebted to the guardians for maintenance. On an application for a grant of letters of administration to a nominee of the guardians:—Held: though a creditor for a statute-barred debt might obtain a grant of letters of administration, notice must be given to the daughter.—In the Goods of DRUCE (1899), 68 L. 1795. Liability of husband—Though wife holding protection order.—A wife had obtained a protection order in 1871, under Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (c. 85), s. 21, but had no property, & becoming a lunatic, & being chargeable to the O. union, was removed to an asylum for pauper lunatics. The guardians of O. applied for an order on the husband for maintenance of his wife under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1850 (c. 101), s. 5:—Held: the wife's protection order did not discharge the husband, & he was liable to contribute to her maintenance.—OXFORD GUARDIANS v. BARTON (1875), 33 L. T. 375; 39 J. P. 725, D. C.

1796. — Sum payable under separation deed—Separate claim for maintenance by guardians—Poor Law Amendment Act, 1850 (c. 101), s. 5.—Applt. & his wife, who were married in Jan. 1915, entered into a separation deed in Dec. 1915, whereby applt. covenanted to pay her 17s. 6d. weekly, & they thereupon ceased cohabitation. In 1919 the wife was removed to a lunatic asylum & became chargeable to the union, but applt. refused to pay the guardians more than 17s. 6d. a week. On a complaint by an officer of the guardians against applt. under above sect. to show cause why an order should not be made upon him to maintain his wife, the justices held that notwithstanding the separation deed applt. had shown no sufficient cause against an order, & they ordered him to pay the guardians 36s. weekly, the cost of his wife's maintenance in the asylum:—Held: the amount to which the guardians were entitled was not limited to the amount fixed by the deed, & the order of the justices was right.—*LLEWELLYN v. Right of Scottish authorities to recover.]—A pauper of the age of twenty-four years, was found destitute in the parish of D. in Scotland. That parish relieved him & under Poor Law (Scotland) Act, 1845 (c. 83), s. 71, claimed & received repayment of the cost of that relief from pltfs., the authorities of a Scottish parish in which the pauper had a legal settlement. Subsequently the pauper was found destitute & insane in the parish of A., also in Scotland. That parish, having caused him to be examined & certified as a lunatic & removed to an asylum, recovered repayment of the expenses of so doing from the pltfs. under Lunacy (Scotland) Act, 1857 (c. 71), s. 76. Pltfs. thenceforward paid for the maintenance of the lunatic in the asylum under ss. 77 of the last-mentioned Act. The lunatic was the son of a domiciled Englishman. On the death of the father leaving assets pltfs. claimed to recover from defts. as his exors. the sums which they had respectively paid to the parishes of D. & A. & the expenses of the lunatic's maintenance in the asylum, as being money which they had been compelled to pay & which the father had been legally compellable to pay:—Held: even assuming that the statutes applied to a parent or relation who was a domiciled Englishman, & that the latter statute conferred a right on the parish of settlement to recover from a relation where legally liable apart from that statute, the liability of the parent or relation must be determined by the law of his domicile; by English law a father is not liable for the maintenance of his adult son in the absence of an order of justices under Poor Relief Act, 1601 (c. 2), & defts. were consequently under no liability to pltfs.—COLDINGHAM PARISH COUNCIL v. removal of a lunatic pauper to the county lunatic asylum, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, ss. 38, 41. Two county justices under sect. 42 of the same Act, made an order, reciting the former order, & adjudicating the settlement of the pauper. On cause shown against a rule for removing the latter order by certiorari:—Held: inasmuch as the first order was bad, being made by justices who had no jurisdiction to remove to the county lunatic asylum (because by 9 Geo. 4, c. 40, s. 38 justices can only direct such pauper to be conveyed to the lunatic asylum "for the county or district of united counties for which or any of which they shall act"), the second order was bad also, notwithstanding the provision in sect. 42, that such order may be made where a pauper is confined in the asylum "under any order of any justices."—R. v. Union, stated that the lunatic resided in the parish of L. for three years & upwards, namely, from Feb. 1892, to about Feb. 1896. Evidence was given by the union obtaining the order that the lunatic had resided continuously in the parish of L. for a period of four years from Apr. 1890; but it was not shown that the lunatic had resided in the parish of L. for a period of three years within the times mentioned in the grounds of adjudication:—Held: (1) the ct. were empowered by sect. 307 of above Act to amend the grounds of adjudication so as to let in the residence prior to Feb. 1902, & in the circumstances the grounds should be so amended; (2) the ct. were debarred by sect. 310 of above Act from stating a case upon the point for the opinion of the High Ct.—*EPPING UNION v. 1809. — — — & necessary steps to decision.]—An order of removal, unappealed against or confirmed on appeal, is conclusive not only as to the facts directly decided, but as to those facts also that are mentioned in the order, & are necessary steps to the decision of the settlement.

Upon an appeal against an order adjudging the settlement of E., a lunatic pauper, who had been removed from resp. township of L. to an asylum, to be in applt. township of H., resps. proved a former valid order of removal made between the same townships, adjudging the settlement of J., aged eleven years, & K., aged five years (being at the time unemancipated, "the lawful children of W. & E.," the lunatic pauper) to be in applt. township of H. The removal of the two children from resp. township of L. to applt. township took place, & there was no appeal against the order. This was the only evidence relied upon by resps. to prove a settlement of the lunatic pauper in applt. township, derived from her husband:—Held: as the adjudication of settlement in both the orders necessarily depended upon the same two facts, namely, the settlement of W., the father, & his marriage with the lunatic pauper before the birth of their two children, the former order unappealed against was conclusive as to those facts, & applt. were estopped from proving that in truth neither the husband of the pauper, nor the pauper herself, had ever gained a settlement in their township.—*R. v. Poor Removal Act, 1861 (c. 55), s. 6, the maintenance of a pauper lunatic in an asylum is to be borne by the common fund of the union; & by sect. 7 the guardians of any union may obtain orders upon the guardians of any other union, or upon the guardians or overseers of any parish not comprised in a union, & may appeal against & defend any orders in respect of any lunatic paupers hereby made chargeable upon the common fund. . . . The guardians of M. Union obtained an order adjudging the settlement of a pauper in a lunatic asylum to be in the parish of A. in the F. Union, & the guardians of F. Union were ordered to pay the expenses of the removal of the lunatic & of his maintenance in the asylum. In Oct. 1891, her father moved her with the rest of his family to a parish in resp. union, with no intention of returning. Her mental condition then became worse, & she was placed in a lunatic asylum. In Aug. 1892, an order was made under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), by two justices, which adjudicated her settlement to be in applt.'s union, & called on the guardians to repay to the guardians of resp. union sums already expended, & to pay her future maintenance to the treasurer of the asylum:—Held: (1) the order was appealable; & (2) when she left the parish in applt. union with her father as part of his family, the pauper lunatic put an end to her status of irremovability there, & the order must be quashed.—*HENDON UNION v. On Nov. 25, 1852, an order of maintenance of a lunatic pauper was made; & on Feb. 15, 1853, it was served upon applt. parish; but no notice of chargeability, or grounds of removal, or particulars of settlement were at any time served. 1846. Amendment of mistake in order below—Provided order substantially the same.]—By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 97, an order of justices, adjudicating the settlement of a pauper lunatic, is to direct payment of the expenses of his maintenance, etc.,

to be made by the guardians of the parish of settlement, if it be a parish under a board of guardians; if not, by the overseers. Sect. 108 gives an appeal to quarter sessions against such an order; & sect. 113 empowers the sessions, at the hearing of the appeal, to amend any omission or mistake in the drawing up of the order, if satisfied that enough was in proof before the justices making it to have authorised them to have drawn it up correctly.

L. was a parish in which, under a local Act, the rector, churchwardens & overseers, together with twenty-one other persons elected in pursuance of the Act, were constituted the select vestry of, & the board of guardians for L. An order of justices made under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 97, adjudging the settlement of a pauper lunatic to be in L. directed payment of the expenses of his maintenance, etc., to be made by the churchwardens & overseers of L.; & was served on the overseers. On an appeal by the overseers to quarter sessions against this order, the sessions amended the order by substituting in it the word "guardians" for the words "churchwardens & overseers":—Held: (1) the order of justices was bad, being directed to & served upon a body distinct from the guardians of L., & not upon the guardians of L. under a misnomer; & (2) sessions had not power, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 113, to amend the order as stated: the amendment making the order a new one, & upon new parties who were not before the sessions.—R. v. LIVERPOOL (INHABITANTS) (1860), 2 E. & E. 687; 29 L. J. M. C. 137; 2 L. T. 173; 6 Jur. N. S. 1028; 8 W. R. 391; 121 E. R. 258; sub nom. R. v. LIVERPOOL (INHABITANTS), Re LANCASTER, 24 J. P. 646.

1847. Adjournment of appeal.]—The general power of a ct. of quarter sessions to adjourn to the next sessions the hearing of an appeal, where the particular Act giving the appeal does not limit the hearing & determination of it to one sessions only, extends to cases where the hearing of the appeal has commenced & the evidence is partly before the ct. The sessions have power, in such a case, to adjourn the further hearing to the next sessions, for the purpose of additional evidence being procured: or for any cause which, in their discretion, may render the adjournment expedient. Sessions may exercise this power of adjournment in appeals under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97; the Act not limiting the hearing & determination to the sessions for which the appeal is entered, or at which it is first gone into.—R. v. CAMBRIDGE UNION GUARDIANS (1861), 1 B. & S. 61; 30 L. J. M. 1848. Costs—Identification of party liable.]—By an order of quarter sessions, which appeared to be made upon an appeal by the inhabitants of the parish of S. from an order of two justices adjudging the settlement of a pauper lunatic to be in the said parish, & ordering the overseers of the said parish to pay unto the treasurer of the guardians of a union including the parish of C. the reasonable expenses of maintenance, etc., incurred by the parish of C., the said order of justices was quashed, & the overseers of the parish of C. were ordered to pay to the overseers of S. the costs which they had been put to in & about the said appeal:—Held: the order was good, inasmuch as it sufficiently appeared that the overseers of the parish of C. were substantially resps. in the appeal, so as to justify an order upon them for the costs.—R. v. CHATHAM (INHABITANTS) (1848), 12 Q. B. 300; 3 New Mag. Cas. 32; 3 New Sess. Cas. 235; 17 L. J. M. C. 161; 11 L. T. O. S. 290; 12 J. P. 790; 12 Jur. 559; 116 E. R. 881.

1849. — Cannot be awarded by subsequent sessions.]—Upon an appeal against an order adjudicating the settlement of a lunatic pauper, the sessions at which the appeal was heard confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of this ct. upon a case to be afterwards stated, nothing being then said as to costs. Appls. afterwards abandoned their intention of stating the case, & at a subsequent sessions resps. applied for & obtained an order granting them the costs of the appeal:—Held: the sessions at which the appeal was heard & determined alone had jurisdiction to grant costs, & the order of the subsequent sessions was therefore invalid.—*R. v. should be made to the Lord Chancellor, that the party may be taken up under his authority.—ANDERDON v. BURROWS (1830), 4 C. & P. 210, N. P.

without having visited & personally examined the patient, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour. An indictment charged that deft., a surgeon, knowingly & with intention to deceive, signed a certificate required by the Act, without having visited & personally examined the patient, contrary to the statute. The jury negatived the intention to deceive, & found deft. guilty, subject to the opinion of the ct. upon the case:—Held: in the description of this offence, the averment of intention was surplusage, & such unnecessary matter might be rejected, as well in an indictment on a penal statute as at common law.—R. v. JONES (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 611; 9 L. J. O. S. M. C. 98; 109 E. R. 1270.

1852. — & due inquiries.]—A medical man, who has merely signed a certificate under the Lunacy Acts & has done nothing more towards causing the confinement of the alleged lunatic, is not liable in trespass. Semble: it would be otherwise if he subsequently endeavours to prevent the party's discharge. Nor, if he has merely consulted another medical man who has signed the other certificate, & told him his own idea of the case, is he liable for causing the other to sign such certificate. But if he signs such a certificate without taking due care & making due inquiries, he is liable for the consequences which ensue, & if on his own personal examination he is not satisfied, he is bound to make due inquiries. Nor is he the less liable for the want of such due care & inquiries because he has acted bond fide.

It is of great importance that they [the medical profession] should very carefully sign certificates of this kind, & that personal liberty should not be interfered with improperly by any abuse of the power which the law has entrusted to these parties; & on the other hand, it is very important to the medical profession that if a person acts really bond fide under the authority of the Act by which these duties are assigned to him, he should not be made responsible for a mere error in judgment or mistake of facts. It is also very important to the interests of the public that persons who are really lunatics should be immediately taken care of.

In a case of this kind malice is not necessary to give the right of action. . . . The true ground of complaint is the negligence of deft. & the want of due care in the discharge of the duty thrown upon him; & if a person assumes the duty of a medical man under this statute & signs a certificate of insanity which is untrue, without making the proper examination or inquiries which the circumstances of the case would require from a medical man using proper care & skill in such a matter, if he states that which is untrue, & damage ensues to the party thereby, he is liable to an action. . . . If a medical man assumes under this statute the duty of signing such a certificate, without making, & by reason of his not making, a due & proper examination, & such inquiries as are necessary, & which a medical man under such circumstances ought to make & is called on to make, not in the exercise of the extremest possible care, but in the exercise of ordinary care, so that he is guilty of culpable negligence, & damage ensues: then an action will lie, although there has been no spiteful or improper motive, & though the certificate is not false to his knowledge. The rule does not apply to a mere error in judgment. What he is required to do is to make an examination; & if it be necessary, to make further inquiries, & not to act without such inquiries as may be required. There must, to make him liable, be negligence in the discharge of those proper duties which it must be taken he has assumed in undertaking to sign the certificate of insanity (CROMPTON, J.).—HALL v. SEMPLE (1862), 3 F. & F. 337, N. P.

1853. What must be stated—Specific facts upon which opinion founded.]—A return to a habeas corpus, directing the keeper of a lunatic asylum to bring up the body of F., certified that F. was, on a certain day received under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 107, & that on the day & year aforesaid the keeper received an order & medical certificates, in the form directed by that Act, setting them out. It then further certified, that on Nov. 22, 1845, an order & two medical certificates, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, setting them out, were delivered to the keeper; & concluded, "that E. is now detained under our custody, under & by virtue of the last-mentioned Act of Parliament":—Held: the return was sufficient under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 107, as it sufficiently appeared that the order & certificates returned were received at the same time with the lunatic, & they were those under which he was received.—Re FELL (1845), 3 Dow. & L. 373; 15 L. 1854. — — —.]—Under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 45, 46, Schedules (B), (C), an order for confinement of a lunatic in a licenced house is not necessarily invalid if the party giving it does not insert statements as to all the particulars in Sched. (B), or state expressly that he does not know them. It is a sufficient statement, as to the "special circumstances," "preventing the insertion of any of above particulars," that the lunatic is "constantly watched by an attendant whom she fears." Under Sched. (C) a medical certificate is sufficient which states, as grounds for the opinion that the party is insane, "that she labours under delusions of various kinds"; & "that she is dirty & indecent in the extreme." A medical practitioner, signing the certificate, instead of the words "from the following fact or facts," inserted, "from the conversation I have had this day with the said" lunatic:—Held: sufficient, without more. Where, on return to a habeas corpus, it is stated that the party confined is of unsound mind, & unfit & unsafe to be at large, the ct. will not order such party to be discharged from a licenced house, though the order & certificates be not such as to fulfil the requisites of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 45, 46, & Schedules (B), (C).—Re SHUTTLEWORTH (1846), 9 Q. 1859. Lunatic not under proper care & control—Examinations by justices & doctor.]—Two justices made an order under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 68, for the reception into a lunatic asylum as a lunatic of a person who was not a pauper & was not wandering at large, but who was not under proper care & control. S., a relieving officer, received notice that H., who was not a pauper, was insane. S. filled up the form required by the Act, went to the magistrate's clerk's office, & arranged to meet two justices, & on meeting them S. swore to the correctness of the information, & stated on oath that H. was not under proper care & control, that his relations refused to take charge of him, & that he himself believed he was mad. The justices consulted C., a medical man, who, having at an earlier hour on that day examined H., stated that he was satisfied that he was insane. The justices intended to examine H. at a library where he was, but he left before they could do so, & they being informed that he was in a carriage near his lodgings, the two justices went to the carriage & had some conversation with him during five minutes, from which they came to the conclusion that he was insane, & a proper person to be taken care of; & after some further consultation with the medical man, they signed the order for the reception of H. into the County Lunatic Asylum, where he was received & treated as a pauper lunatic for nine days, when he was removed to a London asylum, whence he was two days afterwards discharged as not being insane. On an application by H. for a certiorari to quash the order, on the ground that the requirements of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 68, had not been satisfied:—Held: there had been a sufficient examination of the alleged lunatic; it was not necessary that the examination by the justices should be made in the presence of the medical man, or by the medical man in the presence of the justices; the provisions of sect. 68 had been sufficiently complied with; & the order made by the justices was not made without jurisdiction, & ought not to be quashed.—*R. v. 1861. Resident pauper lunatic — Workhouse situate outside union to which chargeable—Order made by justice within union.]—By Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 14, provision is made for bringing paupers who are lunatics & proper to be sent to an asylum before "a justice having jurisdiction in the place where the pauper resides." A pauper who was chargeable to a union became a lunatic while residing in the workhouse infirmary, which was situate outside the boundaries of the union:—Held: a justice having jurisdiction in the union to which the workhouse belonged had power to deal with the case, since Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 56, applied, & the workhouse must, therefore, be considered as situated in the parish to which the lunatic was chargeable.—*R. v. 1862. Degree of care exercisable by justices—Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 16.]—A justice of the peace or chairman of a board of guardians empowered by the Lord Chancellor under Lunacy Act, 1891 (c. 65), s. 25, to sign orders for the reception of persons as pauper lunatics in institutions for lunatics, if at the time of signing a reception order under above sect., he is honestly satisfied that the alleged lunatic is a lunatic & a proper person to be detained, is not liable for negligence.

A justice of the peace or duly authorised chairman of the board of guardians, in discharging his duties under above sect., is acting judicially, & on that ground is protected from an action for negligence. The chairman of a board of guardians duly empowered to make orders for the reception of pauper lunatics signed an order, under above sect., after inquiry & upon the certificate of a medical practitioner, for the reception of pltf. as a pauper lunatic in an asylum for lunatics. Pltf. brought an action against the chairman & the medical practitioner for negligence in having respectively made the reception order & given the medical certificate. It was admitted that defts. acted in good faith:—Held: (1) as regards the chairman, as at the time of making the reception order he was honestly satisfied as to pltf.'s insanity, no action for negligence lay against him, & he was entitled to judgment; (2) as regards the medical practitioner, on the facts, that there was no evidence fit to be left to the jury of any want of care on his part, & he too was entitled to judgment.—*EVERETT v. To the question "Age" the answer was "Fifty." To the question "Whether first attack," the answer was "For the last twenty years has been subject to what is termed hysteria." To the question "Age (if known) on first attack" the answer was "Thirty." To the question "When & where previously under care & treatment": the answer was "During this period of twenty years has been constantly under treatment." A few days after pltf. had been received into the asylum the last answer was altered by adding to it the words "For hysteria by" several doctors whose names were

No copy of the order as so altered was sent to the Comrs., nor did they sanction the alteration. Afterwards pltf.'s husband wrote a letter to deft. begging him to discharge pltf. "as soon as you may think it advisable." Notwithstanding this letter deft. detained pltf. for a considerable time. Pltf. having brought an action against deft. for assaulting & imprisoning her, deft. relied upon 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, ss. 99, 105:—Held: the answers were a sufficient compliance with the requirements of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, & Sched. A, No. 1; the alteration not being of a material part of the order did not invalidate the order; the letter written by pltf.'s husband to deft. was not an order of discharge within the meaning of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100,

1869. ——— Lunatic retaken under power in leave of absence order.—Pltf., having been received into & detained as a lunatic in a house licenced for the reception of lunatics under a duly certified reception order, was granted leave of absence on trial, under Lunacy Act, 1890 (c. 5), s. 55 (3) (b), for twenty-eight days. The order granting the leave empowered the manager of the licenced house to take back pltf. at any time before the expiration of the said period if his mental condition required it. On the second day of his leave pltf. went to the office of the Comrs. in Lunacy & asked to see one of the Comrs. The Comr., after seeing him, telephoned to the manager of the licenced house that pltf. was not in a fit state to be at large, & detained pltf. for two or three hours while the manager sent a motor with two attendants to take him back to the licenced house. Thereafter pltf. was detained in that house & other institutions for lunatics from Dec. 14, 1912, till he escaped on Oct. 15, 1921. He then brought an action against the Comr. & the manager, charging them jointly & severally with false imprisonment. The case was tried before a judge & jury. The jury found that pltf. on the day he was taken back was not of unsound mind or dangerous to himself or others, & was fit to be at large; that the Comr. alone caused him to be detained until the attendants came, & did so for the purpose of pltf. being detained at the licenced house; & that the manager honestly believed that pltf. was of unsound mind, & that it was in pltf.'s interest that he should be taken back to confinement, but that he had not exercised reasonable care. The judge directed the jury that it was open to them, if they thought fit, to treat the subsequent long detention of pltf. as a direct consequence of defts.' acts & as the result of the findings of the jury, gave judgment against the Comr. for £5,000, & against both defts. for £20,000.

The Ct. of Appeal having ordered a new trial in the case of the Comr. & directed judgment to be entered in favour of the manager, pltf. appealed :—Held : (1) although on the findings of the jury as to pltf.'s mental condition, the Comr. was liable in damages for wrongful detention, the subsequent detention of pltf. at the various institutions for lunatics was not the direct consequence of the Comr.'s wrongful act ; (2) the re-assumption of the control of pltf. by the manager was a novus actus interveniens, & consequently the liability of the Comr. did not extend beyond that period ; (3) there was no foundation for the charge against the manager of detaining pltf. without lawful authority. The manager was the judge of the question whether the patient's mental condition required that he should be taken back before the expiration of his leave of absence ; the power reserved by the leave of absence order to retake the patient was capable of being exercised outside the licenced house wherever the patient could be found, & thereafter the patient could be detained under the existing reception order ; (4) there was no evidence to support the finding of the jury that the manager had failed to exercise reasonable care.—*HARNETT v. So also, if he be called in to attend a person suffering under delirium tremens, he may justify such measures as are reasonably necessary, either to cure him or to restrain him from doing mischief, so long as the fit lasts, or it is likely to return.

If pltf. was, at the time of the original restraint, a dangerous lunatic, in such a state that it was likely that he might do mischief to any one, deft. would be justified in putting a restrain upon him, not merely at the moment of the original danger, but until there was reasonable ground to believe that the danger was over (BRAMWELL, B.). *SCOTT v. 1883. Reception of single lunatic—Omission to transmit necessary certificates—Onus of proof of transmission on keeper.]—8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, requires every person receiving a single lunatic into his or her care to obtain & transmit to the Lunacy Comrs. certain orders & certificates, which are upon receipt at their office entered & filed. In the books in which the receipt of such orders, etc., were entered, no notice was found of any such having been received from deft. Notice was given to deft. to produce any orders, etc., he might have received, entitling him to take charge of the alleged lunatic:—Held: although, as a general rule, a deft. must have his guilt proved, & not be called upon to establish his innocence, yet seeing that the proof was in the nature of negative proof, & that, if he had received the documents & not transmitted them, they would be in his possession, & that, after notice to produce them had been given, he had not produced them, there was a sufficient case to go to the jury.—*R. v. 1887. Person having care of lunatic—Necessity for proof of duty to take care.]—An indictment charged that while a person of unsound intellect was under the care of deft., deft. treated such persons improperly & neglectfully in certain stated particulars. It was held not to be a substantive charge; & judgment was arrested. Another count charged that the same person was the illegitimate child of deft., a female, who had means for the comfortable support & maintenance of both, whereupon it became her duty to take proper care of him, but that she did not take proper care of him, but kept & confined him in a dark, cold, & unwholesome room, neglected to provide him with proper clothing, permitted him to become dirty, allowed the room to become foul so as to cause unwholesome smells, & kept him without proper air, warmth, & exercise necessary for his health, to his damage & peril. Judgment arrested: first, because no duty was shown; secondly, because it was not shown that the conduct of deft. had or must have occasioned actual injury.—R. v. PELHAM (1846), 8 Q. B. 959; 15 L. 1888. — Care arising from natural duty—

Husband of lunatic.]—The law obliges a husband to take care of his wife independently of her being a lunatic; he does not take care of her because she is a lunatic, but because she is his wife (PARKE, B.).

The prisoner was tried & convicted on an indictment under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, s. 9, charging that he, having the care & charge of his wife, a lunatic, did abuse & ill-treat her; & also containing a count for a common assault:—Held: the prisoner was not a person having the care or charge of a lunatic within the meaning of the statute, inasmuch as its provisions were not intended to apply to persons whose care or charge arises from natural duty, & so much of the conviction as related to the counts under the statute must be quashed.—*R. v. Pltf. was detained in the workhouse for six days from the date of the certificate, when she was discharged by order of the medical officer. Pltf. having brought an action for false imprisonment on the ground that her detention beyond the original period of three days was unauthorised, in the absence of an order of a justice:—Held: the Act gave special protection to officers & others acting under its powers in cases where, although they might have misconstrued, the Act, & although they might have done things which they had no jurisdiction to do, they had acted in good faith and in a reasonable manner. On the facts there was no evidence that deft. had acted otherwise than in good faith & with reasonable care, even assuming that the further detention of pltf. beyond the original three days was unauthorised in the absence of an order of a justice.

Subsequently to 1910 L. was in the care of a rescue society, who found situations for her, but she never retained any situation for more than a short time. Evidence was also given that in Apr. 1914, she was in service in London, & from Apr. till July, 1914, she was living in London, & after that date she was seen several times in London:—Held: these facts did not constitute a case of doubt within the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913 (c. 28), s. 44 (4), & therefore, L.'s residence must, by virtue of Mental Deficiency Act, 1913 (c. 28), s. 44 (1), be presumed to be within the County of London.—*KENT COUNTY COUNCIL v. should execute the office by himself or his deputy. It was then provided, that in the absence of any of the aldermen for the time being, the bailiffs & capital burgesses might elect one or more of the burgesses to supply the vacancy or vacancies. These substituted aldermen had no power to appoint deputies. There then followed a clause which directed that the aldermen for the time being, during the time they should remain in their offices, should be justices of the peace within the borough:—Held: this charter did not enable the aldermen elected for the year to delegate their office of justice of the peace, & therefore a deputy alderman was not a justice of the peace for the borough. Qu.: whether, since 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, the Crown can delegate to a subject the power of appointing a justice of the peace.—*JONES v. 5. ————] — Pltf., a resident inhabitant of the parish of W. in the county of Hertford, was summoned to appear at the Shire Hall of the county before defts., who were appointed justices of the county under a commission, which gave them authority to act as such as well within the liberty of St. Alban as without, to answer a charge of assault committed by him within the liberty. Pltf., not having appeared to the summons, was convicted in a penalty with costs, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31; & the same not having been paid, he was committed by defts. to the liberty house of correction. By a charter of Edward IV., the King granted to the Abbots of St. Alban the right to appoint their own justices of the peace within the liberty; & the charter contained a non-intromittant clause prohibiting all other justices from in any way interfering with the justices so appointed. By 27 Hen. 8, c. 24, s. 2, the power of all grants of liberties to make justices was put an end to; & it was thereby enacted, that, for the future, all such justices should be made by letters patent under the Great Seal. Sect. 17 of that Act provided that all justices of the peace thereafter to be made by the Crown should sit & hold their sessions in the same places as the justices of the liberties commonly used; & that no person or persons within the said liberties, or any of them, should thereafter in any wise be compelled by authority of that Act to appear out of the said liberties before any other justices of assize, gaol, delivery, or of the peace, than before such justices as should be named & assigned to sit & be by the King within the said liberties, etc. By 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, it was enacted that all monasteries & abbeys, & also the cts., liberties, & privileges belonging to the same, should be vested in the King. By 32 Hen. 8, c. 20, after reciting that the liberties, etc., of divers monasteries had been assigned to the King's Ct. of Augmentations, & that it had not been fully declared in what wise the liberties, privileges, & franchises which the late owners of the same sites had, used, & exercised, should be used & exercised, it was enacted that such liberties, privileges, etc., which the late owners had, used, & exercised three months next before the said sites, etc., came to the King, should be revived in the King, & that the same liberties, etc., should be used & exercised by such stewards, etc., or other officers, as the King might appoint, in like manner as they were lawfully exercised by the ministers before they came to the hands of the King. By charter of James I., 1612, the King granted to G. & T. all that our liberty to the late monastery of St. Alban, with all & singular its rights, etc., in so ample a manner & form as any abbot, etc., of any late abbey ever had, used, or enjoyed. The premises contained in the charter descended to the present Marquis of S. By 27 Geo. 3, c. 11, it is provided, that it should be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace, within his or their respective jurisdictions, to commit either to the common gaol or to any house of correction within his or their respective jurisdictions, as to such justice or justices should seem most proper, such vagrants & other criminals, offenders, & persons charged with or convicted of small offences, as by any law then in force or thereafter to be made, he or they were or should be authorised to commit to the common gaol:—Held: (1) the justices for the liberty had not exclusive jurisdiction within the liberty; & therefore, defts., who were appointed justices for the county under the commission which gave them authority to act as such within the liberty as well as without, had jurisdiction over the offence with which pltf. was charged, though committed within the liberty; (2) as the liberty house of correction was locally situate within defts.' jurisdiction, they were empowered to commit pltf. to it.—ARNOLD v. GAUSSEN (1853), 8 Exch. 463; 22 L. J. Ex. 180; 20 L. T. O. S. 292; 17 J. P. 184; 155 E. R. 1431.

6. ————] — Exercised on advice of responsible minister.—(1) Legally & constitutionally, a justice of the peace is appointed & removed by the Sovereign, acting, as in every other exercise of the prerogative, by the advice of a responsible minister. Although the Queen's pleasure is not actually taken in practice on the appointment of a justice of the peace, he is supposed to be appointed by her as much as a judge of the Superior Cts.; & the commission of the peace under which quarter sessions are held is her commission as much as the commission of oyer & terminer, or other commission under which the judges sit at the assizes. So, if a supersedeas under the Great Seal goes to remove a magistrate from the commission of the peace, although practically issued by the Lord Chancellor without any command by the Queen, it is, in point of Law, the act of the Sovereign (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).

1. Determination of authority — Name omitted in new commission.—A new commission of the peace, in which the name of one of the former justices is omitted, does not determine his authority until he has express or the royal prerogative is involved in it. He is himself a magistrate, & has a power of commitment by warrant to prison for just cause. How can it be said that such a functionary has not a corresponding duty when a memorial such as that which we are now considering is presented to him? In the discharge of his duty he might have caused the inquiry prayed for here to have been made, & the allegations being duly substantiated & verified, he might have communicated upon the subject with the Lord Chancellor, & done what would have amounted to "a recommendation to Her Majesty that the magistrate be removed from the commission of the peace (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—HARRISON v. 19. Jurisdiction of county justices excluded.—As the King may by his letters patent make a county, & exempt this from any other county, so may he in the making of it save & except to him & his successors such part of the jurisdiction of privilege which the other county from which it is exempted, had in it before; as in divers places of the realm, the gaol of a town which is a county of itself, or which is a place privileged from the county, is the gaol of the county, & the place where the assizes or gaol-delivery is held, is within the county of the town, & yet serve also for the county at large as in the Sessions-Hall at Newgate, which serves as well for the county of Middlesex as for London, & yet it stands in London, but by usage it has always been so, & nothing can be well prescribed unto by usage which cannot have a lawful beginning by award or grant, & this by the division of London from Middlesex at the beginning might be so. But it seems that by this commission for the county a thing which happens in the town cannot be determined, albeit it be felony committed in the hall during the sessions, but by a commission for the town it may.—GLOUCESTER TOWN CASE (1593), Poph. 16; 79 E. The ancient charter of the borough of Bath had a non-intromittant clause, & under Municipal Corporations Act, 1876 (c. 76), s. 111, a separate ct. of quarter sessions was granted to the borough:—Held: (1) all jurisdiction of the county justices within the parish of B. was taken away; (2) the non-payment of paving rates, assessed on an occupier of a house in the parish of B., was "an offence committed within the borough against the provisions of the local Act"; & under 7 Will. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 31, it was cognisable by the borough justices.—*R. v. Where two sets of magistrates have a concurrent jurisdiction, & one appoints a meeting to grant ale licenses, their jurisdiction attaches, so as to exclude the others appointing a subsequent meeting; but they may all meet together on the first day; but if, after such appointment, the other

The meetings of the society were at Leeds, which had a separate ct. of quarter sessions & the expulsion of a member took place there; but members might reside out of the borough, & the act for which the member was expelled took place out of the borough:—Held: justices of the county had jurisdiction to make the order.—R. v. GRANT (1849), 14 Q. B. 43; 3 New Mag. Cas. 183; 4 New Sess. Cas. 13; 19 L. J. M. C. 59; 13 L. T. O. S. 301; 13 J. P. 408; 13 Jur. 1026; 117 E. R. 17.

30. — — Arising in borough.]—Where a borough has no separate commission of the peace & no ct. of quarter sessions, & its charter contains no non-intromittant clause prohibiting the county justices from acting within the borough, the county justices & borough justices have co-ordinate jurisdiction in all matters arising within & relating to the borough.

In such a case, when once a matter has been earmarked as county business or borough business by the issue of a proper summons to appear before the county or the borough tribunal, as the case may be, the county justices or the borough justices, as the case may be, have seisin of it to the exclusion of the other set of justices, although the latter have concurrent jurisdiction & may sit with them to hear the matter.

In such a case, when once a matter arising within the limits of the borough has been earmarked as county business, the mayor of the borough, though a county justice as well as a borough justice, is not entitled under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882

31. Borough justices exercising jurisdiction—Private meeting of county justices.]—An information was laid before two justices for the borough of M., by applt. against resp., for selling excisable liquors by retail without license, pursuant to 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 1. Resp. sold the liquors at his house in the borough of M., & was licensed by the excise, & by the justices of the borough. The borough of M. was an ancient borough before Municipal Corporation Act, & is so since that Act; & licenses for the borough had always been granted in the same manner as in the present case:—Held: (1) the fact that the borough of M. had not a separate commission of the peace did not make the license void; (2) the fact that the justices for the division of the county in which M. is situate, had appointed their annual licensing meeting for Sept. 8 for the borough, & the justices for the borough appointed theirs for Sept. 7, on which day resp.'s license was granted by them, did not make the license void.—*BROWN v. 72. ———. Quarter sessions.]—A paving Act empowered comrs. to lay rates, giving to parties grieved an appeal to quarter sessions, whose order was to be final; & no order, rate, etc., was to be removed by certiorari. On appeal against a rate three of the eleven magistrates were partners in a co. to which belonged certain premises assessed to the rate in the name of the occupier. The sessions quashed the rate:—Held: a question in the cause having been decided by a ct. improperly constituted, on account of the interest of the three magistrates, the clause prohibiting certiorari did not operate: & this ct. had the order of sessions brought up by certiorari & quashed it on affidavit of the above facts. 74. ———. Borough sessions — Order of recorder.]—On appeal, against a valuation of ratable property under a local Act to the sessions for the borough of C., the recorder, who tried the appeal, reduced the rate, & ordered that the costs should be paid by resps. The amount of costs not being then ascertained, he adjourned the case to the next sessions. At these a deputy recorder presided. The costs were in fact taxed by the recorder, who reduced them; but the order for costs was drawn up at the sessions at which the deputy recorder presided, & formally entered as of such sessions, the deputy recorder, however, not otherwise taking any part in the matter. Resps. were the parish officers of a parish comprised in a union which comprehended several other parishes; & the deputy recorder was a rated inhabitant in one of such other parishes. All the parishes contributed to a common fund for the relief of the poor:—Held: the order for costs must be considered as the order of the deputy recorder, & was voidable on account of his interest, & 16 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 1, was inapplicable, as applying only to cases where justices act as such, in the making of orders out of ct., & not to the exercise of appellate jurisdiction.—*R. v. 85. — — —.]—One of those principles which must guide a person in a judicial position is that he must not be both accuser & judge. If there is on a tribunal anybody who is an accuser, & who, although he is accuser, acts also as judge, his presence on that tribunal is fatal to its jurisdiction, & it is of no importance that had he been absent the decision would have been the same. The mere presence of a person who is accuser & judge vitiates the decision of the tribunal. . . . One principle is that anybody is disqualified to act on any judicial matter in reference to which he had any pecuniary interest or any real bias. This is undoubtedly the law, but the bias which disqualified must be in connection with the litigation in question. It must be a "real bias" in the matter itself. Accordingly where the affidavits in support of the application stated that the chairman of the justices had made remarks during the hearing of the summons against deft. for driving a motor car at a greater speed than twelve miles an hour, which remarks were alleged to indicate a strong bias against motor cars generally & had also strongly expressed his views when similar charges had been before the bench on previous occasions, the ct. held this was an insufficient ground on which to grant a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari to remove the conviction into the High Ct.—*Ex p. At the hearing of the summons the acting clerk to the justices was a member of the firm of solrs. who were acting for W. in a claim for damages against appct. for injuries received in the collision. At the conclusion of the evidence the justices retired to consider their decision, the acting clerk retiring with them in case they should desire to be advised on any point of law. The justices convicted appct., & it was stated on affidavit that they came to that conclusion without consulting the acting clerk, who in fact abstained from referring to the case :—Held : the conviction must be quashed, as it was improper for the acting clerk, having regard to his firm's relation to the case, to be present with the justices when they were considering their decision.—*R. v. The justice who had moved the resolution, & who was a ratepayer of the parish, sat & adjudicated with another justice upon the summons, & made an order directing the heap to be removed & sold, & the proceeds of the sale to be applied to the repair of the highway:—Held: the justice was disqualified from adjudicating upon the summons, for the part taken by him in moving the resolution afforded ground for a reasonable suspicion of bias on his part, though there might not have been bias in fact, & upon the further ground that as a ratepayer he was pecuniarily interested in the result of the summons.—*R. v. At the next annual licensing sessions the caretakers, in pursuance of an arrangement between the corpn. & the justices, applied for renewal licenses, some under the Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), & some under the Beerhouse Act, 1840 (c. 61). The licensing justices provisionally granted renewal licences subject to a reference to quarter sessions, the compensation authority under the Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23), s. 1. It was contended that the renewals were void because the caretakers were not persons keeping or about to keep alehouses under the Alehouse Act, 1828 (c. 61), or real resident holders & occupiers under the Beerhouse Act, 1840 (c. 61), & because some of the justices who granted the renewals were members of the corpn. & parties to the arrangement:—Held: the justices having honestly exercised their discretion & the transaction being bona fide & for the purpose of carrying out the object of the Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 13), the renewals were valid.—*LEEDS CORPN. v. It was proved that G. was a captain in the Salvation Army, & on the morning of Sunday, Oct. 7, he was in Victoria Square, Truro, playing a concertina, & surrounded by a large crowd; that he was requested by the superintendent of police to desist from playing the concertina, but he refused to do so, the superintendent at the same time telling him that he had reasonable cause for asking him to desist, as several complaints had been made by the inhabitants. It was also proved that on many previous occasions the Salvation Army had marched through the streets, playing musical instruments, tambourines & triangles; that they had been frequently cautioned & required to desist, as many complaints had been made of their proceedings. On a rule for a certiorari to remove the conviction into this ct.:—Held: the mere fact of the justices having attended a meeting, convened by the superintendent, at which a summons was applied for, but refused, did not render them interested parties so as to disqualify them from afterwards dealing with the case, even if at the meeting they had discussed the facts of the case.—*R. v. 109. — Agreement between corporation & applicant for license.]—A municipal corpn. having, for the purposes of a street improvement, purchased certain premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors, an agreement was entered into between the corpn. & a brewery co. by which the co. agreed to pay to the corpn. a sum of money, in the event of a license being granted to the co. for the sale of intoxicating liquors on certain premises belonging to them & the corpn. agreed to close the before mentioned licensed premises, & not to make, or allow to be made any application for a renewal of the license in respect of them.

Certain justices for the borough, who were also members of the borough council, had taken an active part in the council in support of the proposal that the above mentioned agreement should be entered into by the corpn. These justices subsequently sat on the hearing of an application to the licensing committee on behalf of the brewery co. for a license in respect of their before mentioned premises, which was granted. On the application to the confirming authority under the Licensing Act, 1872 (c. 44), for confirmation of the grant of the license to the co. the same justices again sat to hear the application which was granted. Three of the justices were members of the borough council of T., & one held shares in a brewery co. that sold beer within the district.

A suggestion was made before the committee that if the transfer was granted another license would be given up & certain property would be placed at the disposal of the corporation for town improvements. The transfer was granted.

The confirming authority, which included the four justices, confirmed the transfer, but the offer above stated was withdrawn:—Held: there was not any likelihood of bias on the part of the three justices who were members of the borough council, so as to render the orders made invalid, & the orders were not invalid by reason of the fact that the fourth justice adjudicated, owing to proviso (3) of Licensing Act, 1872 (c. 94), s. 60. Secus, where actual bias could be shown in fact to exist.—*R. v. One of the justices was a member of the sanitary committee, & had been present at the meeting at which the resolution was passed:—Held: Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 258, did not remove the disqualification which attached to the justice by reason of his having acted as a member of the sanitary committee in directing the prosecution, & a rule for a certiorari to bring up & quash the conviction must be made absolute.—*R. v. The justice afterwards sat with others to hear the charge, & the alleged offender was convicted:—Held: the disqualification otherwise attaching to the justice by reason of his having acted as a member of the board at the meeting at which the prosecution was authorised was not removed by Salmon Fishery Act, 1865 (c. 121), s. 61, & the conviction must, therefore, be quashed.—*R. v. An information for an offence under the Act having been preferred by an officer on behalf of the corp., a summons was issued upon it by a justice, who was also an alderman & member of the corp., but came on for hearing before justices, none of whom were connected with the corp.:—Held: notwithstanding such justices could not proceed with the hearing of the summons, for it had been issued by one who was virtually prosecutor.—*R. v. 125. — — —.]—Where by statute a member of the town council of a borough may act as a justice of the peace in matters arising under the Act, in order to disqualify him from so acting it is not sufficient to show that, as a member of the town council, he has a pecuniary interest in the result of the information or complaint, or that the corp. of which he is a member are the prosecutors, but it must be established that he has such a substantial interest in the result of the hearing as to make it likely that he has a real bias in the matter. An officer of a corp. appointed to collect the borough rate obtained a summons against a ratepayer in arrear. In so doing he acted in the discharge of his duty, but on his own responsibility & without consulting the town council. At the hearing the justices dismissed the summons, on the ground that one of the sitting magistrates being a town councillor was thereby disqualified from adjudicating upon the summons. Thereupon W. wrote a letter contradicting that statement & adding: "I should be nothing less than a traitor considering the position I hold if I had voted as he states in his letter." It appeared that W. had been for many years a secretary of a branch of the Order of Rechabites, & as a member of that society had signed the following declaration: "I hereby declare that I will abstain from all intoxicating liquors. . . . I will not engage in the traffic of them, but in all possible ways will discountenance the use, manufacture, & sale of them." The Div. Ct. having refused an application for an order nisi for a mandamus to the compensation authority to hear & determine the application for the renewal according to law, on the ground that there was evidence of bias on the part of W. in dealing with the application, the Ct. of Appeal granted the application & W. filed an affidavit in which he stated that having regard to the evidence against the renewal of the license he considered & meant when he wrote the letter that he would have been a traitor to his position as a magistrate if he had voted in favour of the renewal, & further that the word "position" in his letter had no reference to his office in the Order of Rechabites:—Held: the circumstances were such as to make bias on the part of W. so probable that he ought not to have taken part in the case, & the order for a mandamus should therefore be made absolute.—*R. v. The proceedings were taken by the council of the Incorporated Law Society, who alone had power to direct prosecutions, ordinary members having no control over the proceedings of the society. On the argument of an order nisi for a certiorari to quash the conviction:—Held: the circumstances did not show any probability of bias on the part of the magistrate, he was not disqualified by his membership of the Incorporated Law Society, either as having a pecuniary interest in the proceedings, or as being a prosecutor, & therefore he was justified in adjudicating.—*R. v. C. Effect of Presence of Interested Justices.

132. Whether decision invalidated—Magistrate taking no part in decision.]—The mere presence on the bench of an interested magistrate during part of the hearing of an appeal is not sufficient ground for setting aside an order of sessions made on such hearing, if it be expressly shown that he took no part in the hearing, came into ct. for a different purpose, & did not in any way influence the decision.—R. v. LONDON JJ. (1852), 18 Q. B. 421; 16 J. P. 297; 118 E. R. 159.

133. ———.]—Upon the trial of a parish appeal F., one of the justices, who was a rated inhabitant of applt. parish, was on the bench during the hearing, & in the course of the proceedings referred the chairman of the quarter sessions to some of the documents put in evidence. Upon an observation being made that he was a party interested, F. stated that he should take no part in the decision, but he remained in ct. until the final decision, which was in favour of appls. It was sworn that he did not vote or give any opinion upon the question at issue, nor did he influence the decision of the other justices present, & that if he had not believed that the parties were satisfied with his assurance that he would take no part, he would have retired from the ct. during the trial:—Held: under the above circumstances, the order of Sessions was invalid by reason of the presence of the interested justice.—R. v. SUFFOLK JJ. (1852), 18 Q. B. 416; 21 L. J. M. C. 169; 19 L. T. O. S. 107; 16 J. P. 296; 16 Jur. 612; 118 E. R. 156.

Upon a motion for a certiorari to remove the order of sessions into this ct., that the same might be quashed on the above ground, the justice deposed that he had no recollection of being present: but, if so, he took no part in the decision, which latter fact was also deposed by the chairman:—Held: as it was distinctly sworn that he was so present, the ct. was improperly constituted, & the rule was made absolute.—R. v. SURREY JJ. (1855), 26 L. T. O. S. 89; 1 Jur. N. S. 1138; 4 W. R. 86; 19 J. P. Jo. 755.

137. ———.]—On notice of appeal from their refusal to renew or transfer a license, the licensing justices of a petty sessional division sent a circular to all the justices for the county to say that their bench attached so much importance to the case that they had instructed counsel to appear in support of their decision, & hoped it might be convenient to all justices interested in licensing matters to attend the hearing of the appeal. In consequence of receiving this circular a larger number of magistrates than usual attended the hearing. Several justices from the division in question, some of whom had participated in the decisions appealed against, were also present in ct. at the hearing of the appeals, but did not sit on the bench during the hearing, & took no part judicially or by discussion in the hearing or determination. The appeals, after a full hearing, were dismissed by a large majority of the votes of the justices taking part in the determination:—Held: the mere receipt of the circular, & attending in consequence at the hearing, did not show that the minds of the justices deciding the appeals must necessarily have been biased in favour of supporting the decision of the licensing justices, & there was no reason to issue a mandamus to the quarter sessions to rehear the appeals.—R. v. LONDON JJ., Ex p. KERFOOT (1896), 60 J. P. 726; 45 W. R. 58; 13 T. L. R. 2; 41 Sol. Jo. 13, D. C.

The chairman & several of the other justices, including the two justices in question, stated on affidavit that the latter had taken no part in the hearing of the appeal or in influencing or arriving at the decision:—Held: the mere presence on the bench of the two disqualified justices rendered the constitution of the ct. of quarter sessions irregular, & its order must be set aside.—*R. v. Whilst sitting there a note was passed down to him from the bench by the adjudicating justices, on which he wrote & passed back an answer. Deft. was convicted. On a rule nisi for a certiorari to quash the conviction, it being proved that the contents of the note & answer did not have & could not have had any influence on the decision, & other charges against the justice of conduct influencing the decision having broken down on the facts:—Held: the rule must be discharged, but without costs.—*R. v. At the same sitting, however, of the compensation authority, but some time later, the case was reopened, & one of the majority of the justices who had sat at the first hearing gave evidence, but took no part in the adjudication as to the question of the renewal of the license on this second hearing. The justices again refused to renew the license:—Held: how- ever regrettable it might be for a justice to give evidence in the manner above stated, there was nothing in law to render such evidence inadmissible, & as there was evidence upon which the justices could legally arrive at their decision, whether the evidence of the justice was taken into consideration or not, there was nothing in Jud. 147. What amounts to waiver—Interest known to party—Or attorney.]—The surveyor of the roads directed trestles to be put at intervals on either side of the road, on which fresh granite had been laid, to confine the traffic to a particular part of it. A. drove his carriage against the trestles to knock them down, in alleged assertion of a right, he deeming the surveyor to have no power so to put the trestles for this object. One of the trestles was injured, and on a summons against A., under the Malicious Trespass Act, the justices convicted & fined A. 1s. By a local Act the justices were made vestrymen, & so became interested in the property in the trestles & also in the fine:—Held: the justices had jurisdiction to convict; & in order to obtain a certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground of the justices being interested, the party should show on the face of his affidavits that neither he, nor his advocate before the justices, knew of the objection at the time of the hearing.—R. v. ILCHESTER PARISH (1861), 25 J. P. 56.

The affidavits showed that B.'s wife had succeeded to the licensed house, & was tenant for life, but it was a small house without hotel accommodation, & not likely to be injured by the new license being granted:—Held: a mandamus could not be granted because the decision not having been set aside or quashed on certiorari, the case could not be heard again; & if a certiorari were applied for, the affidavit ought to state that the party applying & his solr. did not know at the time that one of the justices was interested.—*R. v. If deft., or his solr., fails to take such objection & is afterwards convicted, he cannot then come to the Div. Ct. & obtain a writ of certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground that one of the justices had an interest in the matter which was before the court of summary jurisdiction. His failure to take the objection is fatal.—R. v. BYLES, Ex p. HOLLIDGE (1912), 108 L. T. 270; 77 J. P. 40; 23 Cox, C. C. 314, D. C.

156. ——— Waiver as to known interest only.]—Where a justice of the peace is shown to have taken an active part in defending an appeal against a decision of which he approves, but to which he was no party, he is disqualified on the ground of probability of bias from taking part in deciding the appeal.

A magistrate, an ex officio member of a board of guardians, took an active part in defending an appeal which a railway co. brought against the decision of an assessment committee in respect of the rating of their property in a particular parish, & voted that the costs of the assessment committee in defending the appeal should be defrayed by his board of guardians. When the appeal came on to be heard at quarter sessions, he mentioned that he was an ex officio member of the board of guardians, & offered to retire from the bench, but did not mention that he had taken an active part in the proceedings connected with the rating of the railway co., or its appeal against the decision of the assessment committee, which was adverse to the co.; & he was allowed to take part in the adjudication on the understanding that he was merely an ex officio guardian, & had in no way interested himself in the subject matter of the appeal. The ct. of quarter sessions made an order affirming the decision of the assessment committee:—Held: the previous conduct of the magistrate showed that he was or was likely to be swayed by a real bias in the matter, & therefore the proceedings of the court of quarter sessions were irregular, & the order of the ct. ought to be quashed.—R. v. CUMBERLAND JJ., Ex p. MIDLAND RY. Co. (1888), 58 L. T. 491; 52 J. P. 502; 4 T. L. R. 294, D. C.

157. Effect of waiver on power of justice.]—Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 58, enacts that any question as to damage done to a road by a railway co. in making the railway, or as to the repair thereof by them, shall be referred to the determination of two justices; & such justices may direct such repairs to be made in the state of such road, in respect of the damage done by the co., & within such period as they think reasonable, & may impose on the co., for not carrying into effect such repairs, any penalty not exceeding £5 per day as to such justices shall seem just. Sect. 3 enacts that the word "justice" shall mean justice of the peace acting for the county, city, borough, etc., or place where the matter requiring the cognisance of any such justice shall arise, & who shall not be interested in the matter:—Held: (1) the definition in sect. 3 did not render a justice of the peace who was interested incompetent to act if the party knowing that he was interested assented to his acting. (2) Semble: the objection to one of the justices on the ground of interest having been waived on the hearing of the original information, he might act in enforcing an order then made.—*WAKEFIELD LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH v. SECT. 3.—WHAT OFFICES MAGISTRATE MAY HOLD.

160. County treasurer.]—The ground upon which it has been held, that the acceptance of a second office, incompatible with one already held, vacates the first, is an implied surrender on the part of the appointee, & an acceptance by the person or body appointing, of such surrender. An officer, therefore, cannot avoid his office, by accepting another incompatible with it, unless his office be such as he could determine by his or if the concurrence of another is required, unless the power to accept the surrender or remove from the old office, concur in the new appointment. Deft., an alderman & justice of the peace, by virtue of his office, of the city of Norwich & county of the same city, was appointed by the mayor & aldermen, in sessions assembled, to be treasurer of the city & county thereof; by County Rates Acts 1738 (c. 29) & 1814 (c. 51), the treasurer is to give security to the justices at sessions, who are to fix his salary, to admit, to allow, & to pass his accounts; & the offices were admitted to be incompatible:—Held: (1) as the mayor & aldermen, when they appointed him treasurer were acting as justices, & not in their corporate capacity deft. did not, by accepting the office of treasurer, vacate that of alderman; although, qu.: if he fill the former office in conjunction with the latter, if it would not be ground of amotion; (2) was incapable of being appointed; & no Justice of Peace was capable within his district.—*R. v. #### F. Matters Concerning Bail.

218. Improperly refusing bail.]—R. v. BADGER, No. 203, ante.

219. Taking improper bail.]—A justice of Surrey committed a man on suspicion of stealing a mare, & bound over the owner to prosecute. Afterwards upon examining two other persons, he admitted the party to bail. The prosecutor appeared at the assizes, & found a bill, but the party accused did not appear. The ct. granted an information against the justice, declaring they should not have bailed the man themselves.—R. v. CLARKE (1744), 2 Stra. 1216; 93 E. R. 1140.

return to a mandamus, unless the return is corruptly & wilfully false.

Where justices had made a false return to a mandamus to appoint overseers for a township, & the ct. had thereupon granted a rule nisi for a criminal information; & on showing cause against that rule, contradictory facts were disclosed, which were directed to be tried by an issue, & after an issue had been prepared & delivered, the justices had abandoned the issue, & obtained a judge's order for staying proceedings without prejudice to the question of costs, the ct. ordered the justices to pay the prosecutor the costs of preparing & delivering the issue.—R. v. LANCASHIRE JJ. (1822), 1 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 485; 1 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 127.

233. Disobedience to mandamus.]—An information may be filed against justices of the peace for disobedience to a mandamus.—R. v. CORBETT & COULSON (1756), Say. 267; 96 E. R. 875.

K. Failure to Suppress Riot.

234. Information granted.]—Magistrates are not criminally answerable for not having called out special constables, & compelled them to act pursuant to Special Constables Act, 1831 (c. 41), unless it be proved that information was laid before them on oath, of a riot, etc., having occurred or being expected.

There is no doubt in point of law, that a public officer guilty of a criminal neglect in the discharge of his duty is liable to an indictment or information (LITTLEDALE, J.).—R. v. PINNEY (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 947; 5 C. & P. 254; 3 State Tr. N. S. 11; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 307; 110 E. R. 349.

237. Refusal to tender oath.]—R. v. NEWTON (1721), 1 Stra. 413; 93 E. R. 604.

238. Tendering illegal oath.]—R. v. ROBE (1729), 1 Barn. K. B. 263; 94 E. R. 179.

239. Making improper return of conviction.]—ANON. (1731), 2 Barn. K. B. 8; 94 E. R. 322.

240. Making improper order of removal.]—Information granted against a justice of peace because he alone took an examination in order to make an order of removal, & upon a complaint not stating that the person to be removed was likely to become chargeable; also against two other justices for signing the order without examination, & without summoning the party & demanding security.—R. v. WYKES (1738), Andr. 238; 2 Stra. 1092; 95 E. R. 379.

241. —.]—An information granted against a justice of the peace for adding another justice's name to an order of removal.—R. v. HOWARD (1739), 7 Mod. Rep. 307; 87 E. R. 1258.

242. Acting from political motives.]—An information granted against justices, etc., refusing to relieve burgesses appealing against a poor's rate.—R. v. PHELPS (1757), 2 Keny. 570; 96 E. R. 1282.

243. —.]—R. v. COZENS (1780), 2 Doug. K. B. 426; 99 E. R. 273.

244. Interfering with order of another magistrate.]—A commitment by a justice of peace for a time certain, as for fourteen days, under Justices Commitment Act, 1744 (c. 5), is a commitment in execution, & the party is not entitled to be bailed. If another magistrate, on illegal & corrupt motives, discharge a person so committed, the ct. will grant an information against him. The ct., on granting an information, will not require the prosecutor to give security for the costs, in case deft. should be acquitted beyond the extent of the recognisance in £20 required by 4 Will. & Mar. c. 18, s. 2.—R. v. BROOKE (1788), 2 Term Rep. 190; 100 E. R. 103.

SUB-SECT. 5.—PROCEDURE.

A. In General.

249. Exculpatory affidavit from applicant.]—The ct. will not grant an information against a magistrate for having improperly convicted a person, unless the party complaining makes an exculpatory affidavit denying the fact.—R. v. WEBSTER (1789), 3 Term Rep. 388; 100 E. R. 636.

250. Refused where action pending.]—An information against a justice of peace refused till an action for the same offence is discontinued.—R. v. FIELDING (1759), 2 Keny. 386; 2 Burr. 719; 96 E. R. 1219.

Annotation:—Mentd. Caddy v. Barlow (1827), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 275.

B. Time for Application.

See, generally, CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. XIV., p. 352, No. 3710.

251. During term when offence committed.]—The ct. will grant a rule nisi for a criminal information at the end of a term against a magistrate for malpractices during the term; but not for any misconduct before the term.—R. v. SMITH (1796), 7 Term Rep. 80; 101 E. R. 865.

252. In second term after commission of offence—No intervening assize.]—A criminal information may be moved for against magistrates for misconduct in the execution of their offices in the second term after the offence committed, there being no intervening assizes.—R. v. HARRIES (1811), 13 East, 270; 104 E. R. 374.

253. — In time for hearing during term.]—The ct. will not grant a rule nisi for a criminal information against a magistrate so late in the second term after the imputed offence, as to preclude him from the opportunity of showing cause against it in the same term.—R. v. MARSHALL (1811), 13 East, 322; 104 E. R. 394.

254. — — —.]—R. v. SAUNDERS, No. 204, ante.

255. More than a year after commission of offence—Circumstances not known to prosecutor till just before application.]—Where the facts tending to criminate a magistrate took place twelve months before the application to the ct., they refused to grant a criminal information, although the prosecutor, in order to excuse the delay, stated that the facts had not come to his knowledge till very shortly previous to the application.—R. v. BISHOP (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 612; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 65; 106 E. R. 1314.

C. Notice of Application.

256. Necessity for.]—A party who applies to the ct. for a criminal information against deft. for breach of duty as a magistrate as well as an individual, must, before motion give notice to deft. of his intended application.—R. v. HEMING (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 666; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 477; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 445; 3 L. J. M. C. 3; 110 E. R. 936.

257. Sufficiency of notice.]—R. v. SHREWSBURY JJ. (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 272; 94 E. R. 195.

258. Length of notice required to be given—Six days.]—Ex p. FENTIMAN, No. 201, ante.

259. — — —.]—Notice of an application for a criminal information against a magistrate was served on Apr. 13, two days before Easter Term, & stated that the application would be made in Easter Term. A second notice was served on Apr. 27, which stated that the application would be made on May 2. Counsel for deft. objected that six days' previous notice of the intended motion had not been given, but offered to waive the objection:—Held: (1) the notice of an intended motion for Easter Term, dated Apr. 13, was bad because within two days of the term, & the second notice could not be engrafted on it; (2) the ct. would not permit such an objection to be waived.—Re PYRKE (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 253; sub nom. R. v. PYRKE, 7 J. P. 515.

274. — —.]—All judicial acts by persons whose authority is limited as to locality must, on the face of them, purport to be done within the locality. The act of justices in determining on the propriety of making an order to bind a parish apprentice, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 139, is judicial; but, on execution of the indenture, their allowance, under sect. 1, in pursuance of the order previously made, is not a judicial act, & consequently need not purport to be executed within the jurisdiction of the justices signing it. Where the justices act, under sect. 2, for the place in which the child is to serve, they determine on the propriety at the time of allowance; & consequently an allowance under sect. 2 is a judicial act, & must, on the face of it, purport to be executed within the jurisdiction of the justices signing.—R. v. 275. Whether jurisdiction extends to all petty sessional divisions in county—Indictable offences.]—Defts. were indicted at the Cambridgeshire quarter sessions for conspiracy. The offence with which defts. were charged was committed in the petty sessional division of Bottisham, in the above county, but they were arrested outside the county upon a warrant, issued by a justice for the petty sessional division of Cambridge, commanding the constables to apprehend defts. & take them before the justice who signed the warrant, or other justices at Bottisham. Defts. were apprehended in pursuance of the warrant, brought before a justice for the Cambridge petty sessional division, & remanded to Chesterton, where the petty sessions for that division were usually held. At the hearing before the justices at Chesterton it was objected that they had no jurisdiction to hear a case arising in another petty sessional division. The justices overruled the objection, & committed defts. for trial. The sessions having refused to quash the indictment under Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (c. 17), upon the same objection, the trial was proceeded with & defts. convicted:—Held: the conviction was right, inasmuch as it was competent for the Justices sitting at the Cambridge petty sessional division to hear & send for trial a case arising within another petty sessional division of the same county, & therefore Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (c. 17), had no application.—R. v. 281. RICHARDS (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 386; 15 J. P. Jo. 64.

283. Exercise of powers of two justices of the peace.]—A police magistrate sitting alone has jurisdiction under Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839 (c. 71), s. 14, to do any act which would otherwise require two justices.

T., a pauper, was bound apprentice by the parish of A., which is within the city & liberty of Westminster, into the parish of St. George, Bloomsbury, in the county of Middlesex. Justices of the peace for the county of Middlesex have concurrent jurisdiction, & usually act within the city & liberty of Westminster. By Parish Apprentices Act, 1816 (c. 139), s. 2, where the binding of an apprentice is into a different county or jurisdiction from that in which the binding parish is situate, the indenture is to be allowed by two justices of each jurisdiction; & by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 3, indentures for binding parish apprentices within any city, etc., are to be allowed by two justices, one acting for & on behalf of the city, etc., within the limits of which the apprentice is bound. By Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1838 (c. 71), s. 14, any one police magistrate may do at any police ct. any act which by any law then in force, or by any law not containing an express enactment to the contrary thereafter to be made, was or should be directed to be done by more than one justice:—Held: the indenture of apprenticeship had been properly allowed by a single police magistrate sitting at his ct. within the metropolitan police district, he being a justice of the peace for the city & liberty of Westminster & county of Middlesex.—R. v. ST. GEORGE'S, BLOOMSBURY (INHABITANTS) (1851), 16 Q. B. 1005; 4 New Sess. Cas. 669; 20 L. J. M. C. 200; 17 L. T. O. S. 92; 15 J. P. 466; 15 Jur. 799; 117 E. R. 1166.

P. being a subject, etc., was found on the high seas, within one hundred leagues of the coast of the United Kingdom, to wit, the coast of the county of Kent, on board a vessel there, from which part of the cargo had been thrown overboard, to prevent seizure:—Held: (1) as prima facie the magistrates had no jurisdiction upon the high seas, the warrant did not show jurisdiction, as it did not sufficiently disclose the circumstances from which alone jurisdiction was given to the magistrates; (2) the offences under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 53, s. 77, not being repealed by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 13, s. 2, the words “any two justices” in that sect. did not give jurisdiction to all justices in the United Kingdom, without reference to the limits of their commission, & it was not always enough to follow the form of warrant given in the Act.—Re PEERLESS (1841), 1 Q. 295. — Holding of sessions at various places within division—Will not create new division.]—The fact of petty sessions for a division of a county having been usually held at several places within the limits of that division does not constitute such places separate petty sessional divisions under Bastardy Act, 1845 (c. 10), s. 10.—R. v. WHITTLES (1849), 13 Q. B. 248; 3 New Mag. Cas. 102; 3 New Sess. Cas. 397; 18 L. J. M. C. 96; 12 L. T. O. S. 447; 13 J. P. 365; 13 Jur. 403; 116 E. R. 1258.

296. Petty sessional court house—What is.]—In a borough which had no separate commission of the peace the mayor & a county justice used to sit at the town hall, where they held petty & special sessions. Since Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 20, petty sessions had been held at the county hall only, but latterly, since Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1884 (c. 43), the justices again sat in the town hall:—Held: the town hall was a petty sessional court house within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 20, being a place where justices were accustomed to assemble.—JONES v. JONES (1886), 51 J. P. 198.

297. — Cost of providing.]—A local Act passed in 1843 provided for the appointment of a stipendiary justice for a certain district & empowered quarter sessions of the county to provide "a suitable office or offices for transacting the magisterial business of the district included within the limits of this Act." The salary of the justice & the expenses of providing the office or offices were to be paid out of rates levied under the Act upon the district. In 1845 an office was provided which was used as a petty sessional court house. By subsequent local Acts of 1868 & 1894 the district was extended, & the justice was required to sit in different parts of the added areas, the powers of the Act of 1843 being applied to the whole district:—Held: the words "office or offices" in the Act of 1843 included cts. for the justice to act in, & the enactment for the provision of such cts. was not impliedly repealed by Petty Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 18); &, therefore, the cost of providing additional petty sessional court houses required for the district was chargeable upon the district within the limits of the local Acts & not upon the county generally.—R. v. HUNTON, Ex p. GLAMORGANSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL (1904), 68 J. P. 453; 2 L. G. R. 917, C. A.

298. General nature of special sessions.]—Justices sitting in special petty sessions under Juries Act, 1825 (c. 50), s. 10, for revising the lists of jurors, are not a ct. of summary jurisdiction within Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 13 (11), & have no power under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33, or otherwise to state a special case for the opinion of the High Ct. upon the application of a person aggrieved by their decision.

It more nearly resembles the proceedings of a public authority, who are allowed to act on their own knowledge without being bound & fettered by the ordinary rules of evidence; &, in my opinion the provisions of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), are not sufficient to justify us in holding that justices, when acting under Juries Act, 1825 (c. 22), are a ct. of summary jurisdiction with power to state a special case (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—*HAGMAIER v. 299. Order for division of county—Whether appeal lies.]—Where an order for altering the arrangement of the parishes, etc., of any county for the purpose of holding special sessions has been made under Division of Counties Act, 1828 (c. 43), ss. 2, 4, there is no appeal against it, sects. 8 & 9 of that Act applying to orders made under the authority of sect. 7 only.—R. v. DERBYSHIRE JJ. (1832), 1 Dowl. 386.

300. Order of special sessions—Need not show jurisdiction on its face.]—Where an order made by three justices of a petty sessional division of a county, on the county treasurer, for the payment of the expenses of special constables, who had been called out & had served in such division, under Special Constables Act, 1831 (c. 41), has been obeyed by the treasurer, & the expenses have been incurred, the money paid, & the item allowed in his accounts, the ct. will not issue the writ of certiorari for the purpose of quashing the order, upon grounds affecting the regularity of the proceedings in respect of the appointment of the constables, or the making of the order. Semble: such an order is in the nature of a direction to the officer of the justices, & need not show on the face of it that the justices signing it had jurisdiction to make it.—*R. v. ### SECT. 2.—OFFENCES SUMMARILY PUNISHABLE.

See Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 20, Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 13.

301. Creature of statute.]—All summary jurisdiction is the creature of statute (BLACKBURN, J.).—WHITE v. FEAST (1872), as reported in L. R. 7 Q. B. 353; 26 L. T. 611; 36 J. P. 436; sub nom. R. v. NORFOLK JJ., WHITE v. FEAST, 20 W. R. 382.

302. — Offence must be strictly within statute.]—4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 1, does not apply where the offence charged amounts to a felony. Therefore where deft. under that statute was convicted by two justices, “for that he the said W. did contract with T., as a servant in husbandry, & hath, in his said service & employment, been guilty of divers misdemeanours, in that he, the said W. did, on etc., purloin a quantity of barley to give to the horses under his care, contrary to the express commands of the said T.:—Held: the offence charged here was a felony irrespective of the contract of service, & therefore a conviction under the statute was invalid.

Justices should never convict summarily without all the necessary statutable preliminaries being complied with. In a case of this sort a summary conviction cannot be allowed merely because deft. has been guilty of a misdemeanour whilst he remained in the service, but it should appear that the misdemeanour consisted of some misconduct which was a violation of his contract of service; it is therefore important that the terms of the contract should be stated (COLERIDGE, J.).—Re JACKLIN (1844), 1 New Sess. ### SECT. 3.—JURISDICTION IN CIVIL MATTERS.

309. Cannot be conferred by consent.—13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 48, which requires the accounts of the surveyors of highways to be laid before one justice, & on his refusal to allow them, before the justices at petty sessions, gives no original jurisdiction over the accounts to the justices at petty sessions, even if by consent of all parties they be laid before them.

The Act of Parliament gives no original jurisdiction whatever to the justices at petty sessions. How can we decide that mere consent of parties shall give a jurisdiction which is withheld by Act of Parliament? The safe course will certainly be to hold that consent cannot have any such effect (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—R. v. GOODENOUGH (1835), 2 Ad. & El. 463; 111 E. R. 179; sub nom. *R. v. 321. ——— Goods not subject matter of charge.]—An accused person, having been arrested by a police constable, was taken to a police station, where she was searched, & a sum of £108 was found upon her & taken possession of by the police. In the charge sheet kept at the police station the following charge against her was entered: “Fraudulently obtaining on the 10th instant the sum of 5s. from Miss M., & also the sum of 5s. from Miss B., by representing that she, the prisoner, was collecting subscriptions for the children’s treat of St. Peter’s, Eaton Square, & further with endeavouring to procure charitable contributions by false pretences.” On the following day she was brought before a metropolitan police magistrate who had the charge sheet before him, & convicted her summarily in respect of the two first offences specified therein, & sentenced her to two consecutive terms of imprisonment. At the hearing, in addition to Miss M. & Miss B., three other ladies were called who proved that she had obtained from them various small sums amounting to about £2 5s. by making similar fraudulent representations:—Held: upon those facts, the money found upon the prisoner was not money “charged” before the magistrate to be stolen or fraudulently obtained within Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839 (c. 71), s. 29, & therefore he had, after the conviction, no jurisdiction to make an order under that sect. for the delivery to her of the whole of the £108 by the constable in whose custody it had remained.—*R. v. 322. Charge of unlawful possession of goods—Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839 (c. 71), s. 24—Does not apply to possession in house or shop.]—(1) Under above sect. a person may be brought before a metropolitan police magistrate, charged with having in his possession or conveying anything suspected of being stolen or unlawfully obtained; & by Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, c. 47, s. 66, a constable may stop, search, & detain any person reasonably suspected of having or conveying anything stolen or unlawfully obtained:—Held: the power of a magistrate under these enactments extended only to persons who were at the time conveying the property, i.e., to street offences, & not to persons who might have such property in a house or shop; in order to give the magistrate jurisdiction, it is not necessary that the party be brought before him in custody of a constable.

328. Where sitting with a justice of the peace—Adjudication on difference of opinion.—Appct. was summoned before a ct. of summary jurisdiction for a contravention of the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872 (c. 93). The ct. consisted of the stipendiary magistrate for the district & another justice of the peace. At the conclusion of the evidence the second justice, in a private discussion of the case with the stipendiary magistrate, said that the evidence was not in his view such as would justify a conviction. The stipendiary magistrate, being satisfied that the case was fully made out against appct., stated his view to the second justice & added the following words: "I must then take upon myself the burden of adjudicating in this case alone." The second justice said "Very well," whereupon the stipendiary magistrate ordered appct. to pay a fine & costs, adding that he alone was responsible for the decision & that the second justice was not in any way a party thereto:—Held: as the stipendiary magistrate had jurisdiction to decide the case by himself, & as what took place amounted to a withdrawal by the second justice from taking any part in the decision, the conviction of appct. by the stipendiary magistrate alone was valid.—R. v. THOMAS, Ex p. O'HARE, [1914] 1 K. B. 32; 83 L. J. K. B. 351; 109 L. T. 929; 78 J. P. 55; 23 Cox, C. C. 687.

SECT. 3.—SUMMARY OFFENCES TRIABLE ON INDICTMENT—RIGHT TO TRIAL BY JURY.

See, now, Criminal Justice Act, 1925 (c. 86), s. 24 (2).

332. Objection by accused to summary trial—Conspiracy & Protection of Property Act, 1875 (c. 86), s. 9.]—By above sect., where a person is accused before a ct. of summary jurisdiction of an offence made punishable by the Act for which a penalty amounting to £20 or imprisonment, is imposed, the accused may, on appearing before the ct. of summary jurisdiction, declare that he objects to being tried for such offence by a ct. of summary jurisdiction, & thereupon the ct. of summary jurisdiction may deal with the case in all respects as if the accused were charged with an indictable offence & not an offence punishable on summary conviction, & the offence may be prosecuted on indictment accordingly:—Held: the effect of above sect. is that a person accused of an offence under sect. 7 before a ct. of summary jurisdiction, who, on appearing before that ct., declares that he objects to being tried by that ct., has a right to have the case dealt with as if he were charged with an indictable offence & not an offence punishable on summary conviction, & to have the offence prosecuted on indictment accordingly; & in the phrases “thereupon the ct. of summary jurisdiction may deal with the case in all respects as if the accused were charged with an indictable offence” & “the offence may be prosecuted on indictment” the word “may” is an enabling word empowering the ct. of summary jurisdiction to give effect to the right of the accused, which accordingly that ct. is bound to do; & upon a declaration of objection being duly made under above sect. the ct. of summary jurisdiction has no jurisdiction to try the case.—R. v. MITCHELL, ETC., CLITHEROE JJ., Ex p. LIVESSEY, [1913] 1 K. B. 561; 82 L. J. K. B. 153; 108 L. T. 76; 77 J. P. 148; 29 T. L. R. 157; 23 Cox, C. C. 273, D. C.

333. Right to trial by jury—Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17 (1)—Accused must be informed of right.]—R. v. COCKSHOT, No. 345, post.

334. ———.]—Deft., if charged with an offence within above sect., must be informed by the ct. of summary jurisdiction of his right to be tried by a jury. It is not sufficient that he has heard deft. in a previous case, charged with a similar offence arising out of the same subject-matter, informed of his right to be so tried, & he cannot, under these circumstances, be held to have waived his right to be informed by the ct., when his case came on, of his right to be tried by a jury.—HARKER v. HOPKINS (1903), 67 J. P. 428.

335. ——— Accused need not be informed of loss of right to appeal.]—On an information against applt., who was eighteen years of age, for indecently assaulting a girl under the age of thirteen years, he was asked by the justices, before the case was gone into, whether he desired to be tried by a jury, but he was not informed that if he consented to be dealt with summarily he would thereby lose his right of appeal. No public notice had been given of days appointed by the justices under above Act, s. 20 (8), for the trial of indictable offences. The justices convicted applt.:—Held: the conviction must be quashed as the hearing did not take place on a day of which public notice had been given as having been appointed for the trial of indictable offences.

It is not necessary for the justices, when they ask deft. whether he consents to be dealt with summarily, to inform him that he thereby loses his right of appeal (AVORY, J.).—WALKER v. MORGAN (1912), 76 J. P. 325, D. C.

337. ———.]—By above sect., a person when charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with an offence in respect of the commission of which an offender is liable on summary conviction to be imprisoned for a term exceeding three months, may claim to be tried by a jury:—Held: the offence of night poaching, whereby the person charged is liable under Night Poaching Act, 1828 (c. 69), to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, & at the expiration of that period to a further imprisonment of six months in case he fail to find sureties for his not so offending again, is not within above Act so as to enable the person charged to be tried by a jury.—*WILLIAMS v. 340. ——— Not open to incorrigible rogue—Vagrancy Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 5.]—Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17 (1) does not apply to incorrigible rogues committed under Vagrancy Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 5; it only applies to persons “liable on summary conviction to be imprisoned for a term exceeding three months.” Persons liable to be committed as incorrigible rogues cannot claim to be tried by a jury.—*R. v. 342. — Trial as for first offence—Effect of previous conviction.]—Deft. was charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with keeping a brothel, under Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (c. 69), s. 13 for which offence she was convicted, & became thereby liable to a term of imprisonment not exceeding three months. Before sentence a constable reported to the bench a previous conviction for the like offence. Upon a second conviction she would have been liable to imprisonment not exceeding four months. Under above Act, s. 17, a person charged with any offence for which imprisonment exceeding three months may be imposed is entitled to the option of committal for trial by a jury. Deft. was given no opportunity of exercising any such option. The justices sentenced her to a fine of £20 or, in default, to imprisonment for two months:—Held: deft. had never been charged with any offence for which imprisonment exceeding three months could be imposed, the justices had in effect treated the charge as for a first offence, & therefore, she was never entitled to claim a trial by jury, nor was there any ground for quashing the conviction.—R. v. FOWLER, Ex p. WALTERS (1894), 64 L. J. M. C. 9; 15 R. 265, D. C.

343. — A woman was charged before justices with an offence, in respect of which, if it was a first offence, she was liable on summary conviction to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three months. In the course of the hearing evidence was given by the prosecution that deft. had been previously convicted of a like offence, & thereupon she became liable on conviction to be imprisoned for a term exceeding three months. The justices, without giving her the option prescribed by above sect., convicted deft. & sentenced her to three months' imprisonment:—Held: the justices had no jurisdiction to treat the case as one of a first offence; the words "before the charge is gone into" mean in such a case "before the charge in its altered character is proceeded with;" & as the justices had not, upon the evidence of the previous conviction being given, asked deft. if she wished to be tried by a jury, the conviction was bad.—*R. v. 344. — Election of accused—Offence punishable only on summary conviction.]—

Appls. were convicted on indictment under Perjury Act, 1911 (c. 6), s. 5 (b), of knowingly & wilfully making statements false in material particulars in returns of income tax. By the proviso to Perjury Act, 1911 (c. 6), s. 16 (3), where the making a false statement is by any Act passed before the commencement of the Perjury Act, 1911 (c. 6), made punishable only on summary conviction, it shall remain so punishable. By Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 94, such offence is made punishable on summary conviction & subject to imprisonment not exceeding six months:—Held: as the penalty under Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8), s. 94, exceeded three months' imprisonment an offender, under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17 (1), might elect to be tried on indictment, & consequently the offence was not punishable "only" on summary conviction, & the conviction of appls. was valid.—R. v. BRADBURY, R. v. EDLIN, [1921] 1 K. B. 562; 90 L. J. K. B. 133; 125 L. T. 31; 85 J. P. 128; 37 T. L. R. 88; 26 Cox, C. C. 732; 15 Cr. App. Rep. 76, C. C. A.

Caution to be given to accused—Need not be stated in conviction.]—(1) Where a person appears before a ct. of summary jurisdiction, charged with an offence to which Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, applies, the ct. ought, in pursuance of sub-sect. 2, to inform him of his right to be tried by a jury before he pleads to the charge. If he be not informed of that right & after the charge has been gone into, pleads guilty, the conviction is bad. Semble: it is immaterial whether or not he knew of his right to be tried by a jury, & immaterial whether or not the ct. knew, before the proceedings commenced, that he meant to plead guilty in the course of the case.

diction, who thereupon issued his warrant, & the person was taken into custody, & afterwards brought his action against the magistrate for false imprisonment. At the trial the summons was put in evidence, & the warrant, but not the information:—Held: the evidence was not sufficient, & the magistrate must put in the information to justify his warrant for apprehension, as, without a proper information, the magistrate would not be justified in issuing his warrant.—*STEVENS v. Oath required by statute.]—An information under Game Act, 1831 (c. 32), s. 30 & under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 9, was stated to be by M. a credible witness, & contained the following allegation in the body of it: “& the said information having also been verified on the oath of A. another credible witness.” The jurat was, “exhibited by M. & sworn before me,” etc. It was signed by M. & A. It was proved by parol evidence, that A. swore to the charge at the time the information was laid, but there was no separate deposition by A. as to the charge. The charge was afterwards heard before two magistrates, when deft. gave evidence on which he was indicted for perjury:—Held: there did not appear to have been any sufficient deposition to the charge at the time the information was laid, therefore deft. was entitled to be acquitted, on the ground that the magistrates who heard the charge acted without jurisdiction.

All informations should show that the subject matter of complaint came within the jurisdiction of the magistrates. The statute requires that the truth of the charge shall be deposed to on the oath of some credible witness. There appears in this information nothing deposed to on oath. There are the words “verified on oath,” which would be satisfied by the fact, that M. said something (WILLIAMS, J.).—R. v. SCOTTON (1844), 5 Q. B. 493; 1 Dav. & Mer. 501; 1 New Sess. Cas.

362. Necessity for writing.]—The Act [Constables Protection Act, 1750 (c. 44)] does not protect justices for an act done by pretence of office: but where an act is done informally, where, in another manner, it might have been legally done, there, in consideration that country gentlemen are generally in the office that have no emolument, at least the best of them, therefore, if they do what by law they are empowered to do, & might have done another way, the Act protects them from suffering for the mere informality. On complaint, a justice may commit; but in strict form, the complaint should be in writing: on his own view, he may commit without complaint, if he has reason to apprehend the peace will be broken, though not actually broken (LORD MANSFIELD, C.J.).—BROOKSHAW v. being "drunk & incapable of taking care of herself" in a highway. She was further charged with having been convicted of a similar offence three times during the preceding twelve months, one of these convictions being for having been "drunk & disorderly." She was fined, & in default of payment was committed to prison for thirty days. In a further commitment she was committed to prison for another sixty days for failure to comply with an order directing her to enter into a recognisance to keep the peace. On an application by D. for a writ of habeas corpus directed to the governor of the prison:—Held: (1) D. had been rightly convicted of an offence under sect. 12, although the word, "found" did not appear on her charge sheet, since the natural inference from the language of the charge sheet was that she had been "found" drunk within the meaning of the sect. & since it is not strictly necessary for the exact language of the Act of Parliament under which a person is charged to be used in the charge sheet charging such person, if the words used are sufficient to embody the elements of the offence; (2) the charge alleging previous convictions did not constitute a separate offence, but was only matter of aggravation in respect of the offence under sect. 12; (3) the conviction of being "drunk & disorderly" was a "previous conviction" within the meaning of sect. 12; & (4) the two commitments, although in two documents in fact constituted one warrant of commitment.—*R. v. 395. When matter of complaint complete—Interpretation of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 11.]—I think the object of Jervis's Act [above Act] is to fix a time within which proceedings must be taken to recover expenses where no time was limited by statutory authority, & it is very reasonable there should be some limit to such proceedings. I take the meaning of that Act to be that the claim should be enforced within six months after the complete matter of complaint arose. Now according to Public Health & Local Government Acts three months were given to debt. after notice of the sum claimed in order that he might dispute the amount. So long as the three months ran payment of his proportion could not be enforced, for it was not then conclusively fixed. Therefore, if we were to hold that those three months were to count as part of the six months given by Jervis's Act we should place this class of cases on a very different footing from all other similar cases under other Acts. It is clear that the debt was not absolutely due till the end of the three months; debt. was not bound to obey the notice to pay till that time, & payment could not till then be enforced. Therefore it is only doing justice to the Public Health Acts, & giving effect to Jervis's Act, to say that the time of limitation began at the end of the three months. The justices, therefore, were wrong in holding otherwise (COCKBURN, C.J.).—JACOMB v. DODGSON (1863), 3 B. & S. 461; 32 L. J. M. C. 113; 7 L. T. 674; 27 J. P. 548; 9 Jur. N. S. 848; 11 W. 405. ———.]—Where the interests of any person are to be affected by an order of justices, it is essential to the validity of such order that he should have an opportunity afforded him of being heard before the order is made; & the same rule applies, although the Act of Parliament under which the order is made does not require any previous summons.

Where an order of justices was made under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), s. 27, directing the guardians of a union to administer relief to a pauper unable to work, without requiring her to reside in the workhouse:—Held: a good return to a mandamus, that neither the guardians nor the churchwardens of the parish from which it was alleged that the pauper is entitled to relief had been summoned to attend, or were present at the hearing of the complaint or the making of the order.—R. v. 406. ———.]—Deft. was indicted for perjury alleged to have been committed by him on the hearing before justices of a summons charging him with being the father of an illegitimate child:—Held: to support the indictment, it was necessary to give evidence of the charge made by the mother, either by production of the original order made thereon, or by giving secondary evidence of the summons after notice to deft. to produce it; & in the absence of such notice, it was not sufficient to produce the minutes of the proceedings by the clerk to the justices, those minutes being of no greater authority than the notes of a shorthand writer.

The statute provides that, upon complaint by the mother, the justice shall have power to summon the putative father before him, & upon the appearance of the person so summoned, or upon proof of the service of such summons to hear & adjudicate upon the case. A summons is therefore necessary to give the magistrates jurisdiction (WIGHTMAN, J.).—R. v. NEWALL (1852), 19 L. T. O. S. 34; 6 Cox, C. C. 21.

407. Duty of justices to issue—Before granting warrant of apprehension—Non-payment of money.]

It is the general duty of magistrates . . . where the complaint is merely for non-payment of money to issue a summons in the first instance before they grant a warrant of apprehension, & it requires very strong words to take away the necessity of the summons (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—R. v. MARTYR (1810), 13 East, 55; 104 E. R. 287.

Justices, being applied to for such warrant, refused to grant it, but stated that they would do so if a proper information were sworn, & the party summoned before them. The ct. refused a mandamus to compel the justices to issue a warrant without summoning the party. 410. Who may issue—Justice not receiving complaint.]—A complaint having been made to two justices of a borough against applt. for an offence under Food & Drugs Acts, 1875 (c. 63), & 1879 (c. 30), a summons was signed & issued by another justice, who had not heard the complaint, & was served on applt. Applt. thereupon appeared before the stipendiary magistrate of the borough, but objected that the summons was invalid & the magistrate had no jurisdiction to hear the case. The magistrate being of opinion that the defect, if any, in the summons was cured by the appearance of applt. heard the case & convicted him:—Held: (1) the summons, having been signed & issued by a justice who had not heard the complaint was invalid; (2) the defect was not cured by the appearance of applt., as he appeared under protest; (3) the provisions of Food & Drugs Act, 1879 (c. 30), s. 10, were imperative, & not merely directory, & as no summons had been duly served in accordance with them the magistrate had no jurisdiction, & the conviction was wrong.—*DIXON v. —When a justice has refused to issue a summons upon complaint, other justices may subsequently refuse to hear an information, & take the recognisances of prosecutor to prosecute in the same matter. Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (c. 17), does not apply to such proceedings unless a summons or a warrant has been granted upon which it can take effect. Two police officers charged G., a publican, with supplying with liquor three men whom they alleged to be intoxicated. The charge was dismissed, & an application was made on behalf of G. to a justice of the peace for summonses for perjury against the policeman. The summonses were refused. Subsequently an application was made by G. to a bench of magistrates sitting in petty sessions to grant summonses against the policemen, or, in the alternative, to take the recognisances of G. under Vexatious Indictments Act:—Held: the bench were not bound, under the circumstances to hear the information at all, & Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (c. 17), s. 2 did not apply until after a summons or a warrant had been granted.—*R. v. The justices dismissed the summons, on the ground that the complaint had not been made within six months after the commission of the offence, which they considered was not a continuing offence. They offered to state a case, but the matter was allowed to drop. In 1890 the same complainant laid a similar information against the co., when the justices, having regard to their previous decision, considered they had no jurisdiction to go into the matter again, & refused to issue a summons:—Held: instead of declining jurisdiction, the justices should have heard & determined whether, upon the circumstances disclosed, a summons ought to have been issued.—*R. v. him in his absence. Upon Apr. 9, he returned from sea, & was arrested under the conviction:—Held: there was no evidence before the justices that a reasonable time had elapsed between the time of the service of the summons & the day for hearing the summons, & the justices had therefore no jurisdiction to convict. On May 2, C. left his lodgings at N., taking his motor car to C. on his master's business. Before leaving he told his landlady to take in the summons if it came for him. On May 4, the summons, returnable on May 7, was left with his landlady, & on May 7, he was convicted, in his absence & without his knowledge, of an offence under the Act. On May 9, C. returned to N. It appeared that the justices were under the impression that the summons had actually reached C. The ct. made absolute a rule for certiorari to bring up & quash the conviction on the ground that if the justices had known that the summons did not reach C. they might well have formed a different conclusion as to whether there had been a reasonable time between the service & the hearing of the summons.—*R. v. #### E. Withdrawal.

438. Power to withdraw—Necessity for leave of justices—Criminal proceeding.]—The withdrawal of a summons under Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895 (c. 39), has the effect of putting an end to the complaint in respect of which it is issued, & after the withdrawal, no fresh summons can be issued upon the same cause of complaint.

It is to be remembered as a very important element in these cases, that the withdrawal of a summons can only take place by leave of the justices or magistrate; a complainant cannot put an end to a criminal proceeding except by leave of the ct. & if that leave is given & the summons is withdrawn, that amounts to a consent by the ct.; & that involves the obvious effect that the complaint upon which the summons was founded necessarily falls to the ground (JEUNE, P.).

house for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto, it was discovered, when the third of resp.'s witnesses was being examined, that applt. had not through inadvertence, been informed before the charge was proceeded with, as required by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 17, of his right to be tried by a jury, & thereupon the solr. for resp. withdrew the summons with the consent of the justices; although the solr. for applt. contended that there was no power to withdraw it.

A further information was subsequently preferred by resp. under the same sect. of the Act, against applt. for using the house for the purpose of certain moneys being received by him as for the consideration for assurances to pay or give certain sums of money on the happening of certain events or contingencies relating to certain horse races. The evidence given on the hearing of both information was substantially the same:—Held: the withdrawal of the first summons in consequence of the technical informality was not equivalent to a dismissal which could be pleaded in bar of the subsequent proceedings.

The dictum in Pickavance v. Pickavance, No. 438, ante, that the withdrawal of a summons by leave of the ct. puts an end to the complaint upon which the summons is founded, does not apply where the withdrawal is owing to a technical informality in the proceedings on the hearing of the complaint.—*DAVIS v. When the inquiry had lasted a considerable time, & the evidence of a large number of witnesses had been taken the magistrate fell ill & was unable to continue the hearing which had to be recommenced before another magistrate. At the commencement of the rehearing counsel for the prosecution proposed to take the following course:—To recall some of the witnesses called at the first hearing; to reswear them; to read to them their depositions taken at that hearing, directing them to correct the evidence if & where it was inaccurate; to ask them any additional questions that might be thought advisable; then to tender these witnesses for cross-examination with liberty for the prosecution to re-examine where necessary; & then to proceed with the oral examination of those witnesses whom the prosecution intended to call but had not called on the first hearing:—Held: there was nothing illegal in the course proposed & to accede to the proposal if he thought it expedient in the interests of justice so to do was within the discretion of the magistrate with which the ct. would not interfere.—*Ex p. grant further summons.]—A police magistrate issued a warrant for deft.'s arrest upon a charge of libel. When the case came on for hearing prosecutor did not appear, & the magistrate discharged deft. Prosecutor a few days afterwards applied for a summons against deft. in respect of the same alleged libel, stating that he understood from the police that his attendance was unnecessary on the former occasion, as a remand would be asked for & granted upon evidence of arrest, & that that was the cause of his absence & his not being represented. The police officer denied that he had made such a statement. It appeared that shortly after the date of the alleged libel prosecutor had sued deft. for publishing similar libels, & the matter was settled, all further proceedings in the action having been stayed & imputations on each side withdrawn. The magistrate, without going into the merits, refused to grant a summons, mainly upon the ground that prosecutor did not appear upon the first occasion, at the same time pointing out that the prosecutor had a civil remedy. Upon an application for a rule to hear & determine the application for the summons:—Held: in the circumstances the rule must be made absolute.—R. v. BENNETT & BOND, Ex p. BENNETT (1908), 72 J. Applt. appeared before the justices with his solr. at the hearing of the information, but resp. was not present either personally or by counsel or solr.

A police officer, who was one of the witnesses for the prosecution, examined the other witnesses for the prosecution, & during the course of the case, applt.'s solr. requested the justices' clerk to make a note of the police officer's name. The justices thereupon announced that the case was adjourned. Applt.'s solr., however, said that he preferred that the case should proceed. Accordingly the hearing proceeded & applt. was convicted:—Held: the offer to adjourn having been declined by applt.'s solr., neither the absence of resp. nor the fact that the police officer, although a witness, conducted the examination of the other witnesses for the prosecution invalidated the conviction.—*MAY v. It was then proved that the driver of a motor car of the name of Lionel Martin & of the same address as applt. had been convicted of a similar offence in 1907; & that a person having the same four names & of the same address as applt. had held a licence from the London County Council from a date before 1907 continuously down to the present time, that the licence was numbered 5080, & that no one having a London address could have that number except the person having those four names & that address. A police constable gave evidence that he stopped the motor car upon the occasion in 1907, & the driver upon demand produced to him a licence which was issued by the London County Council & numbered 5080. No notice to produce the licence was given. It was next proved by the production of a certified copy of the conviction that a person with the same four names & of the same address as applt. was convicted of a similar offence in 1908. former occasions, & they imposed a fine of £20 & ordered his licence to be indorsed:—Held: with regard to the conviction in 1907, the evidence of the police constable as to the contents of the licence produced to him on the occasion when the offence was committed was admissible as evidence of the identity of applt. with the person who was then convicted, & that no notice to produce the licence was necessary; with regard to the conviction in 1908, the identity of the names & of the address was some evidence of the identity of applt. with the person who was then convicted; & the justices were entitled to have regard to applt.'s wilful absence, & conclude that he was the person who was convicted on both those occasions & to order his licence to be indorsed.—*MARTIN v. The father thereupon went to H. & communicated with an attorney there, who, under all the circumstances, recommended that he should appear & plead guilty. From the affidavits it appeared that deft. had given neither to his father nor to the attorney any authority whatever to plead guilty, nor did it appear that he was aware that his father intended to employ an attorney:—Held: as deft. had not authorised any attorney to appear & plead guilty, the conviction was bad.

H., was afterwards indicted for perjury committed on the trial of S., & convicted:—Held: H. was rightly convicted, notwithstanding there was neither written information, nor oath, to justify the issue of the warrant, & the justices had jurisdiction to hear the charge, though the warrant upon which accused was brought before them was illegal.

478. Cured by appearance.]—Appls. were apprehended & brought before a magistrate charged with setting fire to the letters in a pillar box. On their appearance at a petty sessions to answer the charge, after witnesses had been examined & cross-examined, they were, at the application of the prosecutor, remanded on bail for a week. At the adjourned sessions the attorney for the prosecution stated that he should proceed against the applts. under Malicious Damage Act, 1860 (c. 97), s. 52, & asked their attorneys whether they would plead guilty to such charge, or whether further evidence should be offered in support of it; they answered that he must go on & prove his case: other witnesses were then examined & cross-examined; & after the case for the prosecution was closed, the attorneys for applts. objected that as no information on oath had been taken, as required by sect. 62, & applts. were not found committing the offence, they were not legally in custody, & therefore the justices had no jurisdiction to convict them of the offence then charged. The offence with which applts. were first charged was a felony punishable under sect. 10; the offence of which they were convicted was punishable on summary conviction :—Held : the want of an information & a summons was cured by the appearance of applts. before the justices, & they had waived the objection that they were not legally in custody on a charge under sect. 52, & therefore the justices had jurisdiction to convict under that section.—TURNER v. He told the girl to leave the school, & as she did not obey, he forcibly removed her from the school into the highway, & locked the gate to prevent her from returning. Upon an information charging applt. with assault, he contended that, after the directions he had given, the girl had no right in law to attend the school, & was a trespasser; that he had sole control of the school; that a question of title had arisen, & that under Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), s. 46, the jurisdiction of the justices was ousted:—Held: assuming that applt. was a trustee of the school, & that in acting as he did he was asserting a title to, or an interest in land, yet it was a title which was not disputed, & therefore the jurisdiction of the justices was not ousted.—*LUCAN v. Being summoned before the justices for a malicious trespass, & having set up a claim of right of way, the justices convicted him:—Held: there being ground for a fair supposition of right after so long a user, the justices were wrong & it was immaterial that J. had other modes of vindicating his right, for breaking the lock was one mode.—JOHNSON v. E. not only pulled out some thorns recently put there, but also threw down more of the fence than was necessary to enable him to pass:—Held: as E. had at most only committed an excess in vindicating the public right of way, the justices ought to have declined jurisdiction, & were wrong in convicting him.—EVISON v. Prosecutrix & deft. were each represented by attorneys, & at the hearing, while the attorney for prosecutrix was opening his case, the attorney for deft. objected that the facts he had stated constituted a case of rape, & that the justices had no jurisdiction. It was then suggested that the case should be treated as a charge of an aggravated assault. The case proceeded, & deft. was convicted of an aggravated assault. It appeared by affidavits upon an application for a habeas corpus, with a view to the discharge of deft., that the evidence of the woman was to the effect that deft. had ravished her:—Held: (1) (POLLOCK, C.B., WILDE, B.) the charge was one over which the justices had no jurisdiction; & further, it was competent for the ct. to look at the evidence with a view to see whether, in point of fact, the case was within the jurisdiction of justices; (2) (BRAMWELL, B., CHANNELL, B.) the charge did not imply more than a common assault, the justices had jurisdiction, & the ct. could not review the decision of the justices upon the fact.—Re THOMPSON (1860), 6 H. & N. 193; 30 L. Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914 (c. 87), enacts that trading with the enemy is punishable either under Summary Jurisdiction Acts or indictment. Twenty-three summonses, in accordance with the form contained in the schedule to the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, to appear before the justices of B. on a day of which public notice had been given that they would sit as justices in petty sessions for the hearing of indictable offences were served on appcts. The summonses required them to answer an information preferred against them of having committed twenty-three separate offences under the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914 (c. 87), but twenty-one of them were alleged to have been committed more than six months prior to the preferring of the information. At the hearing the justices treated the charges as indictable offences, & committed appcts. for trial. closed. The solr. for resps. thereupon, before going into the merits of the defence or calling any evidence, took the preliminary objection that no proof had been offered of any order or regulations under which the proceedings had been taken, that as such proof had not been given, no convictions could take place, & that no proof could then be given to remedy the defect. Applt. submitted that the justices had judicial cognisance of the order & the regulations, as of an Act of Parliament, but the justices held that they had no judicial cognisance of the Bread Order, 1917, & it ought to have been proved, & therefore they dismissed the informations:—Held: although the case for the prosecution had been closed, the justices ought to have allowed applt. to prove the order by putting in a Stationery Office copy in accordance with the New Ministries & Secretaries Act, 1916 (c. 68), & if applt. had no Stationery Office copy in ct., they should have adjourned the case to enable him to procure one, & the case must be remitted to the justices for hearing & determination.—*DUFFIN v. 554. ———.]—A warrant of commitment for re-examination for an unreasonable time, as for fourteen days, is wholly void; & trespass lies against the committing magistrate, though he acted without any indirect or improper motive.

A magistrate may legally commit for further examination, but I think it equally clear that it should have been left to the jury to say whether the commitment was made bonâ fide for the purpose of further examination, or for the purpose of inducing the pltf. to make a confession (BAILEY, J.).

The duty of a magistrate is to commit for a reasonable time, & if he commit for an unreasonable time, he thereby does an act which he is not authorised by law to do (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—*DAVIS v. charging him with delivering to a certain person indecent advertisements, with intent that the same should be delivered or exhibited; & the second, under sect. 3, charging him with aiding, abetting, counselling, & procuring the same person in the commission of the offence of exhibiting the same advertisements. The facts relating to the two charges were the same. After hearing the first information, the justices proceeded with & heard the second; & after the second had been heard, applt. was convicted of the offence charged in the first. He was also convicted on the second information:—Held: each case ought to have been decided on the evidence given in relation to the particular charge, & therefore the justices were wrong in hearing the evidence on the second information before deciding on the first, & both convictions were bad.—*HAMILTON v. date he "unlawfully did supply intoxicating liquor to persons in the licensed premises without the same having been ordered & paid for by the persons so supplied" contrary to an order made by the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic). At the hearing of the information evidence was given of two separate offences on the same day one at 7.55 & the other at 8.30 p.m. Justices convicted applt. & the words of the conviction followed the words of the information. On appeal to quarter sessions the evidence was the same & quarter sessions affirmed the conviction but stated a case on the question whether the conviction was bad for duplicity or otherwise invalid:—Held: as the justices ought not to have heard evidence of two separate offences before arriving at a conclusion as to whether the offence charged had been committed & as it was impossible to ascertain to which offence the conviction referred, it was invalid & must be set aside.—*PARKER v. Discretion of justices—Offences against the Person Act, 1828 (c. 31), s. 27.—Above sect. after providing for the summary disposal by justices of cases of common assaults & batteries, provides that "if the justices, upon the hearing of any such case of assault or battery, shall deem the offence not to be proved, or shall find the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, & shall accordingly dismiss the complaint, they shall forthwith make out a certificate under their hands, stating the fact of such dismissal, & shall deliver such certificate to the party against whom the complaint was preferred"; & by sect. 28, "if any person against whom such complaint shall have been preferred for any common assault or battery, shall have obtained such certificate as aforesaid," "he shall be released from all further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause":—Held: (1) by above sect. the granting a certificate of dismissal of the complaint was, when a case is brought within the sect., a ministerial, not a judicial, act, & a magistrate was therefore bound to grant it; (2) the certificate, if drawn up forthwith & delivered to the party against whom the complaint was preferred, was a good bar, under sect. 28, to a subsequent action for the assault, though it be not drawn up in the presence of the parties, or applied for by the party against whom the complaint was preferred. Semble: by "forthwith," in above sect. was meant, forthwith upon the application of the party entitled.—*HANCOCK v. Replication, that deft. did not obtain such certificate in manner & form, etc. Special verdict, finding a hearing & dismissal of the complaint, Nov. 29, 1838, & certificate obtained Jan. 29, 1839:—Held: (1) the replication put in issue the fact of the certificate having been obtained forthwith; (2) such a dismissal not being equivalent to an acquittal at common law, & not constituting a defence, except under the statute, the certificate pleaded must appear to have been obtained forthwith, & the certificate in this case was not obtained forthwith.—*R. v. 612. General rule—Compliance with statutory preliminaries necessary.]—Justices should never convict summarily without all the necessary statutable preliminaries being complied with (COLERIDGE, J.).—*Ex p. 613. Proper hearing of accused party.]—The construction ought to be more strict upon convictions than upon indictments; & the reason is because in the first case the jurisdiction is summary. A regular conviction should have charge, evidence, & adjudication (ASHHURST, J.).

The ct. in considering convictions is always strict in two or three points, (a) that a jurisdiction is shown by the person convicting; (b) that the party convicted has been summoned & heard or that it has been his own fault if he has not been heard; (c) that the case is duly made out by evidence. But the ct. has not been strict in the technical wording of them & I know of no case which says that summary convictions shall be drawn in any precise form (BULLER, J.).—R. v. GREEN (1784), Cald. Mag. Cas. 391.

617. Surplusage.]—If a conviction under 31 Geo. 3, c. 21, s. 4, which enacts that all convictions against that Act may be made out in the form, or to the effect following, giving the form, contain all the substantial parts of that prescribed, it is good, though it also contain something more; for surplusage will not vitiate a conviction.—

R. v. JEFFERIES (1792), 4 Term Rep. 767; Nolan 106; 100 E. R. 1291.

618. ———.]—If the convicting magistrate give a proper date to the time of the conviction upon the face of it, & afterwards add an impossible date to the time when he set his hand & seal to the conviction, being before the offence committed, the latter may be rejected as surplusage. It is enough that the conviction sets forth that the witness was examined on oath, without stating that the magistrate had authority to administer the oath.—R. v. PICTON (1802), 2 East, 195; 102 E. 619. Appropriation of penalties—Want of certainty—Whether conviction invalid.]—Where justices of the peace are required by a penal statute to distribute the penalty on conviction among certain persons according to their discretion, an adjudication that the forfeiture be disposed as the law directs is bad, & the ct. will quash the conviction. 690. ———.]—Warrants of commitment, convictions, & other instruments made by magistrates, are sufficient, if they correspond with the forms given in Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), sched.

Criminal Procedure Act, 1853 (c. 30), empowers two justices of the peace to punish, on summary conviction for assaults committed on females, or children under fourteen years, any person charged before them sitting at a place where the petty sessions are usually held:—Held: a warrant of commitment for such offence, in the form given by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), was good, although it did not state that the justices before whom the party was charged were sitting at a place where petty sessions are usually held.—Re ALLISON (1854), 10 Exch. 561; 18 J. 694. — Must recite conviction.]—A commitment on Justices Commitment Act, 1743 (c. 5), must be a commitment in execution, & is therefore bad, unless it be preceded by a conviction.

If this were merely a commitment for safe custody I should have thought the commitment good for that purpose; but if it be considered as a commitment in execution it cannot be supported without an adjudication (ASHHURST, J.).—R. v. RHODES (1791), 4 Term Rep. 220; 100 E. R. 984.

696. — — — Conviction must be valid.]—A warrant of commitment reciting a conviction must show a good conviction. It should show on the face of it that the witnesses for the prosecution were viva voce examined on oath in presence of prisoner as well as on the making the complaint or information.—R. v. COTESBY (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 74.

700. — — — Nature of imprisonment—With or without hard labour.]—Where by a statute giving justices a power to commit summarily they are empowered to commit the offender to prison for a certain period, with or without hard labour, & in their warrant of commitment nothing is said about hard labour, it is to be taken that they did not mean to give hard labour, & the warrant is not objectionable for omitting to state whether the imprisonment is to be with or without hard labour.—*Ex p. 730. Parol commitment pending making out warrant—Validity.]—Where a justice is authorised to commit, he may, by parol, order the party to be kept in custody while a warrant is making out.

But, in general, a parol commitment is illegal. Accordingly, where a justice had authority by statute to commit a party by warrant under his hand & seal; & committed him verbally to prison, where he was taken without a written warrant:—Held: the justice was liable to an action of trespass; & a warrant, properly dated, drawn up afterwards, was no protection to him against such action.—*HUTCHINSON v. 732. Must be warranted by statute.]—Upon a complaint against a servant for absenting himself from his service, made under 4 Geo. 4, c. 34, s. 3, the conviction adjudged that he should be imprisoned in the house of correction, there to remain & be held to hard labour for one month. The commitment required the keeper to receive him into custody, there to remain & be corrected, & held to hard labour for one month, following the words of 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2:—Held: the "correction" therein mentioned must be understood to mean something beyond the hard labour, & therefore the commitment was bad, as varying in this respect from the conviction, & authorising a punishment not warranted by the statute.—WOOD v. FENWICK (1842), 10 M. & W. 195; 11 L. J. M. C. 127; 152 E. R. 439.

751. Conviction for assault—On application for recognisances—Jurisdiction of justices.]—When an application is made to justices to compel a party to enter into recognisances to keep the peace towards another, they have no jurisdiction upon such application to convict the party of an assault, even though an assault was given in evidence of complainant:

A. struck B. & threatened to do so again, whereupon B. preferred articles of the peace against A. Upon the hearing B. gave evidence of the assault, & at the termination of the evidence, the justices convicted A. of a common assault & fined him; B. however, protested against their proceeding as upon an information for an assault, wishing only to have sureties to keep the peace. intending to seek some other tribunal for the charge of assault; the justices however, persisted in their conviction:—Held: the justices were wrong, & the conviction was made without jurisdiction.—*R. v. 755. — — —.]—Where a ct. of summary jurisdiction is satisfied that a person who is brought before it has been guilty of inciting others to commit breaches of the peace & intends to persevere in such incitement the ct. may order him to enter into recognisances & to find sureties for his good behaviour or to be imprisoned in default of so doing.

Whatever the origin of that jurisdiction may be, whether it be derived from the common law, from the commission of conservators of the peace, or from 34 Edw. 3, c. 1, or otherwise, the practice of making such orders for the purpose of preventing apprehended breaches of the peace has been too well established for a long period of years to allow of its propriety being questioned at the present day.

It is not essential to the exercise of that jurisdiction that the conduct of deft. should have caused any individual person to go in bodily fear.—LANSBURY v. RILEY, [1914] 3 K. B. 229; 83 L. J. K. B. 1226; 109 L. T. 546; 77 J. P. 440; 29 T. L. R. 733; 23 Cox, C. C. 582, D. C.

756. Threatened breach of the peace.]—Applt., a Protestant lecturer, had held meetings in public places in the town of Liverpool, causing large crowds to assemble & obstruct the thoroughfares. In addressing those meetings he used gestures & languages which were highly insulting to the religion of the Roman Catholic inhabitants, of whom there is a large body in Liverpool. The natural consequence of his words & conduct on those occasions was to cause, & his words & conduct had in fact caused, breaches of the peace to be committed by his opponents & supporters, & he threatened & intended to hold similar meetings in the town, & to act & speak in a similar way, in the future. At one of the meetings he told his supporters that he had been informed that the Catholics were going to bring sticks; & on some of his supporters saying that they would bring sticks too, he said that he looked to them for protection. A local Act in force in Liverpool prohibits, under a penalty, the use of threatening, abusive & insulting words & behaviour in the streets whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned:—Held: on proof of those facts before the Liverpool stipendiary magistrate, he had jurisdiction to bind over applt. in recognisances to be of good behaviour.

Semble: justices have jurisdiction to bind over to be of good behaviour a person who, in addressing meetings in public places, although he does not directly incite to the commission of breaches of the peace, uses language the natural consequence of which is that breaches of the peace will be committed by others & who intends to hold similar meetings & use similar language in the future.—*WISE v. 757. — Abusive language.—A party gave information on oath before a magistrate, that from certain language used towards him he was in bodily fear from another; & the magistrate, upon hearing the complaint, required the latter to enter into recognisances to keep the peace. On motion to discharge the recognisances, on the ground that the language was used in a metaphorical sense only, the ct. refused to interfere, because it was for the magistrate to judge in what sense the language was used.—R. v. TREGARTHEN (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 678; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 379; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 431; 110 E. R. 941.

758. — No averment as to going in bodily fear.—On the hearing by justices of a summons against a deft. for threatening to assault complainant, deft. alleged that complainant had used threatening language towards him, but he made no formal charge against complainant. The justices, after hearing the evidence of complainant & deft., found as a fact that there was a real danger of a breach of the peace on the part of both parties, & they ordered both of them to be bound over to be of good behaviour. The order made against complainant, as drawn up, contained no averment that deft. went in bodily fear of complainant:—Held: the justices had, in the circumstances, power to order complainant to be bound over, & the absence from the order of an averment that deft. went in bodily fear of complainant did not render it bad on its face.—*R. v. Army, assembled together in the streets of a town for a lawful object, & with no intention of carrying out their object unlawfully, or by the use of physical force, but knowing that their assembly would be opposed & resisted by other persons in such a way as would in all probability tend to the committing of a breach of the peace on the part of such opposing persons. A disturbance of the peace having been created by the forcible opposition of a number of persons to the assembly & procession through the streets of applts. & the Salvation Army, who themselves used no force or violence:—Held: applts. had not been guilty of “unlawfully & tumultuously assembling,” etc., & could not therefore be convicted of that offence, nor be bound over to keep the peace.—*BEATTY v. At the hearing, the justices dismissed the information & gave him a certificate, but they ordered him in respect of the charge to enter into his own recognisance in £50 to keep the peace for six months:—Held: notwithstanding the justices dismissed the information, they were legally justified in requiring a recognisance to keep the peace.—*Ex p. A warrant of commitment for want of sureties to keep the peace need not set forth the words in which the threats complained of were conveyed, nor the time or place when & where they were spoken.

It is no excess of jurisdiction in such a case to require sureties to keep the peace not only towards complainant for one month, but also all Her Majesty's subjects.

It is not necessary to state in the warrant that the justices of the peace have found the complaint to be true. It is enough to aver that having heard it & having made due examination thereon, they direct the party to find sureties.—Ex p. ASTON (1844), 12 M. & W. 456; 1 New Sess. Cas. 73; 13 L. J. M. An action lies against the justice for committing on such warrant; & bona fides is no defence. It is not necessary that such warrant should fix the amount in which sureties are to be given. Notice of action, for a commitment under such warrant, stated that the justice had caused complainant to be unlawfully committed to a certain common gaol or prison in the borough of Monmouth, & there imprisoned & kept, etc., without reasonable or probable cause, from, etc. to, etc., naming the days; & the notice went on to state that complainant would, at the expiration of one calendar month, cause a writ of summons to be sued out of the Ct. of Q. 785. — Penalty for non-payment of cab fare—Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 89), s. 66.—By above sect., if any person refuse to pay on demand to any driver of any hackney carriage the fare allowed by the Act, or any bye-law made thereunder, such fare may, together with costs, be recovered before a justice as a penalty:—Held: a person refusing to pay a fare could not, upon information, be summarily convicted for such refusal, & be ordered, in case payment were not made, & in default of distress, to be imprisoned, as the fare was a sum of money claimed to be due & recoverable on complaint to a ct. of summary jurisdiction within the meaning of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 6, & was therefore only recoverable in the manner provided by Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 35.

It is clear that the mere statement in an Act of Parliament that a sum is recoverable as a penalty does not turn the non-payment of what is merely a debt into an offence. . . . The words, & not upon information, were inserted to emphasise the exclusion of criminal matters from the operation of sect. 6 [Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49)] (CHARLES, J.).—*R. v. The fine imposed by above Act, s. 111 (4) for such contravention is a punishment for an offence, & is not a civil debt. 789. — Health Insurance contribution.]—Resp. was convicted on July 20, 1924, of failing to pay a contribution which he was liable to pay under the National Health Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1922, in respect of an employed contributor. Due notice having been served upon him in accordance with the Act, it was proved that he had failed to pay other contributions in respect of the same employed contributor during the year preceding the date when the information was laid. Resp. was fined £5 & £2 2s. costs, & in default of payment—it appearing that resp. had not sufficient goods to satisfy the amount of the said fine & costs—was ordered to be imprisoned for one month. The magistrate further ordered that resp. should pay to the Insurance Comrs. the sum of 9d. in respect of the contribution for which the information was laid & also the sum of 18s., being a sum equal to the amount of the contributions unpaid during the preceding year, & he directed that in default of payment each of such amounts should be recovered as a civil debt. A similar fine was imposed & similar orders for payment made on a second information charging a similar offence under the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1920 (c. 30):—Held: in both cases, the magistrate was right. The order for payment of contributions were not part of the penalty, & could only be enforced as a civil debt. 813. — When justices may make fresh table.]

—(1) Declaration that a table of fees to be taken by the clerks of justices for M. directing that the fee to be taken for every recognisance to prosecute, etc., should be 4s., was pursuant to 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, made & settled by the justices at quarter sessions, approved at the quarter sessions next succeeding, & afterwards laid before the judges at the next assizes, who, on Nov. 15, 1842, approved & ratified the same; & that three months afterwards deft., as clerk to the justices, demanded & received of pltf. 8s., as the fee for taking & acknowledging a recognisance, whereby, & by force of the statute, deft. became liable to pay pltf. £20:—Held: on demurrer; the declaration was bad, as 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 2, in imposing a penalty of £20 for demanding a greater fee than that established, enabled any person to sue as informer, & pltf. sued as informer, though he happened also to be the person grieved. (2) By 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 1, “the justices of the peace throughout England, at their respective general quarter sessions of the peace, to be held next after June 24, 1753, shall & they are required to make & settle a table of fees, etc.; & it shall & may be lawful for the said justices in their respective quarter sessions assembled from time to time to make any other table of fees to be taken instead of the fees contained in the table.” Semble: the power to make a fresh table of fees does not depend upon a previous table having been made at the session next after June, 1753.—*LEWIS v. (2) A table of fees to be taken by the clerks of justices was made at the June quarter sessions, & submitted for approval to the next October quarter sessions; when the further consideration thereof was adjourned to the next Epiphany sessions; & at these last-mentioned sessions the table, with some alterations, was approved of; & the same was afterwards ratified & confirmed by the judges at the next following assizes:—Held: the table was not duly approved, ratified & confirmed, under 26 Geo. 2, c. 14, s. 1, as the approval ought to have been given at the October sessions, & such sessions had no power to adjourn the consideration thereof.—*BOWMAN v. These fees were sanctioned by the Secretary of State. The overseers of the parish of H. paid such fees to the clerk to the justices of the petty sessional division in which H. was situate, & claimed before the poor law auditor to have them allowed to them out of the poor rates, under Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844 (c. 101), s. 60. ### PART XI. SECT. 1.

g. Chairman of sessions —Power to make orders of the court.]—Semble*: the chairman of the quarter sessions additional sessions was valid in point of law. The King has power to issue commissions requiring the justices to hold sessions for the trial of offences; & if he does so, they may meet for the purpose at as many different times as they think proper (PATTESON, J.).

(2) The distinction between the two sorts of sessions, general & quarter, is plainly pointed out in Hawkins Pleas of the Crown . . . "that the quarter sessions are a species only of general sessions, & that such sessions are properly called general quarter sessions, which are holden in the four quarters of the year in pursuance of 2 Hen. 5, c. 4." This last part however is erroneous. I should say, not held by statute, but authorised by the King's commission (PATTESON, J.).

(3) The practice in Middlesex as to discharging prisoners would render it inconvenient to hold sessions by adjournment, because the grand jury being adjourned, parties in custody have, against whom no bills had been found, could not be discharged as they are when the grand jury are discharged (PATTESON, J.).—*R. v. quarter sessions held next after the expiration of four weeks from the day on which the justices' certificate is lodged with the clerk of the peace.

A certificate of justices for the diversion of a highway was lodged with the clerk of the peace on May 21. In the notice of intended application to quarter sessions it was stated that the application would be made on July 4, that being the date on which the summer sessions would in the ordinary course be held. Subsequently, the county assizes having been fixed for July 3, it became necessary to alter the date of holding quarter sessions. The justices accordingly altered it to June 20, & on that day the application for enrolment of the certificate was made. The four weeks from the lodging of the certificate with the clerk of the peace expired on June 18:—Held: notwithstanding the alteration of the date, the notice was a good notice, & quarter sessions had jurisdiction to entertain the application.—*R. v. 846. Provision of sessions house—County of London.]—The London County Council & not the standing joint committee of the County of London have, subject to the approval by a Secretary of State of any scheme made in that behalf, the power & duty of determining the place or places where the cts. of quarter sessions for the county of London are to be held. Subject to such approval, the London County Council has the power & duty of determining whether any & what new site shall be acquired for the accommodation of the cts. of quarter sessions for the County of London, but the power & duty of determining the accommodation to be afforded at such places & on such sites is vested in the standing joint committee of the County of London, & such accommodation is to be provided by the London County Council.

A question having arisen as to which of the above mentioned bodies had the power or duty of determining the place at which the sessions should be held:—Held: a question had arisen as to whether any power or duty was transferred to a county council or joint committee under Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), & therefore the High Ct. had jurisdiction under sect. 29 of that Act to determine the question.—*LONDON COUNTY STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE v. ## SECT. 2.—THE CAPTION.

850. Nature of—Remains same throughout sessions.]—The caption of an indictment on which deft. had been convicted, was drawn up by the clerk of the peace from the minutes of sessions, & returned with the indictment to the Crown office. It stated the presentment to be made by the oaths of A. B., C. D., etc., naming twelve grand jurors, & others, good & lawful men, etc. A rule was obtained, with a view to a writ of error, calling on the clerk of the peace to show cause why the caption should not be amended by inserting the true names & number of the grand jury sworn. Proof was given by affidavit that the real number exceeded twenty-three. The clerk did not deny this, but stated that he had no minute or recollection of the names or number:—Held: the caption was not incorrect in omitting to state the number & all the names of the grand jury; &, under the circumstances, no alteration could be made in it; & deft. received judgment.

At sessions the original general caption is for the whole proceedings (COLERIDGE, J.).—R. v. MARSH (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 236; Will. Woll. & Dav. 150; 6 L. J. M. C. 153; 1 J. P. 245; 1 Jur. 38; 112 E. R. 89.

858a. ——— The Crown.]—HARCOURT v. FOX, No. 859, post.

859. Who may be appointed—Justice assigned commission of peace for county.]—They, [justices of the peace], were to have a commission; they had authority to hold a ct.; & thereby they were judges of a ct. of record. This did give occasion to the commencement of the office of custos rotulorum; for they, being judges of record, the records of that ct. must be in their custody. . . . But in regard it might be inconvenient that the records should be dispersed among them promiscuously, & not kept together in one hand, I look upon it that it was in the power of the king to appoint some particular person to have the custody & charge of the records, & that he should be a person responsible to the subject for the safe keeping of them, & to whom he might have resort upon all occasions, when he had any use of them. This was thought convenient; for the words at the end of the commission of the peace are, “we appoint you such an one to be keeper of the records & rolls of the county.” So that though legally, as I said, the records are in the possession of all the justices of the peace . . . yet directly they are in the custody of the custos rotulorum, & if by negligence or misdemeanour they happen to be lost or miscarry, he is responsible to the King, & to the subject, for such loss or miscarriage (HOLT, C.J.).—*HARCOURT v. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—CLERK OF THE PEACE.

A. Nature of Office.

861. Tenure—During good behaviour.]—By 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21, the custos rotulorum may appoint the clerk of the peace “for so long time only as he shall well demean himself”; & therefore if a clerk of the peace be appointed “during the pleasure of the custos,” the Ct., on his being deprived, will not grant a mandamus to restore; for the appointment being void he cannot show a title to the office.—R. v. OWEN (1694), 4 Mod. Rep. 293; Comb. 317; 87 E. R. 403; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. SANDERS v. OWEN (1699), Carth. 426, H. L.

862. ——— Office for life.]—By 37 Hen. 8, c. 1, the custos rotulorum is authorised “to appoint a fit & able person to hold the office of clerk of the peace, during the time that the said custos rotulorum shall occupy the said office of custos, so as the said clerk of the peace demean himself justly & honestly.” By 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21, f. 1, the custos is authorised to nominate a clerk of the peace “for so long time only as such clerk of the peace shall well demean himself in his said office.” An appointment made by a custos, under these statutes, is, as to him, an appointment for life, & therefore the clerk of the peace so appointed cannot be removed from his office by the same or any succeeding custos; but by 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21, if he do not “well demean himself in his office” the sessions of the county, on application & proof made as the Act requires, may remove him.—FOX v. HARCOURT (1693), Show. Parl. Cas. 158; 1 E. R. 107; affg. S. C. sub nom. HARCOURT v. FOX, Comb. 209.

863. ——— Freehold office.]—Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), has not changed the tenure of the office of clerk of the peace of a county, which for years has been known as a freehold office, terminable only in the event of misconduct in accordance with statutory provisions, into an office held at the will of the standing joint committee of the county. It has merely superadded certain new duties to the old office, & although s. 83 of that Act vests the power to appoint & remove him in the standing joint committee, the grounds on which he may be removed are the grounds incident to the old office.

Sect. 6 [of 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21] prescribes the manner of his discharge. If a clerk of the peace should misdemean himself in the execution of his office, & a complaint thereof should be exhibited against him to the justices in quarter sessions, & proved before them, they may lawfully suspend or discharge him (LORD SUMNER).—LECONFIELD (LORD) v. THORNELY, [1926] A. C. 10; 95 L. J. K. B. 137; 134 L. T. 1; 89 J. P. 199; 42 T. L. R. 15; 23 L. G. R. 655, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. THORNELY v. LECONFIELD (LORD), [1925] 1 K. B. 236, C. A.

881. How effected—Appointment of another to office.]—(1) Under Municipal Corporation Act (1835), s. 76, officers “removed” under its provisions, became entitled to compensation. B., the then town clerk, made no formal surrender of his office, nor any attempt to procure his re-appointment, or to contest the election of D., who was appointed town clerk:—Held: this constituted a removal of B. from his office.

(2) For the purpose of establishing a claim to compensation for the loss of a connected or dependent office it ought to be shown: (a) that the office was connected or understood to be connected with or dependent upon, the corporate office lost; & (b) that the loss of it was connected with the loss of the principal office, but it is not required by the Act, that the connected or dependent office, or the office understood so to be, should be itself a corporate office:—Held: the circumstance of a town clerk having continued, for some time after he was removed from the office, to perform the duties of the office of clerk of the peace & clerk to the magistrates until other clerks were appointed, did not, in any way, interfere with his right to compensation for loss of those offices.—A.-G. v. 886. ——— Refusal to record order of sessions.—A clerk of the peace having received fees to which the justices thought he was not entitled, they withheld a portion of his salary, & upon a mandamus unsuccessfully resisted his claim, & thereby incurred costs, for the payment of which quarter sessions made an order, which it was the duty of the clerk of the peace to enter on the records of the ct. & certify to the county treasurer for settlement. The clerk of the peace, conceiving that the order was illegal, because no full bill of costs had been brought before the ct., & also because he thought the costs were not such as ought properly to be charged upon the county rate, but should have been paid by the justices, who by disputing his claim had improperly incurred them, declined to record the order or to give the necessary certificate. Quarter sessions thereupon referred it to the finance committee to consider & report what ought to be done under the circumstances; & upon their report a charge was preferred against the clerk of the peace, in the name of the county treasurer, under the 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21, s. 6, of having "misdemeaned himself in the execution of his office." The matter was heard before the justices at the next ct. of quarter sessions, & they unanimously found that the clerk of the peace had been guilty of the offence charged against him, & adjudged him to be dismissed from his office:—Held: the justices in quarter sessions being a competent tribunal to hear & determine the charge, & having determined it, this ct. could not question the propriety of their decision; & no such interest appeared in the justices, or in any of them, as to disqualify them from acting as judges in the matter.—*WILDES v. After the Act passed he was appointed town clerk; & afterwards, upon a separate commission of the peace being granted to the borough, another person was appointed clerk to the justices, by the justices under that commission:—Held: T. was entitled to compensation under sect. 66, for the loss of the emolument derived from the place of clerk to the justices. Although, after the appointment of the new clerk to the justices, a ct. of quarter sessions was granted to the borough, & T. was appointed clerk of the peace. 904. Expenses of appeal to sessions — Non-quarter sessions borough.—A county borough had a separate commission of the peace, but not a separate ct. of quarter sessions. An appeal from a conviction under the Act by the borough justices having been successfully brought to quarter sessions for the county, an order was made by quarter sessions upon the borough treasurer for payment of prosecutor's costs:—Held: the word "place" in Vagrant Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 9, must be construed as ejusdem generis with "county, riding, division," & meant a place having a separate ct. of quarter sessions; & the order of quarter sessions was therefore wrongly made upon the borough treasurer, & should have been made upon the treasurer of the county.—*R. v. persons were indicted at the assizes for the county of S. for forging the will of C. D. It appeared that C. D. died in the borough of O., & that one of the prisoners took away the deeds, etc., of deceased to his own house, which was in the county of S., but not in the borough of O., that the forged signatures of testatrix & of one of the witnesses were written in the borough of O.; & that the offence was completed in the county of D., where the forged signatures of the second witness was written. The borough of O. did not contribute to the county rate, but had a borough fund of its own:—Held: (1) the order for payment of all costs & expenses of the prosecution was properly made on the treasurer of the borough of O.; (2) a mandamus would lie to the treasurer to compel payment.—*R. v. It had the right to provide & pay for its own police, but by agreement the borough was for police purposes consolidated with the county, & the county supplied the police for which the borough paid. The county rate was leviable in the borough:—Held: the costs of prosecutions undertaken by the police before the borough justices in cases in which such costs were not remitted or were not paid by the parties chargeable were chargeable to the borough fund & not to the funds of the county in which the borough was situate.—GEORGE v. THOMAS, [1910] 2 K. B. 951; 80 L. J. K. B. 7; 103 L. T. 456; 74 J. P. 398; 8 L. G. R. 849.

910. Expenses of attending quarter sessions.—After the grant of a separate ct. of quarter sessions to the borough of G., the council of that borough contracted with the county justices for "the support & maintenance" of the borough prisoners in the county prisons at a certain sum per week. The borough paid all expenses of conveyance. The county under that contract provided the borough prisoners with house room, food, clothing, bedding & fuel, but claimed contribution from the borough in respect of the law expenses attending the holding of the general & quarter sessions for the county:—Held: these were expenses to which, under Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (c. 76), s. 117, & Prisons Act, 1842 (c. 98), s. 19, the borough was liable to contribute.—*R. v. 919. ——— Offence against the peace.]—The sessions cannot take an indictment on a statute creating a new offence not against the peace, unless so authorised by express words.—R. v. CLOUGH (1696), 5 Mod. Rep. 149; 87 E. R. 575.

920. ——— Jurisdiction given to “King’s courts.”]—R. v. BRISTOW (1754), Dunning, 30.

921. Assault not charged by person aggrieved—True bill found by jury.]—Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), enacts that “where any person shall unlawfully assault or beat any other person, two justices of the peace, upon complaint by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, may hear & determine such offence . . .” & by s. 45 their decision shall be a bar to all “further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause”:—Held: justices have, nevertheless, jurisdiction to hear a charge of assault, & commit the prisoner for trial, although no complaint has been made by the party aggrieved; & an indictment found in pursuance of such committal is good.—R. v. GAUNT (1895), 73 L. T. 585; 60 J. P. 90; 12 T. L. R. 62; 40 Sol. Jo. 85; 18 Cox, C. C. 210, C. C. R.

922. Jurisdiction to find indictment—Where no jurisdiction to try offence.]—A judge at nisi prius has no jurisdiction to try an indictment for perjury at common law found at the quarter sessions, & removed by certiorari into the K. B., an indictment so found being void.—R. v. HAYNES (1825), Ry. & M. 298.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Bartlett (1843), 12 L. J. M. C. 127.

923. ———.]—In those cases where the jurisdiction of quarter sessions to try offences is taken away by Quarter Sessions Act, 1842 (c. 38), the jurisdiction of the quarter sessions to find a true bill in such cases, is also taken away. Therefore, when the offence is punishable by transportation for life, prisoner cannot be tried at the assizes on a bill found by the grand jury of quarter sessions.—R. v. RAMSDEN (1843), 2 L. T. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—ARTICLES OF THE PEACE.

A. In General.

934. Against whom complaint may be made—Magistrate.—The justices at sessions may commit a fellow justice for refusing to find sureties for good behaviour, upon the complaint of a third party.—STORTON'S CASE (1673), Freem. K. B. 354; 89 E. R. 264.

—Peer.]—See PEERAGES & DIGNITIES.

—Husband—By wife.]—See HUSBAND & WIFE, Vol. XXVII., p. 261, Nos. 2306, 2307.

935. Application should be local.—Articles of the peace should be exhibited in the neighbourhood.—R. v. WAITE (1759), 2 Burr. 780; 97 E. R. 559.

936. Untrue allegation in application—Committal for perjury.—Articles of the peace appearing to be untrue, the party may be committed for perjury.—R. v. PARNELL (1759), 2 Burr. 806; 97 E. R. 572.

937. Review by High Court.—ANON. (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 325; 94 E. R. 530.

938.—R. v. DUNN, No. 945, post.

939.—(1) When articles of the peace have been filed & an attachment issued for the purpose of bringing in deft. to find sureties, this ct. will not entertain an application to discharge the articles & to award costs under 21 Jac. 1, c. 8, s. 2, on the ground of alleged insufficiency of the articles, though notice of such application has been given to prosecutor.

It is sufficient ground for articles of the peace that complainant has been accustomed to go to a particular place, rightfully as he alleges, for the transaction of business, & has been threatened with violence if he goes there again.

(2) Affidavits are not admissible in contradiction to articles of the peace; nor for the purpose of supplying facts said to have been suppressed by complainant; as the contents of a correspondence alluded to in the articles. Nor is it an objection to the articles that such correspondence is not set out, if it does not contain any part of the menace relied upon.

(3) This Ct. will, if it sees ground, require surety of the peace, although justices have refused to do so on the same complaint.—R. v. MALLINSON (1851), 16 Q. B. 367; 14 J. P. Jo. 752; 15 J. P. Jo. 66; 117 E. R. 920; sub nom. Ex p. MALLINSON, 15 Jur. 746; previous proceedings, sub nom. R. v. MALLINSON (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 619.

Threatened breach of peace—Duty of justices.—See CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. XV., p. 643, No. 6839.

Recognisances to keep the peace generally, see CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. XIV., pp. 492 et seq.

B. Grounds for Requiring Recognisances.

940. Fear & threat of future personal violence.—ANON. (1733), 2 Barn. K. B. 325; 94 E. R. 530.

941.—R. v. MALLINSON, No. 939, ante.

942.—H. had written a letter to a young lady, a relative of T. T. afterwards, in consequence of his writing the letter, violently assaulted H., & said, "if you write again, I will flog you within an inch of your life." On a subsequent occasion, T., meeting H., said to him, "Remember what I said to you, I am determined to put a stop to your proceedings." The ct. permitted H. to exhibit articles of the peace against T.—Ex p. HULSE (1851), 21 L. J. M. C. 21; 17 L. T. O. S. 147; 15 J. P. Jo. 418.

943. — While fear actually lasts.—If a gentleman visit a young lady as her lover, & on her parents denying him access, he intrudes himself rudely into the house, follows the young lady on a journey taken to avoid him, assaults the person under whose protection she is placed, & threatens to force her from him, it is a good cause to demand surety for his good behaviour from him; & although the surety must be demanded recently after the cause happen, & while the fear it occasions exists, yet if the party, at any distance of time afterwards, do any act, though to another person, which shows that the old grudge remains, the ct. will couple the last act with the antecedent cause of fear, & on articles exhibited, grant surety of the peace.—DENNIS v. LANE (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 131; 87 E. R. 887.

Annotation :—Consd. R. v. Dunn (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 599.

944. — Must appear from the articles.—There ought to be a reasonable foundation on the face of the articles to induce a fear of personal danger before the ct. will require sureties of the peace. A wife may sue a supplicavit in Ch. against her husband, & to find sureties not to beat or evil intreat her, aliter quam ex causa regiminis et castigationis. The facts stated in the articles are to be considered as true until the contrary appears upon a proper prosecution. Where there are articles of separation between the husband & wife, if the husband afterwards confine her, she may have a habeas corpus & be set at liberty.—VANE'S (LORD) CASE (1744), 13 East, 172, n.; 2 Stra. 1202; 104 E. R. 334.

Annotations :—Refd. Re Dunn (1840), 10 L. J. M. C. 29. Mentd. R. v. Stanhope (1826), 12 Ad. & El. 620, n.; Re Aston (1844), 8 Jur. 293.

945. — Threat by conduct — To be inferred by exhibitant.—(1) On habeas corpus, bringing up a party committed by justices for not finding sureties of the peace, the ct. will not hear affidavits controverting the facts alleged in the articles of the peace. 56 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 3, does not affect the practice in this respect. (2) Where a party exhibiting articles of peace alleges, as the ground of fear, expressions in a letter, which he submits to the ct. for their construction, the ct. will not take the words into consideration, nor act upon the articles, unless the whole letter be set forth. (3) Where the sessions, upon articles of the peace being exhibited, have ordered sureties to be found, & committed the accused party for want of them, their judgment is not final; but this ct., on habeas corpus & certiorari, will examine the articles, & if they are, on the face of them, insufficient, supersede the order of sessions as made without jurisdiction, & discharge the prisoner. (4) Articles of the peace are not sufficient unless they show a threat. The threat need not be in words, but may be inferred from a course of conduct. That inference, however, must be drawn by the exhibitant himself; & if he omit to state it in the articles, the ct. will not draw the inference.—R. v. DUNN (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 599; Arn. 21; 4 Per. & Dav. 415;

953. ———.]—R. v. MALLINSON, No. 939, ante.

954. ———.]—Where articles of the peace are exhibited against any person, the person against whom they are exhibited may not give evidence before the justices in contradiction of the facts stated in the articles. If it appears on oath to the satisfaction of the justices that complainant has been threatened, it is their duty to require recognisances to be entered into to keep the peace.—LORT v. HUTTON (1876), 45 L. J. M. C. 95 ; 33 L. T. 730 ; 40 J. P. 677.

955. Attachment on articles in King's Bench—Whether ballable before sessions.]—Attachment upon articles of the peace in the King's Bench, ballable before justices of the county.—HUTT'S CASE, R. v. BOWMASTER (1760), 2 Burr. 1039 ; 1 Wm. Bl. 233 ; 97 E. R. 695.

956. Period of recognisance — In discretion of court.]—Upon articles of the peace exhibited, the ct. have the power of requiring bail for such a length of time as they shall think necessary for the preservation of the peace, & are not confined to a twelve-month. Where the ct. had at first required bail for fourteen years, they afterwards lessened the time to two years, upon its appearing to them that an information was depending against deft. on the same account, which must necessarily be determined within that time.—R. v. BOWES (1787), 1 Term Rep. 696 ; 99 E. R. 1327.

957. Discharge of recognisance.]—R. v. LEWIS (1730), 1 Barn. K. B. 345 ; 94 E. R. 232.

958. ———.]—It is usual to discharge persons committed for want of surety on articles of peace or supplicavit, at the end of a year, if nothing new happens.—BAYNUM v. BAYNUM (1746), Amb. 63 ; 27 E. R. 36.

959. Jurisdiction of justices out of sessions—To vary recognisances—Amount of recognisance.]—Justices out of sessions, when a person is brought before them on a sessions warrant to enter into a recognisance with sureties, under an order by the quarter sessions, have no power to vary the amount of the recognisance, etc., required by the latter.—ANON. (1838), 2 J. P. 232.

960. ——— To commit in default of recognisances.]—Articles of the peace were exhibited against A., at quarter sessions of the county of H., & he was, by that ct., ordered to enter into recognisance, before one or more justices of H., to keep the peace for six calendar months thence ensuing. Under the warrant of two justices of H., A. was brought before two justices of the same county to show cause why he should not enter into the recognisance ; & he then refused to do so ; whereupon the justices last mentioned committed him to the county gaol for the then residue of six calendar months from the date of the order of quarter sessions, unless in the meantime he should enter into the recognisance :—Held : the justices had no power to commit ; & prisoner was entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus.—Re ASHTON (1845), 7 Q. ##### (b) Adjournment of Matter under Consideration.

976. To next or subsequent sessions—General rule.]—By Prison Act, 1865 (c. 126), s. 24, the necessity for the alteration or enlargement of an existing prison shall be proved by the presentment of two or more visiting justices, & the consideration of such a presentment shall not be entertained unless not less than three weeks' notice has been given, in some newspaper circulating in the district of the prison authority, of their intention to take the same into consideration at a time & place to be stated in the notice. Due notice having been given that the presentment of justices as to certain gaols would be taken into consideration at the Apr. quarter sessions for the county of W. the presentment was taken into consideration at those sessions & it was resolved that the matter should be referred to a select committee to inquire into it & report to the Oct. sessions. At the Oct. sessions the report was taken into consideration without any fresh notice having been given, & an order was made in conformity with the report:—Held: the power of adjournment was inherent in the ct. of quarter sessions & it was competent to the ct. to adjourn the matter from the Apr. to the Oct. sessions; they had in effect done so, though not formally; a fresh notice for the Oct. sessions was not necessary; & the order was therefore valid.—*R. v. defts., being justices of the peace, were assembled in a police office to adjudicate upon an information against A. for an offence against a penal statute, & were proceeding to hear & determine the same, when pltf., being an attorney entered the police office with the informer, not as his friend or as a spectator, but for the avowed purpose of acting as his attorney & advocate touching the information; & as such attorney & advocate, without the leave, & against the will, of the justices, was taking notes of the evidence of a witness then under examination before them, touching the matter of the said information, & was acting & taking a part in the proceedings as an attorney or advocate on behalf of the informer; that the above two defts. stated to pltf., that it was not their practice to suffer any person to appear & take part in any proceedings before them as an attorney or advocate & requested him to desist from so doing; & although they were willing to permit the pltf. to remain in the police office as one of the public, yet that he would not desist from taking a part in the proceedings as such attorney or advocate, but asserted his right to be present, & to take such part, & to act as such attorney & advocate for the informer; & unlawfully, & against the will of the justices, continued in the police office, taking part & acting as aforesaid, in contempt of the justices; whereupon, by order of the above two defts., the other defts. turned pltf. out of the office:—Held: this was a good plea, inasmuch as no person has by law a right to act as an advocate on the trial of an information before justices of the peace, without their permission.

At the quarter sessions, the justices usually require that gentlemen of the bar only should appear as advocates; but in remote places, where they do not attend, members of the other branch of the profession are permitted to act as advocates. Persons not in the legal profession are not allowed to practise as advocates in any of these cts. —In the city of York, which was incorporated before the time of memory, there had been a ct. from very ancient times, held first before the mayor & bailiffs, & after a charter of Richard II., before the mayor & sheriffs. By a bye-law made in 1556, by a select body of the corpn. who had immemorially made rules & regulations as to the practice of the ct., & who had at their discretion selected the persons admitted to practice as attorneys, there, it was ordered, that from thenceforth there should be no more than four persons admitted to be attorneys in the sheriff's ct.; & from that time it did not appear that any more than that number had ever been allowed to practice:—Held: the bye-law was reasonable, & the usage limiting the number of attorneys to four was sufficiently ancient to satisfy 2 Geo. 2, c. 23, s. 11.—*R. v. 1000. Power to regulate own practice.]—By a rule made by the justices of the West Riding of Yorkshire at their sessions, they had provided that all intended applications, for orders in bastardy should be entered in a book, kept for the purpose in the clerk of the peace's office, before twelve o'clock at noon, on the second day of the sessions. The overseers of a parish having made an entry, did not appear to support the case when it was called on in its order. Deft., who was present to defend himself from the charge, thereupon applied to the ct., under the proviso in Poor Law Act, 1834 (c. 76), s. 73, for his costs, as on a case, where, "upon the hearing of such an application, the ct. had not thought fit to make any order." The ct. having made an order for costs against the overseers, they were indicted for refusing to obey the order:—Held: this was a sufficient application & hearing, to give the magistrates jurisdiction to make the order, regard being had to the rule, which it was competent for them to make for the regulation of their own practice.—R. v. STAMPER (1841), 1 Q. B. 119; 4 Per. & Dav. 539; 10 L. J. M. C. 73; 5 J. P. 450; 5 Jur. 841; 113 E. R. 1075.

1010. ——— ——The quarter sessions of the county of L. made rules to regulate the payment of moneys by the treasurer for the expenses of the gaols & houses of correction, by which the expenses were to be from time to time certified by two visiting justices, & then to be paid by the county treasurer. It was the custom to allow refreshments to the justices & jurors at the sessions held at the ct. house in one of the gaols, & to charge them as part of the expenses of the gaol. At a public inquiry into the conduct of a county ct. judge in Nov. 1851, refreshments were furnished to those who attended, & two visiting justices ordered the amount to be paid by the treasurer. At an adjourned general sessions in Sept. 1852, this payment was disallowed in the accounts of the treasurer, & an abstract of his accounts, with this disallowance, was transmitted to the Secretary of State, in pursuance of County Rates Act, 1852 (c. 81), s. 50. At the annual sessions in June, 1853, the disallowance was rescinded, & the payment allowed. On motion to quash the order of sessions of June, 1853, which had been brought by certiorari:—Held: the quarter sessions in June, 1853, had no power to review & rescind the decision of the quarter sessions in Sept. 1852.—*R. v. d. ————Any party who considers himself aggrieved by a con-to the Quarter Sessions was given to any person thinking himself aggrieved by any order or decision of the comrs. under that Act:—Held: a person, who would otherwise have been entitled to appeal against an order of the comrs. directing payment out of a certain fund of expenses not properly chargeable thereon, was precluded from appealing by having originally assented to that application of the fund.—R. v. HARROP (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 64; 20 J. P. 627.

1016. — After consent to be dealt with summarily—Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 12.]—Where a person charged before a ct. of summary jurisdiction with an indictable offence elects to be dealt with summarily under above sect. & is convicted, he has no right of appeal under above Act, s. 19, which relates only to appeals from convictions under past or future Acts.—R. v. LONDON JJ., Ex p. LAMBERT, [1892] 1 Q. B. 664; 61 L. J. M. C. 104; 66 L. T. 378; 56 J. P. 421; 40 W. R. 575; 8 T. L. R. 338; 17 Cox, C. C. 526, D. C.

1019. — — — — — Person aggrieved by part of conviction—Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (c. 58), s. 37 (1).—An information was preferred by applt. against resp. under the Defence of the Realm Regulations for a breach of the Pigs (Maximum Prices) Order, 1917. At the hearing resp. was present, & his solr. stated that he pleaded not guilty. At the end of the case for the prosecution resp.'s solr. submitted that there was no case for him to answer, but the justices overruled the objection & decided to fine resp. Resp.'s solr. thereupon withdrew his plea, & resp. gave evidence in mitigation. The justices then fined him 10s. Resp. appealed to quarter sessions, which held that resp. had a right of appeal under Reg. 58 of the Defence of the Realm Regulations, & allowed the appeal:—Held: Reg. 58 was not affected by above sect., & if a person was aggrieved by any part of the conviction, i.e. either the decision as to is guilt or the sentence, he was a person aggrieved

& had a right of appeal under Reg. 58 even if he had pleaded guilty.—HARRIS v. COOKE (1918), 88 L. J. K. B. 253; 119 L. T. 744; 83 J. P. 72; 16 L. G. R. 850, D. C.

1042. General rule—Within seven days after decision.—An appeal from an order of justices under Distress for Rent Act, 1737 (c. 19), ss. 4, 5, by a person adjudged guilty of fraudulently removing goods to prevent a distress, is subject to the conditions & regulations prescribed in Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), ss. 31 (2), 32, & therefore, notice of appeal must be given within seven days after the decision appealed against.—*R. v. Fourteen days' notice of appeal is required to be given to the overseers, & twenty-one days to the assessment committee. The next quarter sessions for the county of Lancaster were held on June 28, & by adjournment at Kirkdale on July 13. B. duly served his notice of appeal for the Michaelmas quarter sessions, which commenced at Lancaster on Oct. 18, & were held at Kirkdale by adjournment on Nov. 2. The justices having refused to hear the appeal on the ground that B. should have given the requisite notices for the sessions held at Kirkdale on July 13:—Held: the justices were wrong inasmuch as time for giving notice of appeal must be calculated in reference to the first day of the commencement of the sessions at Lancaster, & not to the first day of the adjournment thereof at Kirkdale.—*R. v. On Sept. 25, he entered into the recognisance as required by the local Act. At the hearing, the appeal was dismissed because the recognisance was not entered into within three days after all the notices had been served. By the local Act, a power of appeal is given, such applt. first giving ten days' notice in writing of his intention to bring such appeal, & of the cause thereof, to the person who is intended to be or may be affected by such appeal, & within three days after such notice given entering into a recognisance to try such appeal, etc.:—Held: service on one of the joint owners was good service for all, & the recognisance therefore was properly entered into.—R. v. The addressing of a notice of appeal under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 31, to the clerk of the justices, instead of to the justices personally, from whose decision the appeal is laid, is a sufficient & valid form for the notice.—R. v. appeal, upon the person entering into recognisances & giving notice in writing, to the convicting magistrates, of his intention to appeal. A person convicted under this Act expressed his intention to appeal; entered into the recognisances, & requested the magistrates' clerk to prepare the notice for him, but the latter declined so to do. The magistrates told applt., that they were then obliged to separate; but that if he left the notices at any time that day with their clerk, his so doing should be good service upon them. He did not send the notices until shortly before sessions; & for want of a proper notice sessions refused to hear the appeal. Applt. swore, that he believed at the time that he had done all that was necessary to secure his right of appeal:—Held: the magistrates ought either to have waited together a reasonable time to give applt. an opportunity to prepare his notice, or should have directed their clerk to do it for him; & the appeal ought therefore to be heard.—*R. v. Notice of appeal was served on resps., at half-past nine o'clock, a.m., on Dec. 31. Sessions commenced at ten o'clock, a.m., on Jan. 7, at which time the appeal was entered, but by the practice of sessions the hearing of the appeals was adjourned until Jan. 30:—Held: (1) the notice of appeal was given one day too late, as the words "at least" exclude both the day of giving the notice & the first day of sessions; (2) the fraction of a day could not be considered, so as to render the service of the notice good; (3) the time within which notice of appeal was to be given ought to be computed up to the day on which the appeal was entered, & not to the day on which the appeals were heard.—*R. v. 1. Form of recognisance.—The recognisance was filed by applt., instead of being sent to the clerk of the peace by the justice who took it; & the condition therein was to appeal to the "general quarter or general sessions," & not to the "ct. of general sessions of the peace":—Held: a sufficient compliance with the statute.—R. v. ESSERY (1878), 7 L. R. 290.—CAN.

1067. Entering into recognisances—Time for—After notice of appeal.—On an appeal from a ct. of summary jurisdiction to a ct. of quarter sessions, applt. first entered into recognisances & then served notice of appeal instead of entering into recognisances after giving notice of appeal. W. was summarily convicted at petty sessions of an offence, & sentenced to imprisonment, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, sect. 12 of which Act gives a right of appeal against convictions under it, & provides, "that the execution of every judgment so appealed from shall be suspended, in case the person so convicted shall immediately enter into recognisances, etc." The conviction was on Thursday, May 2, & deft. was at once sent to gaol. On Saturday, May 4, an attorney was applied to by his friends to appeal on his behalf, & he was ready on that day to tender the requisite sureties, but no justices sat. On the Monday following, the sureties were tendered, but rejected, as being offered too late. Upon a motion to this ct. for a rule calling on the justices to take such recognisances:—Held: it was not necessary, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, s. 12, that bail should be tendered & the recognisances entered into at the time of the conviction; but it was sufficient that the application to the justices to take the recognisances be made promptly & expeditiously, according to the circumstances of the case; & in this case deft. had come promptly, according to the circumstances of it.—*R. v. 1074. — [REDACTED] —.]—On May 21 a metropolitan police ct. magistrate convicted appcts. of offences under Finance Act, 1910. On Saturday, May 25, they gave notice of appeal. Appcts. were informed at the police ct. & by the prosecutors that if they applied to enter into recognisances on May 29 they would be in time. They did so, but the magistrate refused to take the recognisances, on the ground that they had not applied within three days after the day on which they gave notice of appeal within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 3 (3). Appcts. now moved for a rule nisi for a mandamus directing the magistrate to take the recognisances on the ground that the question decided by him was not for the magistrate but for quarter sessions. 1077. — Remain in force on wrongful dismissal of appeal.] — (1) A. was convicted under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, on Saturday, Mar. 24. On Mar. 28, the convicting justices were told that A. intended to appeal, & recognisances were duly entered into before them, which recited that A. had given notice of appeal. A. was thereupon discharged from custody. The next sessions were held on Monday, Apr. 2, when the appeal was entered, but sessions confirmed the conviction, upon the ground that notice of appeal had not been given in accordance with a rule of sessions, requiring, in all cases not otherwise provided for, a notice of appeal to be given to resps. on the Saturday se'nnight previous to the sessions, & re-committed A. to gaol:—Held: sessions, having improperly declined to hear the appeal, had no right to commit A., & therefore the custody was illegal & the recognisances still in force; & the ct. ordered A. to be discharged upon the same recognisances, & issued a mandamus to sessions to hear & decide the appeal.

(2) Where a statute gives a right of appeal without any condition, it is necessary that the party appealing should give notice of appeal to the other side.

(3) It [the appeal] cannot be said to have been abandoned by applt., because within reasonable time (which the word "immediately" in that sect. 1079. Deposit in lieu of recognisance—Time for—Within three days after notice of appeal.]—By Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 31 (2), applt. from an order of a ct. of summary jurisdiction shall, within seven days after the decision give notice in writing of his intention to appeal, & of the general grounds of such appeal. By sub-sect. 3, applt. shall, within three days after giving notice of appeal, enter into a recognisance, or “ may, if the ct. of summary jurisdiction before whom applt. appears to enter into a recognisance think it expedient,” make a deposit instead. A ct. of summary jurisdiction made an order, & on the same day, gave leave to the person affected by the order, who intended to appeal, to make a deposit, & fixed the amount. Four days later, notice of appeal was given. The ct. of quarter sessions refused to hear the appeal. On application for a mandamus to compel sessions to hear the appeal:—Held: the intention of Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 31 (2), (3) was that the ct. allowing a deposit should have the notice of appeal before them, & the allowance before the notice of appeal had been given was invalid, & therefore the refusal to hear the appeal was right.—*R. v. 1082. Appeal entered after time—No jurisdiction to hear.]—An order of removal, made on July 29, 1843, & suspended, was served with the examinations on Aug. 7. On the following Oct. 14, a notice, dated Sept. 6, was served on resps., that appls. intended at the next quarter sessions to enter & try an appeal. The next sessions were held on Oct. 17, & by the practice of the sessions eight days' notice of trial was required.

Resps., considering the notice insufficient, did not attend the Oct. sessions, & heard nothing more of the appeal till Feb. 15, 1844, when they received from appls. a copy of an order made at the Jan. sessions, 1844, quashing the order of removal, & directing resps. to pay £5 costs, to appls. On an affidavit of resps., stating these facts & that they "were informed & believed" that no appeal had been prosecuted, or entered & respited at the Oct. sessions:—Held: this affidavit, uncontradicted, made out a sufficient prima facie case that no proceedings were taken at the Oct. sessions, at which, being the next practicable sessions after the date of the order, appls. were bound to enter, & either to try, or to respite their appeal; & not having done so, the Jan. sessions had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal.—*R. v. these grounds appeal against your order." On Sept. 29 copies of depositions were applied for & received on Sept. 30. Notice of intention "to commence an appeal at the next general quarter sessions" was duly received on Oct. 8. At the next quarter sessions, held on Oct. 16, the appeal was not entered or respited; & resps. applied for costs, which were, however, refused. On Oct. 20 the paupers were removed. On Dec. 23 another notice of appeal, & grounds of appeal, were served. At the next sessions, held Jan. 8, 1857, both parties appeared: but, after argument, the justices refused to hear the appeal:—Held: (1) the justices acted rightly, & appls. ought to have entered & respited the appeal, even though they could not have tried it, at the Oct. sessions; (2) in judging of the "practicability" of the next sessions, the time of service of the order of removal was the proper time to reckon from.—*R. v. The Liverpool United Gas Co., being dissatisfied therewith, on Aug. 3, applied to the union assessment committee for relief; but the committee declined to grant it. The next sessions for the borough of Liverpool were held on Sept. 1, but no appeal against the rate was then entered. The co., having given the twenty-one days' notice required by Union Assessment Act, 1864 (c. 39), s. 1, moved to enter an appeal against the rate at the sessions held on Oct. 26, contending that the sessions of Sept. were not the next practicable sessions after the decision of the assessment committee, inasmuch as it would leave them only six days before the twenty-one days, which was not a sufficient time to enable them to determine whether they would appeal or not. The recorder, yielding to this argument, allowed the appeal, to be entered & respited at the Oct. sessions:—Held: it was competent to this ct. to review the decision of the recorder, upon a motion for a prohibition; & he was wrong in holding the Sept. sessions not to be the next practicable sessions, & consequently he had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal at the Oct. sessions.—*LIVERPOOL GAS CO. v. 1127. — Withdrawal of one justice.—[A publican, having been refused the renewal of his license, appealed to quarter sessions. Four justices heard the case, & were equally divided, whereupon one of the justices withdrew in order that there might be a majority, & then the appeal was dismissed with costs. E. then applied for a mandamus to hear, so that the decision might be come to by a majority pursuant to 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 9:—Held: 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 9, did not apply to quarter sessions; & though at quarter sessions, in case of equality of votes, the usual course is to adjourn the hearing; yet there is no rule of law compelling this course, & if one justice withdraw, the High Ct. will not interfere with any judgment entered by quarter sessions thereupon.—*Ex p. 1128. To review own decision.—Where sessions have decided an appeal without any reservation they cannot, at a subsequent session, enter continuance of the appeal, on the ground of having been committed on the hearing, proceed to re-hear the appeal. Having once finally decided, they cannot, at a subsequent session, review the decision.—R. v. MIDDLEBURY (INHABITANTS) (1830), 9 L. J. O. S. M. C. 44.

1129. — Or adopt that of different court.—A ct. of quarter sessions cannot, even during the same sessions, judicially vary a decision already given, unless the ct. be composed of the same justices who gave that decision, although a ct. can adopt, by a ministerial order, a decision given by a ct. differently constituted.

The assessment sessions, on July 7, 1886, made an order allowing an appeal with costs. On July 20, 1886, the ct. being differently constituted, the assessment sessions varied the order of July 7 by directing that both parties to the appeal should bear their own costs:—Held: the order of July 20 must be quashed.—*R. v. pending an appeal to quarter sessions. The conviction was affirmed, but the sentence was altered. No fresh warrant of commitment was made out by the recorder at quarter sessions, but the original conviction by the magistrate was altered by the recorder in accordance with his sentence. Pltf. was then taken to prison, & the only documents handed to the governor of the prison were a copy of the original conviction by the magistrate as altered by the recorder & the original warrant of commitment by the magistrate. He was detained in prison for some days, when the conviction was quashed upon other grounds & he was released.

In an action for false imprisonment against the clerk of the peace of the borough & the governor of the prison for unlawfully imprisoning pltf. :—Held: the action could not be maintained against the clerk of the peace, as he was merely a ministerial officer & his act was a ministerial act; but the action was maintainable against the governor, as he was not justified in receiving pltf. into custody & detaining him without a fresh warrant of commitment by the recorder, & the documents which the governor received were not equivalent to such warrant of commitment, & the governor was liable in damages to pltf.—DEMER v. COOK (1903), 88 L. T. 629; 19 T. L. R. 327; 47 Sol. Jo. 368; 20 Cox, C. C. 444.

K. The Order.

1131. Form of—Reasons need not be stated.]—[On appeal] sessions need not set forth the reason of their judgment.

If the sessions reverse the first order, & that being removed appears to be good, this ct. must intend it was reversed on the merits, & affirm the order of sessions. If the sessions reverse the first order, & that being removed, appears not to be good, we must intend it was reversed for form, & affirm the order of reversal (per CUR.).—*SOUTH CADBURY (INHABITANTS) v. The ct., therefore, will not, since Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), s. 47, which directs overseers to render quarterly accounts over which quarter sessions have no jurisdiction, presume in aid of an order dealing generally with "accounts," that they are the annual accounts over which they have juris-

1142. Where appeal dismissed for want of jurisdiction.]—An inhabitant of the parish of H. gave notice of appeal to quarter sessions against the allowance of the surveyor's accounts. At sessions, the ct. dismissed the appeal for want of jurisdiction, under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), & ordered applt. to pay the costs:—Held: sessions had, under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 5, jurisdiction to order the payment of costs; but, semble: they would have had no such jurisdiction under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50).—*R. v. H. thereupon gave notice of appeal to the convicting justices & to M. Both the justices & M. handed their notices over to the attorney for the said local board, & he conducted the defence on the behalf of such local board. The quarter sessions quashed the conviction with costs; & the clerk of the peace directing the costs to be paid by resps., the costs were taxed, & being unpaid, application was made to justices for a warrant against the goods of M. for the amount. Upon the order of quarter sessions being removed into this ct.:—Held: (1) it was bad in ordering the costs to be paid by resps., who were the convicting justices, & M., for that it should have been made upon the local board, who were the parties appealed against; (2) as the order was valid, except as to that part which related to costs, it should be quashed as to that part only.—*R. v. 1151. Form of—"Costs."]—At the hearing of a respited appeal against a poor rate, the appeal was dismissed, on the non-appearance of applt., & sessions made the following order: "Surrey, to wit. At the general quarter sessions of the peace, holden at St. Mary, Newington, on etc. Whereas, at the last general quarter sessions of the peace, holden in & for the county of Surrey, appeal was then made at this ct." The appeal was then recited, & the entry & respite thereof "until the next general quarter sessions, to be holden in & for the county of Surrey." It then ordered the appeal to be dismissed, & further "that said applt. do forthwith pay to said resps. the sum of £115 costs." On motion for a certiorari:—Held: the order was good, although no notice had been given that more than nominal costs would be asked for; it sufficiently showed that it was made at quarter sessions holden in & for the county of Surrey; & the term "costs" showed, with sufficient certainty, that they were costs of the appeal.—*LONDON & BRIGHTON RY. 1152. Contents of—Payment to clerk of the peace.]—A mistake in ordering costs to be paid directly to the party to the appeal instead of to the clerk of the peace, is not a defect of jurisdiction, but merely erroneous procedure; & therefore, where such an order had been made under an Act taking away the certiorari, the ct. refused to set it aside when brought before them by certiorari.—*R. v. arbitrator's award shall be entered as the judgment of the ct. of general or quarter sessions in the appeal. The award was subsequently entered as the judgment of the sessions, in its terms, which, after dismissing the appeal, confirming the assessment, & directing applt. to pay his own costs, were, that applt. "pay to resps. their costs of the said appeal & of this reference." The amount of the costs of resps. was duly ascertained & made part of the judgment. Subsequently the order of sessions founded on the award was removed into the Ct. of Q. B. by certiorari, to be enforced under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 18. A rule nisi for quashing the writ of certiorari & order of sessions, having been obtained on the ground that under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 5, the order ought in conformity with Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 27, to have directed payment to be made to the clerk of the peace, & not to resps.:—Held: (1) as payment of costs to the party was authorised by Poor Relief Act, 1744 (c. 38), s. 4, the order of sessions was good, & had been rightly removed into this ct. for the purpose of being enforced under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 18; (2) in founding an application under the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 18, it was enough to show neglect to obey an order of sessions within a reasonable time; (3) Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 27, applied only to appeals against summary convictions & orders of justices mentioned in that Act.—*R. v. They also offered to pay applts. all reasonable costs up to that time incurred by them, & all costs of maintenance; & warned them that all future costs incurred by them in prosecuting & trying the appeal, would be at their peril. Applts. applied at the ensuing sessions to have the appeal heard, & the order quashed generally. Sessions quashed the order, with a special entry in the form desired by resps., & allowed applts. their costs up to the time of the notice of the abandonment, & the costs of coming to sessions. 1161. ———.]—Upon an application to justices to enforce payment of a highway rate pursuant to Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 5, & Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 27, notice of appeal was given under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 105, & recognisances duly entered into. The appeal was entered, & upon the hearing the rate was confirmed, subject to a case: the clerk of the peace made a note in the minute book of the sessions, "Costs agreed to be taxed out of ct."; the order of sessions was afterwards confirmed, & the costs were at a subsequent time taxed & allowed at £33 7s. Nothing was said at sessions about the costs; but, by a rule of sessions made in 1843, it was ordered that "the costs of every appeal tried should be taxed by the clerk of the peace during the same sessions, & be paid by the party against whom the ct. should decide such appeal, unless the ct. should then make any order to the contrary":—Held: it was not competent to applt. under the circumstances to object that the taxation had taken place out of sessions, that having been brought about by his own consent.—*FREEMAN v. 1164. ——— Adoption at adjourned sessions.]—It is no objection to an order, that the amount of costs, having been in the meantime taxed by the clerk of the peace, was inserted in the order at an adjourned sessions, as the circumstances of the case warranted the conclusion that the parties assented to such a course. Qu.: whether, without such consent, the adjourned sessions would have had jurisdiction to insert in the order of a matter heard at the original sessions.—R. v. of the peace taxed the costs under protest of applt.'s attorney. Sessions had been adjourned, & before the day of adjournment the costs were certified, & the amount was inserted in the order of sessions. The order was removed into this ct. in Mar. for the purpose of enforcing it:—Held: the order of sessions purporting on the face of it to be drawn up by the ct. in the absence of any direct statement that it was not so drawn, will be presumed to have been rightly made; & there had been a sufficient adoption of the taxation by the adjourned sessions, although no mention of the amount was made in ct.—R. v. Where there was an appeal against a rate made by comrs. under a town improvement Act, & applt. succeeded, & sessions made an order for his costs, which resps. declined to pay, stating that they had no funds out of which to pay them, & that they should dispute the validity of the order, & no steps were taken under the sects., but applt. applied to this ct. for a rule for a mandamus commanding resps. to make a rate for the payment of such costs, the rule was refused.—AUSTIN v. 1170. — Case stated under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49).]—A special case, expressed to have been stated under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), only, was stated on the application of an informant, the information having been dismissed. An objection was taken that the appeal could not be heard, on the ground that the informant was not a person aggrieved within sect. 33 of above Act:—Held: having regard to sect. 33, sub-sect. 2 of above Act, the provisions of the two Acts as to stating cases must be read together, & the informant being a party to the proceeding, the appeal could be heard.

D., the freeholder, contended that the ct. was private property for the sole use of the tenants, & was not a street. On the tenant being convicted:—Held: D. was not a “a person aggrieved,” & was not entitled to have a special case stated under Summary

Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33.—DRAPERS’ Co. v. HADDER (1892), 57 J. P. 200; 9 T. L. R. 36, D. C.

He claimed that he came within the exception contained in those Acts in favour of “regular ministers of any religious denomination.” The justices were not satisfied that he came within the exception, & they found the offence proved but dismissed the information under above Act, considering it inexpedient to inflict any punishment:—Held: there had been a “determination” by the justices within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33, & the accused was entitled to appeal therefrom by way of case stated.—*OATEN v. 1181. ——— Justices hearing case.]—In a proceeding for a penalty under Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), before the justices for the county of Pembroke, against the master of a vessel for having carried sheep on board such vessel without having the places used for such sheep divided into pens, as required by the Animals Order of 1875, it was proved that the vessel brought the sheep from Ireland to New Milford, in Milford Haven, which is in the body of the county of Pembroke, & that the vessel arrived there without having the places on board for the sheep divided as required by the order. On these facts the justices determined that they had no jurisdiction to convict the master:—Held: (1) the justices had jurisdiction as the offence continued, so as to be in Pembrokeshire within the jurisdiction of the justices, when the vessel arrived at New Milford with the sheep without pens, as required by the order; (2) though Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (c. 70), s. 108, gives a power of appealing from the justices to the quarter sessions it does not deprive a party of the right to have a case stated for the opinion of the superior ct., under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43); (3) the justices having necessarily heard the case before they determined that they had no jurisdiction, the opinion of the ct. was properly applied for on a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), instead of on an application for a mandamus to the justices to hear.—MUIR v. HORE (1877), 47 L. J. M. C. 17; 37 L. T. 315; 41 J. P. 471, D. C.

E. Where Magistrates' Order Discretionary.

1182. General rule.]—(1) The power of justices to grant or refuse an order enabling a local authority to enter lands under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 305, is wholly discretionary, their decision being, therefore, final.

Pltf. applied to the justices under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 305, for an order authorising them, as the local authority, to enter upon certain lands of deft. for the purposes of the Act. The application was dismissed, but the justices stated a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), s. 2, for the opinion of this ct.:—Held: (2) the justices had no power to state a case, as this was not the determination of a complaint within Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), s. 2; (3) on a case being stated, resp. was entitled to his costs of opposing it, as without jurisdiction.—DISS URBAN SANITARY AUTHORITY v. ALDRICH (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 179; 46 L. J. M. C. 183; 36 L. T. 663; 41 J. P. 549, D. C.

F. Effect of Other Statutes.

1183. Whether right of appeal excluded—Appeal given to quarter sessions.]—The power of appeal to the quarter sessions given by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83, does not take away the jurisdiction of the magistrate under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), to state a case under that Act for the opinion of one of the superior cts. on a point of law arising under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 83.—STEELE v. BRANNAN (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 261; 41 L. J. M. C. 85; 26 L. T. 509; 36 J. P. 360; 20 W. R. 607.

Application had to be made to the deputies for any such allotment, & any person aggrieved with their decision could appeal to the justices, of the borough in petty or special sessions, whose determination was “to be final & conclusive, & not removable by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of Her Majesty's cts. of record.”

o. ——— Justices' decision made

By Leicester Extension Act, 1891, the borough had been enlarged to include certain areas called "the added areas." Appct., a freeman of the borough, & resident in one of the added areas, applied to the deputies for an allotment, but his application was refused on the ground that he was not resident within the borough as constituted at the time of the enactment of the Act of 1845. He appealed to the justices, who granted his application, but at the request of the deputies they stated a case under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33:—Held: as by Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 13, the words "ct. of summary jurisdiction" includes justices sitting under any Acts other than the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, the justices here formed a ct. of summary jurisdiction from which an appeal lay by a case stated under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (c. 49), s. 33.—LEICESTER BOROUGH (DEPUTIES OF FREEMEN) v. ### SUB-SECT. 3.—DUTY OF JUSTICES.

A. In General.

See Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43).

1186. Whether objection must be formally taken—Matter going to root of jurisdiction.]—A magistrate cannot refuse to state a case on the ground that an objection has not been formally brought to his notice, where the objection is of such a kind as goes to the root of the whole matters before him for adjudication, & one, therefore, which he must be presumed to have known.—Ex p. MARKHAM (1869), 21 L. T. 748; 34 J. P. 150; 18 W. R. 258.

1187. Discretion of justice.]—Appct. was called upon on June 26, 1909, at the instance of the chief constable of Liverpool, to show cause why he should not be ordered to find sureties to keep the peace & to be of good behaviour. The information of the chief constable stated that appct. had informed him that he intended to lead a parade of his Bible class through certain streets of Liverpool on Sunday, June 27, & that the chief constable apprehended & believed that if appct. did so the natural consequence would be a breach of the peace, riot, & disorder. Upon appct. undertaking at the hearing not to hold a procession on Sunday, June 27, he was released on bail. At the adjourned hearing on July 1, the chief constable expressed his willingness to withdraw the proceedings as the proposed object had been attained—viz. the prevention of the procession on June 27, but the magistrate refused to allow this unless appct. would enter into his own recognisances to keep the peace & to be of good behaviour, & he made an order accordingly, or, in the alternative, that appct. should go to prison for four months. Appct. refused to enter into the recognisances. A rule nisi having been obtained calling upon the magistrate to show cause why he should not state a case, the magistrate filed an affidavit in which he stated that appct. had been twice previously directed to find sureties to keep the peace, that serious sectarian riots had taken place in Liverpool on June 5 & 20 in connection with processions of appct.'s Bible class, that the chief constable had reasonable grounds for anticipating a breach of the peace if the procession had taken place on June 27, that a few days previously appct. had, in addressing a meeting, used insulting language with reference to Roman Catholics, that between the date of granting the warrant against appct. & his decision he had had to hear charges against numbers of rioters animated by sectarian animosities, & that he could not use any discretion in favour of a person who had acted as appct. had done:—Held: the rule nisi must be discharged; the magistrate had ample grounds for saying that he would not be satisfied with anything less than appct. entering into his recognisances to be of good behaviour; & he was justified in refusing to state a case; even although the day of the intended parade had passed, the magistrate had, in the circumstances of the case, jurisdiction to make such an order.—*R. v. 1296. —.]—A dispute having arisen in a workingmen's society, on the ground that L., one of the members, was working for K., who employed men not qualified, by the rules of the society, to do the work, O., one of the members, said he would use his influence to have L. turned out of the society, if he did not leave his employ. L. still continuing his work, a meeting was called, to which he was summoned. The business of the meeting was, whether L. would leave K.'s, or remain in his employ & be turned out of the society & O., being in the chair, G., another of the members, reported what had occurred at an interview which he, as a deputation from the society, had had with K. & O. then asked L. whether he intended to remain an honourable member & leave K.'s shop or stay at the shop, be despised by the club, & have his name sent round all over the country in the report of the society, & be put to all sorts of unpleasantness:—Held: this was evidence on which O. might be convicted of unlawfully, by threats & intimidation, endeavouring to force L. to depart from his hiring under 6 Geo. 4, c. 129 s. 3; but against G. the evidence was not sufficient.—*O'NEILL v. 1298. To make order that justices should have made—Case remitted to save defendant's right of appeal.]—On the hearing of a complaint against a pawnbroker, under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 14, for refusing to deliver up a pledge to the owner on payment of the loan, it appeared that the pledge had been stolen in a burglary in the pawnbroker's house, he having left it for twenty-four hours without any one on the premises; the justices were of opinion that the robbery occurred through the negligence of the pawnbroker, & adjudged that he, not having shown reasonable cause for non-delivery, should deliver up the pledge or pay the value. On appeal:—Held: the case was not within s. 14 of the Act, for that sect. applied only to a refusal to deliver back a pledge when it remained in the pawnee's possession; but the justices were right in holding that the pledge was lost by the pawnbroker's neglect, & they ought, therefore, to have made an order under s. 24 of the same Act. Semble the ct. had power under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), s. 6, to draw up an order under sect. 24.

But the ct. declined to do so, & remitted the case to the justices for re-hearing, with a view to sect. 24, in order not to deprive applt. of his appeal to quarter sessions, under s. 35 of the same Act.—*SHACKELL v. At the hearing, it was objected on his behalf that the persons assembled were there only for the purposes of refreshment. The justices being of opinion that there was no evidence to that effect, convicted applt. A case was stated for the opinion of the ct. whether, upon the facts there stated, the conviction was right or wrong. On appeal, it was contended that there was no evidence, on the facts stated, that applt. knowingly permitted the said persons to assemble:—Held: this objection, not having been raised before the justices, could not be raised upon appeal.—*PURKIS v. The Div. Ct. held that there were ample materials on the facts stated from which an agreement to pay the ordinary charges for water supplied for domestic purposes could be inferred & dismissed the appeal. On appeal it was admitted that the question as to an implied agreement was not raised before the justices:—Held: it was not open to the Div. Ct. to deal with any question of agreement between the parties or with anything but the bare question of the right of the corpn. to rate.—NORTHERN THEATRES CO. v. SHILLITO, [1925] 2 K. 1307. — — — — — Jurisdiction of justices—Subject to costs.]—Where a person, who has effected an insurance with an industrial assurance co. on the life of another person, afterwards claims the return of premiums paid under the policy, on the ground that the insurance never was a valid insurance, & the policy was void for want of insurable interest, the sect. [Collecting Societies & Industrial Assurance Companies Act, 1896 (c. 26), s. 7] does not apply, & the ct. of summary jurisdiction has no jurisdiction to determine such claim, as claimant's case then is that he never was insured with the co. at all, & therefore, he is estopped from saying that he is a person insured." In such case the objection that there is no jurisdiction in the justices can be taken before the Div. Ct., although such objection was not taken or raised before the justices, & no question as to it is left to the ct. by the justices; but the party so taking the objection may have to pay the costs thrown away by not taking the objection at the proper time.—LONDON, EDINBURGH & GLASGOW ASSURANCE CO., LTD. v. 1330. —.]—On a case stated by justices at petty sessions, the ct. does not give costs before the justices to the successful party.—SLAUGHTER v. SUNDERLAND CORPN. (1891), as reported in 55 J. P. 519, D. C.

1331. Costs of preparing & amending case.]—On an appeal from justices under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857 (c. 43), the case was sent back to be re-stated, & ultimately judgment was given for applt. with costs. On the taxation, the master allowed to applt. the costs of preparing the case beyond the fees allowed to the clerk of the justices by sect. 3 & Sched. A, & also the costs of amending the case:—Held: the taxation was right.—GLOVER v. BOOTH (1862), 2 B. & S. 807; 31 L. J. M. C. 270; 9 Jur. N. S. 76; 121 E. R. 1272.

1332. Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5—Confined to refusal to act—Not when action erroneous.]—Re CLEE & OSBORNE*, No. 646, ante.

1333. — Confined to cases whose mandamus would lie.]—A rule under above Act, s. 4, calling upon justices to do an act relating to the duties of their office, which they have refused to do, will not be granted unless mandamus to do the act would lie. When therefore magistrates had found facts in which they were prepared to commit as a rogue & vagabond, a person charged before them of an offence against Gaming Act, 1802 (c. 119), s. 2, if they had not been advised that by Vagrance Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 21, the power to commit such an offender as a rogue & vagabond had been taken away, & on that ground they refused to commit: this ct. refused a rule nisi to them to convict & sentence, or to hear & determine.—R. v. KING (1853), 18 J. P. 41.

1334. — Whether confined to cases where protection needed.]—Under above sect. it is only where justices would need protection if they proceeded to do "any act relating to the duties of their office," that a rule, calling upon them to show cause why such act should not be done, can be granted. Therefore, where justices had refused to hear a summons against a person for having a board over his door, stating that he was licensed to retail beer, etc., he not being so licensed contrary to Licensing Act, 1872 (c. 74), s. 11, the ct. refused a rule against the justices under above Acts, but granted a rule for a mandamus.—*R. v. 1335. — —.]—An information having been laid against P. under Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 51, for encroaching on a highway, the justices decided on evidence given that a claim of right set up by P. to the land alleged to have been encroached upon by him was bonâ fide & thereupon refused to hear the case on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Complainant having applied under above sect., for a rule for the justices to show cause why they should not hear & determine the case:—Held: the application was properly made, the statute not being limited to cases in which the justices need protection in the performance of their duties.

1337. — Whether applicable to doubtful cases.]—On application to the ct. under above sect., for an order on the justices to issue the warrant, the ct. held the question too doubtful to justify them in acting under above Act, & left appcts. to move for a mandamus, or to try the question by having another rate made, against which A. might appeal.—*R. v. 1338. — —.]—The school attendance committee of the Stamford union, which extends into the counties of Lincoln, Rutland, Northampton, & Huntingdon, applied to the justices of Northampton for a summons for breach of their bye-laws against the parent of a child in a parish in the county of Rutland. The summons having been refused by the justices on the ground of want of jurisdiction, application was made for a mandamus, but refused on the ground that the ct. will not grant a mandamus in cases where there is any doubt, & proceedings can be taken under above Act. Upon a rule granted under above sect.:—Held: Poor Law Amendment Act, 1867 (c. 106), s. 27, was applied to the Education Acts by Elementary Education Act, 1876 (c. 79), s. 34, & gave justices of any county included in a union jurisdiction, in cases arising under the Education Acts, over the whole of the union.—*R. v. I think that a writ of mandamus ought not to issue in this case, because the magistrates have already done more than we could order them to do. If the law requires a certain thing to be done, we may order it to be done by the party upon whom the obligation of doing it is imposed. If he is to act according to his discretion, & he will not act or even consider the matter, we may compel him to put himself in motion to do the thing, but we cannot control his discretion (BEST, J.).—R. v. NORTH RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ. (1823), 2 B. & C. 286; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 510; 2 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 155; 2 L. J. O. S. K. B. 43; 107 E. R. 390.

1351. —.]—Where a magistrate has exercised his discretion by refusing to convict on the evidence adduced before him, in support of an information, the ct. will not compel him to rehear the case, or return the proceedings which had taken place before him.—Ex p. BRITISH & FOREIGN PATENT INVENTION CO. (1839), 7 Dowl. 614; 2 Will. Woll. & H. 57.

1352. —.]—Where an information is informally laid under a penal statute & the justices dismiss the complaint, the ct. will not grant a mandamus.—Ex p. WILLIAMS (1839), 4 Jur. 171.

1353. —.]—Rule nisi for mandamus to justices to hear, as by adjournment, an application for an order in bastardy, the application for which, it was alleged, they had dismissed on the ground that the father of the mother of the bastard child was able to maintain his daughter, was obtained. Cause was shown against this rule, & the affidavits of the justices denied that such had been the ground on which they had refused the application, for that they had not been satisfied with the evidence of the chargeability, & believed the relief to have been colourable, & therefore had refused to entertain the application. It appeared, however, that the justices had questioned the mother of the bastard child as to the ability of her father to maintain her, & that this was one ground, the child itself being still an infant in arms, why they had been induced to decide that the chargeability was not made out. Witnesses, who were not heard, were in attendance to prove the chargeability, & corroborate the testimony of the mother; but the affidavits in support of the rule did not state that they were tendered:—Held: as the justices had exercised their jurisdiction, the ct. would not call on them to do so again; but as they had led those present to believe that they had decided on the ground alleged, the rule must be discharged without costs.—R. v. MARSHALL (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 169; 7 J. P. 722.

1354. —.]—Where magistrates neither neglect nor refuse to take the examination of a pauper, & do not peremptorily decline to enter into the consideration of the case, but on the contrary actually take the examination, though they refuse to make the order of removal, this ct. will not grant a mandamus commanding them to grant such order, for the ct. will presume that, if the magistrates have entered on their duty, they will have performed it in a satisfactory manner.—LLANFIHANGEL RHYDITHON (INHABITANTS) v. ROGERS, ETC., RADNORSHIRE JJ. (1843), 7 Jur. 375.

1355. —.]—The refusal to hear evidence & argument on facts admitted by the party who desires to adduce the evidence, & argue on its effect, is not a refusal to hear a case on its merits, & a writ of mandamus will not on that ground lie, to compel a fresh hearing.

On an application for an order of removal, two justices, decided, misconstruing Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), s. 1, that the pauper was not, under the circumstances of his residence in the complaining parish, removable from it:—Held: this decision was one on the merits, & therefore as the magistrates had exercised their jurisdiction, this ct. would not interfere to compel them again to entertain the application. Semble: since Poor Removal Act, 1846 (c. 66), a writ of mandamus will lie to compel magistrates who have declined jurisdiction, to hear & adjudicate, as by adjournment, on an application for an order for the removal of a pauper.—R. v. BLANSHARD (1849), 13 Q. B. 318; 3 New Mag. Cas. 94; 3 New Sess. Cas. 418; 18 L. J. M. C. 110; 12 L. T. O. S. 448; 13 J. P. 104; 116 E. R. 1285.

We cannot grant a mandamus to compel magistrates to put a right construction on an Act of

This ct., therefore, will by writ of mandamus, or rule, compel justices to hear & determine an application for an order in bastardy, which they have refused to hear on the ground that it had been made after a former application in the same matter had been dismissed. Semble: the justices may dismiss the second application if on hearing it they are of opinion that the merits were fully inquired into & determined on the previous application.—*R. v. The justices, after hearing the evidence, declined to issue the summonses, & a rule nisi for a mandamus having been obtained, they stated in their affidavit that upon the facts brought before them they did not feel justified in granting the application, but did not say that they thought the witnesses unworthy of credit:—Held: the rule must be made absolute, for although under Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (c. 42), s. 9, the justices are to issue their summons "if they shall think fit," it was here evident that they had not exercised a discretion.—*R. v. The case had been referred to the competent military authority, who gave a certificate that the offence was "one which could adequately be dealt with by a ct. of summary jurisdiction." Reg. 45 (ccc.) enumerates various documents which might be the subject matter of a charge, & the certificate did not define the particular offence for which the prosecution was to be commenced, & there being thus no direct evidence that the charge on the charge sheet was the offence which had been investigated, the magistrate was not satisfied that he had jurisdiction, & dismissed the summons on the ground that the form of the certificate was wrong, as not specifying in the manner in which the offence would be specified in an information, summons or count, the charge in respect of which the prosecution had been commenced:—Held: the certificate was prima facie evidence that the magistrate had jurisdiction to deal with any charge under the regulation, & therefore the magistrate, having wrongly declined jurisdiction, the rule for a mandamus would be made absolute.—R. v. The application for the beer license described appct. as "dwelling in a house in H., in the township of C." The certificate of character was signed by six "inhabitants of the township of C."; & the certificate of the overseer was signed by the description, overseer "of the township of C." BRIDGEND & COWBRIDGE GUARDIANS* (1864), 9 L. T. 720.

1409. —.]—Where, by an Act of Parliament, power is conferred upon justices to issue a distress warrant, "if they shall think fit," they must not refuse to issue it merely because they think the Act of Parliament does an injustice in giving such power in the particular case. Therefore, where the overseer of a parish, which had been an extra-parochial place but had been duly annexed to a union, was ordered by the board of guardians of the union to pay certain money towards the common fund & he refused to pay such money:—Held: justices could not refuse to issue their warrant, under Poor Rate Act, 1839 (c. 84), s. 1, to distrain the goods of the overseer, merely because they thought it unjust that such extra-parochial place should be compelled to contribute to the common fund of the union.—R. v. BOTELER (1864), 4 B. & S. 959; 3 New Rep. 505; 33 L. J. M. C. 101; 28 J. P. 453; 10 Jur. N. S. 798; 12 W. R. 466; 122 E. R. 718.

The guardians applied to justices under Divided Parishes & Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876 (c. 61), s. 23, for an order on the trustees to pay out of the arrears of his annuity the cost of his maintenance in relief of the union. The trustees opposed the order on the ground that the rules forbade them to so apply these funds, & the annuity was needed for the member's family. The justices made the order, but refused to issue a distress warrant:—Held: the justices were bound to issue the warrant, for the trustees ought to have appealed or applied to quash the order; & it was now no defence, that the order was invalid or made without jurisdiction.—R. v. SWINDON JJ. (1878), 42 J. P. 407, D. C.

On application, a judge in chambers, by consent, made an order on L. to pay on the old valuation till a special case should be stated:—Held: the magistrate was bound to issue a distress warrant, & a rule by way of mandamus under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 4, was properly made ordering him to issue such warrant accordingly.—R. v. MARSHAM (1883), 50 L. T. 142; 48 J. P. 308; 32 W. R. 157, C. A.

PART XIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—
B. (b).

r. To certify non-payment of costs.]
—The ct. having granted a prohibition against proceeding further with an appeal from a conviction, refused a mandamus to the clerk of the peace to certify the non-payment of costs under C. S. U. C., c. 103, s. 67.—

1413. —.]—J. was rated as occupier of premises in the D. parish, & also in G. parish, & paid the rates to D. He did not appeal against the rate made by G. parish, & on an application by the G. overseers for distress warrant, the justices having declined & a rule being moved for by way of mandamus under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5:—Held: the rule must be made absolute, but without costs.

Inasmuch as the duty of the magistrates is always considered to be a mere ministerial duty, when it is once shown that the rate is a good rate on the face of it, & it has not been appealed against, the almost universal course that the magistrates have adopted has been to issue a warrant (WILLIAMS, J.).—R. v. JEFFERSON (1884), 48 J. P. 393.

1414. —.]—Where an affiliation order has been made which is not appealed against, or where there has been an appeal to quarter sessions against the order & the appeal has been dismissed, & subsequently an application is made to justices to enforce the order by the issue of a distress warrant, the justices have no jurisdiction to enter into any inquiry as to the validity of the original order.—R. v. LANCASHIRE JJ., Ex p. TYRER, [1925] 1 K. B. 200; 94 L. J. K. B. 331; 132 L. T. 382; 89 J. P. 17; 41 T. L. R. 103; 69 Sol. Jo. 194; 23 L. G. R. 32; 27 Cox, C. C. 711, D. C.

1415. Where rate invalid.]—Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 4, does not protect a justice if he acts without jurisdiction. Sect. 5 was not intended to be acted upon in a case in which there is not a substantial point in issue. Where, therefore, overseers made a rate, & included in it property never before rated, & which property, by a great body of evidence appeared to be extra-parochial, & the justices refused to issue their warrant of distress to levy the rate, the ct. refused to compel them, under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5, to do so.—R. v. GREAT YARMOUTH JJ. (1850), 4 New Sess. Cas. 313; 16 L. T. O. S. 175; 14 J. P. Jo. 769; subsequent proceedings (1851), 15 J. P. Jo. 417.

1416. Where order invalid.]—This Court will inquire into the validity of an order of justices before compelling them under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5, to issue a distress warrant to enforce such order, & will refuse a rule for that purpose where the order appears to be invalid.

A party upon appearing before two justices upon a summons for non-payment of a church-rate, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 7, stated to the justices that he disputed the validity of that rate, & specified several objections. Whereupon the justices adjourned the hearing, to admit of the party in the meantime taking steps to dispute the rate. On the day of adjournment, no such steps having been taken, the justices made an order for the payment of the amount claimed; but afterwards declined to issue a distress warrant to enforce that order:—Held: the order was made without jurisdiction, & therefore a rule under Justices Protection Act, 1848 (c. 44), s. 5, to compel the issuing of a distress warrant to enforce it could not be granted.—R. v. COLLINS (1852), 21 L. J. M. C. 73; 18 L. T. O. S. 239; 16 J. P. 230; 16 Jur. 422.

1420. —.]—By a local improvement Act, comrs. were authorised to order the removal of nuisances, subject to an appeal to sessions. Penalties were imposed for disobeying the comrs.' orders, & the penalties were to be recovered by summary proceeding before magistrates. The comrs. having made an order, invalid upon the face of it, & that order having been disobeyed by deft., application was made to justices to convict him in the penalty provided by the statute; but they refused to convict, on the ground that the obstruction ordered to be removed was not a nuisance:—Held: that was not an exercising of the jurisdiction entrusted to them; but as the order of the comrs. was bad, a mandamus ought not to go to compel them to hear a complaint founded upon the disobedience of it.—R. v. MILLS, ETC., LAN-CASHIRE JJ. (1851), 17 L. T. O. S. 164; 15 J. P. 435.

YARBOROUGH (EARL)* (1840), 12 Ad. & El. 416; 3 Per. & Dav. 491; 9 L. J. M. C. 62; 4 J. P. 539; 4 Jur. 627; 113 E. R. 869.

1425. —.]—If a poor rate be good on the face of it, justices cannot enter into the question of the validity of such rate, for the allowance of a rate by justices is an act purely ministerial.

A poor rate had been made by the two overseers of a parish only, in a parish where there were two churchwardens who had not been sworn in; & two justices having refused to allow the rate, inasmuch as it was not made by the majority of the parish officers, this ct. directed a mandamus to the justices to allow the rate.—*R. v. According to the custom of the parishes, it had been usual to elect highway surveyors on Mar. 25, or within two or three days thereafter:—Held: (1) the order was not bad, though it did not provide for fourteen days elapsing after Mar. 25, but provided only for five clear days, though it would have been better to give more time; (2) when orders must be objected to within three months, it is sufficient to obtain a rule for certiorari within that time.—*R. v. On appeal against a poor rate, resps. objected, that in respect of one of the grounds of appeal, it was necessary, under 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 6, that notice of the appeal should have been given to the persons therein named. Appls. denied that the ground of appeal came within that sect. Sessions, however, decided that a notice was necessary to be given under the statute. After the removal of the sheep their droppings & urine remained, & a complaint was lodged against applt. by resp., who was inspector of nuisances, in respect thereof. For fifty-five years & upwards the inhabitants of the houses before which the sheep were penned had been in the habit of clearing away the droppings, & applt.’s servants never cleared them away, except in cases where houses before which the pens were placed were unoccupied. 111. —.]—Charles II., by charter granted to the corpn. of Walsall two fairs, to be holden annually within the borough & foreign, & confirmed to them all markets which they then held, with a reservation of the rights of the lord of the manor; it appeared that a market had been holden immemorially in the High street of Walsall until a very late period, when the corpn., finding it inconvenient, removed it out of the High street to another & more convenient place within the borough; the corpn. had exercised acts of ownership in pulling down an old market house & erecting a new one; the clerk of the markets, however, had been appointed by the lord of the manor, but he did not receive any toll from the persons frequenting it. Deft. having been indicted for a nuisance in erecting stalls in the High street after the removal of the market, the judge, upon the trial, left it to the jury to say whether the corpn. were owners of this market; adding, that if they were, the right of removal was incident to the grant. 118. Removal interfering with existing rights—Imposition of new tolls.]—R. v. STARKEY, No. 117, ante.

119. — Right of adjoining occupiers to set up stalls—Presumption of grant.]—The corpn. of B. were owners of an ancient market, & also lords of the manor in which the borough of B. was situate. The market had from time immemorial been held in & near the High Street. Pltf. had a house in that street, & he & the previous owners & occupiers of the house in which he lived, as well as several other occupiers of houses in the same street, had from time immemorial erected, on market days, stalls opposite their houses, & either used the stalls themselves, or let them to others. No tolls were ever taken in respect of the goods sold at these stalls, though they were formerly taken for similar produce exposed in the market elsewhere. In an action against the corpn. of B. for removing the market to another place within the borough:—Held: (1) the right to the stalls was a right which might reasonably be supposed to have been granted by the owners of the market to the owners & occupiers of the houses, & it was sufficiently connected with the enjoyment of the houses to be claimed as appurtenant thereto; (2) if the original grant were, presumably, to hold the market at any place within the borough, still the corpn. could not now remove it, as to do so would be in derogation of their own grant of the right now claimed; (3) the removal of the market was not justifiable under Public Health Act, 1858 (c. 63), or Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), inasmuch as the power conferred upon the local board by the latter Act, s. 50, was expressly qualified by the proviso that no market should be established so as to interfere with any rights enjoyed by any person, without his consent.—*ELLIS v. The corpn. devoted a portion of the waste, known as the "cricket ground," for the purposes of recreation, & they afterwards, in the exercise of their discretion, removed the cattle fair to the cricket ground. Upon information filed by the A.-G.:—Held: the corpn. were contravening the Act of Parliament, & a perpetual injunction was granted to restrain them from so using the cricket ground.—*A.-G. v. They complained that their property, which adjoined the moor, had depreciated in value owing to the noise caused by switchbacks, shooting galleries, roundabouts, steam organs, etc., brought on to the moor. For defts. it was contended that the feast did not constitute a nuisance. It appeared in evidence that from 1908 to 1911 defts. leased the conduct of this feast to a contractor, & that during that time protests were lodged by pltfs. against the nuisance thereby occasioned, but it was subsequently agreed that pltfs. should accept compensation in respect of the feasts from 1908 to 1911 without prejudice to their rights thereafter. In the year 1912 the corpn. wrote to pltfs. threatening to again hold the feast on Woodhouse Moor; whereupon a writ was issued by pltfs. to restrain them by injunction:—Held: on the facts, (1) the feasts from 1908 to 1911 constituted a nuisance & there must be a declaration to that effect, & the corpn. must pay the costs of the action; (2) with regard to the year 1912, when the corpn. conducted the feast, there was no actionable nuisance which would justify the ct. in granting an injunction.—*BEDFORD v. ### SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

132. Regulation by trustees—Validity of election.]—The London Government Scheme (Southwark Borough Market) Confirmation Act, 1907 (c. xlv) by clause 1 (1), of the scheme set out in the first schedule, provided that there should be twenty-one trustees of the borough market, of whom five were to hold office ex officio, & sixteen by appointment, & for the retirement of four of such appointed trustees in each year. The scheme provided by clause 2 (1) that "the appointment of an appointed trustee shall not be made by the borough council except after the nomination of the councillors elected for the . . . St. Saviour's Ward: Provided that if in any case the councillors entitled to make such nomination . . . fail to exercise their power within the time specified in the schedule to this scheme, the borough council shall make the appointment without any such nomination." Clause 1 of the second schedule provided that "a meeting of the councillors of St. Saviour's Ward shall be held . . . (b) for the purpose of nominating trustees in the place of trustees retiring on the termination of their term of office in Feb. in each year," & by clause 2. "The meeting of the councillors of the St. Saviour's Ward for the purpose of nominating trustees before the day of the meeting." In view of the approaching retirement of four of the appointed trustees on Apr. 1, 1920, the town clerk of Southwark summoned a meeting of the councillors of the ward, for the purpose of nominating trustees in place of those retiring in Mar., for Mar. 15, 1920, but did not summon a meeting in Feb. The ward councillors on Mar. 15, nominated the four retiring trustees for re-election, but the borough council refused to elect them, & purported to elect four other persons:—Held: the words "fail to exercise their power," were to be construed as meaning "have not exercised their power" & not as implying that the non-exercise of the power must be due to a neglect or default of the councillors of St. Saviour's Ward themselves, & the election of trustees by the borough council was valid.—*R. v. 134. ——— Prohibitory effect on trade.]—A harbour improvement co. were authorised by their private Act to establish a fish market. All fish, with some immaterial exceptions, which was landed at the port had, under a penalty, to be sold in the market. The co. had power, under their Act, to make bye-laws for "the regulation & government of the fish market & of the quay on which the same is established," & penalties were imposed on persons offending against any bye-law. One of the bye-laws made provided that "No person shall gut or cleanse any fish in the market except by the leave of the wharfmaster & in such place, if any, as may from time to time be appointed by the wharfmaster for that purpose." An order was made by the wharfmaster that, "owing to the impossibility of getting rid of the offal, no dog-fish, ray or skate, are to be gutted in the fish market." No adequate place for gutting dog-fish was to be found in the town, except the fish market. The fish were bought in the market mainly for sending away by rail, & dog-fish must be gutted as soon after they are landed as possible, as they largely consist of offal, & quickly decompose. A buyer of dog-fish, resp., gutted them in the market without obtaining leave from the wharfmaster. An information against him was dismissed on the ground that the bye-law was unreasonable, & therefore bad, as it would be impracticable to carry on the industry if buyers were prohibited from gutting fish in the market:—Held: as the effect of the bye-law was to prevent the landing of the dog-fish, or the sale of it in the fish market, where it must be sold according to the Act, without the leave of the wharfmaster, the bye-law was unreasonable & bad in law.—*SUTTON HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT CO. v. 135. ——— Restrictive effect on trade.]—A co. incorporated by private Act of Parliament owned a fish market, where all fish landed in the district for sale had to be sold. Under their statutory powers of making bye-laws for the regulation of the market & preventing nuisances therein the co. passed a bye-law prohibiting the gutting of dog-fish in the market. Dog-fish contain an unusual amount of offal & have to be gutted soon after landing; & the co. had found great difficulty in getting rid of the offal, which was a nuisance. The prohibition would have the effect of altering the conditions of the dog-fish industry, but would not put an end to it:—Held: the bye-law in the circumstances was reasonable & therefore valid.—SUTTON HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT CO. v. FOSTER (No. 2) (1920), 89 L. J. Ch. 540; 123 L. T. 549; 84 J. P. 217; 36 T. L. R. 590; 18 L. G. R. 557, C. A.

First plea: justifying under a bye-law, made by the corpn. of B., that no person should erect any booth, for the purpose of any show or public entertainment, in any public place within the borough, without the licence of the mayor, & that such licence should not be given for any other time than during the time of the annual fairs, if three inhabitants, householders residing within 100 yards of the place intended to be used should have previously memorialised the mayor, in writing, to withhold such licence: & that any such licence given for any other time than during the time of the said fairs should be revoked by the mayor, & become void, if, & so soon as, three inhabitant householders residing within 100 yards of the place for which such licence should be granted should memorialise the said mayor, in writing, to revoke the same:—Held: the bye-law was bad, as unreasonable & in restraint of trade.—*ELWOOD v. conformity with certain regulations, of which one was, "That the Midgate be kept clear of all cattle, & that the horse market be held from the Crown Inn, Westgate, to the Eight Bells Inn":—Held: the regulation would be without jurisdiction if it interfered with the limits of the market, but it & the allegation of a breach of it were supported by evidence that Midgate was a main entrance & a narrow street, that for fifty years a horse market in Midgate had not been known, that until quite lately, horses had not been stationed there, & that the person informed against had, after such order, & with notice of it, persisted in running horses for sale up & down Midgate in P.—Fox v. PALMER (1858), 22 J. P. 449.

142. — Meat—Bye-law modifying local Act.]—A local Act prohibited the sale of goods in the public highways of the town of B., under a penalty, but provided that no person should be liable to this penalty for selling goods in such parts of the town as had been theretofore used for that purpose at the time of the usual fairs & markets. Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 42, gives power, in those boroughs to which it applies, for regulating the use of the market place & fair, & the buildings, stalls, pens & standings therein, & for preventing nuisances or obstructions therein, or in the immediate approaches thereto. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 24, constituted a local board of health for the town of B., & repealed considerable portions of the local Act, but left the provisions of that Act above referred to unrepealed. These provisions of the local Act it incorporated, & it also conferred on the local board by reference to the Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), the same power of regulating the market as is conferred by that Act. The local board, acting under these provisions, made a bye-law that no meat should be sold in a particular part of the market held at B.:—Held: this was a valid bye-law which the local board had power to make, & for a breach of which a penalty might be enforced, notwithstanding the provision of exemption incorporated from the local Act.—*SAVAGE v. place which, according to pltf.'s contention, consisted of two long & narrow strips in the market town separated by the highway. Defts. interfered, their contention being that the market place was not distinct from the highway; but that the entire space upon which the markets were held was a public highway dedicated to the use of the public, subject only to the right of the owner of the soil for the time being or his lessees to hold markets thereon; & that the market place, as a highway, was vested in them, defts., as an urban authority under the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & that the proposed weighing machine would be a public nuisance, & interfere with their rights in such highway & with the public right of passage thereon:—Held: above sect. was an imperative sect., & the market authority was not only at liberty, but was bound to provide a proper weighing machine for their market, which, according to the Act, must be a permanent structure & not a movable machine.—MCINTOSH v. (2) Toll is not incident to a fair or market, but owes its origin to a separate grant, & exists as a subordinate franchise appurtenant to the fair or market, differing in this respect from the Ct. of Piepowder, which is incident to a market.

(3) Although it may be true that an unlicensed change of fair days does not ipso facto work a forfeiture of the fair franchise, but only constitutes a ground of forfeiture of which the Crown may, or may not, take advantage, yet an unlicensed change of fair days precludes a lord who is entitled by his subordinate franchise of toll to levy fair toll on the original fair days from levying such toll on the altered days.

(4) A fair toll is payable to the owner of a franchise of fair toll in respect of goods sold in his fair, or brought into his fair for sale, whether he be owner of the soil or not, & has nothing to do with the ownership of the soil. Stallage, on the contrary, is paid in respect of some usage of the soil, & can be exacted only by the owner of the soil.

(5) There is no rule of law against preferential market tolls. So long as the lord of the market toll does not exceed the maximum sum that he is entitled to demand, that is, a reasonable amount, where no sum is specified by his charter, he is entitled to remit the whole or any part of the toll to whomsoever he pleases.—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. With respect to the market toll, supposing there was no market before the charter of George III. then the toll will be a good one, although the word, confirm, is used in the charter, because it might be introduced only in case it should be requisite. It is said that the King cannot grant a new toll in an old market. But in this case you must be satisfied that there was a market of which the public was in the full enjoyment, without paying any toll, before this matter can come into question; but there does not seem any evidence of that. If there was an old market, at which the toll was received, there is an end of the question that way; & if there was not, then the charter of Geo. 3 grants a new one, which is good for a reasonable toll, according to those paid in other places in the county (TINDAL, C.J.).—LANCUM v. 191. — Grant of new market.]—The grant of a fair cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuetudinibus ad hujusmodi feriam pertinentibus does not give a right to take tolls. In an action for tolls at a fair, pltf. gave evidence of immemorial usage. Deft., in answer, produced a grant of the fair by Henry III., with the above words. The judge told the jury that consuetudines generally meant tolls, but that, if the context raised a doubt, the expression might be interpreted by usage. It was also a question at the trial whether the charter was the original grant, or only a confirmation, of which some probability appeared. A verdict being given for pltf., this ct. granted a new trial, on the ground that the jury, if they believed the charter to be the original grant, would have been misled as to its effect by the above direction.—EGREMONT (EARL) v. 194. Grant of market with toll within legal memory—Presumption of existence of toll from time immemorial.]—In 1220, the manor of Cheltenham, with a market & fair, was granted by Henry III. to the inhabitants for four years. Charles I. granted the manor in fee to persons through whom pltf. claimed, with all & singular the tolls due by reason of markets, etc., within the lordship. From time immemorial until 1786, there was a market house in the High Street of Cheltenham belonging to the lord of the manor, & 1d. per basket for butter sold there & 1d. per pot for butcher's meat hawked about the town was paid, & from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per day was paid to the occupiers of houses for stalls erected before the houses, & 1d. to the lord. From 1786 down to the present time, different local Acts have been passed under which a new market house has been erected; but in all the Acts the rights of the lords of the manor were strictly preserved. As long as living witnesses can remember, a board has been fixed in the market with the market tolls, & the tolls payable by all persons hawking about the town fish, fruit, vegetables, or other articles for which no toll has been taken in the market (inter alia), 1s. for every waggon, cart, horse, or ass load. These tolls were proved to have been collected regularly, as of right, since 1810 till 1863, when deft. refused to pay pltf., the present lessee of the tolls, the toll of 1s. for a cartload of vegetables & fruit brought into & hawked about the town. On a case in which the ct. were to draw inferences of fact:—Held: (1) on the facts it ought to be presumed that the toll of 1s. had been taken from time immemorial, & if the doctrine of rankness applied, the other facts went to show that 1s. for a cartload of vegetables was not unreasonable in the time of Richard I.; (2) a lawful origin of the toll might be presumed within legal memory, by means of a dedication of the streets to the public & a contemporaneous reservation of this toll on the part of the Crown, between the time of Henry III. & Charles I.; (3) the claim might be sustained as a reasonable toll, which might vary in amount with the value of money.

A toll reasonable in amount, but varying from time to time according to the value of money, is valid in point of law (KELLY, C.B.).—LAWRENCE v. HITCH (1868), L. R. 3 Q. 195. Grant of customary tolls.]—An Act of Parliament, the preamble of which recited the grant of a market, & that it was expedient that provision should be made for the better regulating of the market, & for the more easy collection of the tolls & dues payable in the market, enacted, that it should be lawful for the owner of the market to take from all persons who should place, pitch, or expose for sale, within any part of the market, any fruits, etc., all such tolls as are usually collected or taken within the said market, or which are payable for or in respect of the same:—Held: the owner of the market, although not entitled at common law to any toll, might, under this clause of the Act, recover such tolls as, at the time of passing of this Act, were usually paid in any part of the said market; & although the tolls then usually paid in respect of the same articles were different in different parts of the market.

A mere market toll is payable by the buyer only, but in addition to this, other tolls are payable by the seller to the owner of the soil. Of this last are stallage & piccage, which are very distinguishable from a common market toll. . . . The Act not only transfers the toll [to] the seller [from] the buyer, but also imposes it on the seller, where there is no buyer. It goes further, therefore, than a mere market toll, & seems to me, to include the case of a stallage & piccage toll (BAYLEY, J.).—BEDFORD (DUKE) v. EMMETT (1820), 3 B. & Ald. 366; 106 E. 196. General rule—Payable on live cattle only.]

—(1) Toll is not incident to a fair at common law & nobody can have toll in a fair without grant or prescription.

(2) The Crown can grant toll with a new fair if the toll is reasonable & not excessive.

(3) Toll is payable by common law only for live cattle, not for food or other goods; for for these the lord is satisfied in the stallage & piccage.

(4) Stallage & piccage are incident to the soil.

(5) If the Crown grants a fair or market with certain toll to A. & his heirs to be held on land which is Borough English & the grantee dies, the heir at common law will have the fair or market & toll, but the younger son will have piccage & stallage with the soil by custom.

A member of the society who had received relief in accordance with the alterations made in the rules, but was afterwards refused same, summoned the stewards of the society before defts., & sought to compel payment of the allowance prescribed by the original enrolled rules, abandoning all claim under the subsequent alterations. Defts., however, decided that the alteration in the rules took away their jurisdiction & refused to hear the complaint:—Held: they were bound to hear & determine the matter of the complaint.—*R. v. The certiorari directed the justices to send up the order of sessions with all things touching same. Under this the rate itself was not removed. The Q. B. quashed the order. On application at the next sessions, the magistrates refused to quash the rate, on the ground that they had no power, as the case was no longer before them. The Ct. of Q. B. refused a mandamus to enter continuances to quash the rate, on the ground that the ct. could not dictate to the sessions in a matter judicial.—*R. v. On an application for a mandamus:—Held: this provision does not prevent the ct. from hearing by affidavits the proceedings that took place on an appeal to the sessions, & granting a mandamus to compel an adjudication by the sessions, if the affidavits show that the justices have improperly refused to hear the appeal.

Every person . . . has not of common right a liberty of placing a stall (in a public market) but he must acquire that by a compensation which is called stallage; & if in the erecting one the soil is broken, it is called piccage. . . . It is not properly a toll, which can only be due by grant or prescription; whereas stallage is demandable in the case of a newly erected market: & the soil is no further considered as dedicated to the public, than the common right of entry goes (LEE, C.J.).—*NORTHAMPTON CORPN. v. #### A. On What Payable.

257. Fixing in ground immaterial.]—(1) Pltfs., an ancient corpn., had held markets on their land prior to & since the year 1448, & all persons, except as hereinafter mentioned, using the market with stalls, stands, or peds, which are baskets with lids, convertible into tables for exposing the wares, had paid the corpn., & had places allotted them. The manor of O. was a manor of ancient demesne, & extended into the parish of O., & certain other parishes. Several confirmation rolls recited & confirmed the stallage, etc. Some of the inhabitants of the parish of O., & of two other parishes into which the manor of O. extended, being owners or occupiers of lands in the said parishes, had attended the market during living memory without paying for their peds, & no evidence was given that such persons ever had paid. Defts. owned freehold & occupied other lands in the parish of O., but none of the tenure of ancient demesne, & used pltfs.' market with peds, but refused to pay:—Held: whatever might be defts.' liability for toll, they were at all events liable to stallage for the occupation of a portion of pltfs.' soil with their peds to the exclusion of others, though for a temporary purpose.

(2) A stall is an erection for selling goods, of which the mode of construction is immaterial, & whether it be fixed in the ground is immaterial.

(3) Stallage is money paid for holding a stall in a market, piccage for breaking ground (WILDE, B.).—YARMOUTH CORPN. v. GROOM (1862), 1 H. & C. 102; 32 L. J. Ex. 74; 7 L. T. 161; 8 Jur. N. S. 677; 158 E. R. 818.

liberties & free customs, tolls, stallage, piccage, fines, & all other profits, commodities, & emoluments, whatsoever to such market appertaining. In 1866 the then lord of the manor of Swindon, being seised of & entitled to the rights granted by Charles I., demised to pltfs. for twenty-one years all the tolls, rates, dues, & duties arising & to be collected & received at the Swindon market. The market was held in the public street, & no stalls or pens had ever been erected for the standing or separation of the cattle. Up to the time that pltfs. acquired their rights in 1866 no payment was ever demanded except upon the sale of cattle, when a small sum was paid per head either by the buyer or the seller. Pltfs. made a charge upon the vendors for stallage upon all cattle brought to the market in lieu of the tolls charged on the sale thereof. In an action against a vendor of cattle to recover this stallage:—Held: pltfs. had no right to make such charge.—SWINDON CENTRAL MARKET CO., LTD. v. PANTING (1872), 27 L. T. 578; 37 J. P. 118.

273. Exemption from "toll"—Includes stallage.]—(1) The word toll in a grant may include stallage; & if the Crown grant to H. & his heirs that they may have & hold a market in the town of E., with all tolls & profits thence arising, but neither the Crown nor H. has any right of soil in the town, if H. afterwards acquires the soil on which the market is held, he may claim stallage by virtue of the grant.

(2) A modern grant by H., a subject, holding under the Crown as before mentioned, to which certain persons, styled inhabitants of E., are parties, granting that the inhabitants of E., their heirs & assigns for ever, shall enjoy the market as freely as H. held it of the Crown, & containing a covenant by H. that they shall do so, does not exempt from stallage an inhabitant not privy to the parties to such grant. The indenture then contained a covenant by G. that the four persons & the inhabitants should have a free market toll free. An action of debt for stallage having been brought by the proprietor of the market place against deft. as an inhabitant:—Held: (1) an exemption from tolls included an exemption from stallage also; (2) the inhabitants of E. could not by that name & description prescribe for an exemption from toll, such exemption being an easement in alieno solo.—*LOCKWOOD v. 297. Corporation — Burgesses — Whether burgage tenants included.] — The seller of corn by sample in a market, is benefited by the market, as well as the seller of corn which is pitched there in bulk & sold; & if he refuses to pay the same toll which is paid by the seller of corn in bulk, an action on the case lies against him for the injury done to the market, in selling by sample. The burgage tenants in Tewkesbury are not exempt from payment of toll in the market there. Ancient charters, of obscure or dubious meaning, shall be expounded by contemporaneous usage. A grant of immunity to burgesses, their heirs & successors, was expounded by the usage to be a grant to the burgesses, corporators only; & not to the burgage tenants & their heirs. If the grantee of a royal franchise, as toll, grant an immunity thereout, & the franchise of toll afterwards become extinct by unity of possession in the Crown, the immunity does not thereby cease; & if the Crown regrants the toll, the grantee must take it still subject to the immunity.—*TWESBURY CORPN. v. 302. ——— Market ordinarily overcrowded—Notice to seller of accommodation.]—(1) The King granted to A., that he, his heirs & assigns, should have & hold a market in a place therein described, & within certain specified limits there, for the buying & selling of all kinds of vegetables, fruits, flowers, roots, & herbs. The grantee of the market had for his own profit permitted part of the space, within the limits described, to be used for other purposes than those specified in the grant. The remaining part of the space, within which the market was to be held by the terms of the grant, became insufficient for the public accommodation, & there was not, on ordinary occasions, space within the market for carts & waggons resorting thither with vegetables, etc.:—Held: the lord of the market could not maintain an action against an individual for selling vegetables in the neighbourhood of his market, & thereby depriving him of toll, even at a time when there was room in the market, without showing that on the day when the sale took place he gave notice to the seller that there was room within the market.

(2) The grantee of a market cannot maintain an action against an individual for selling goods without the market, & thereby defrauding him of the toll; without showing that he has appropriated the whole of the market space, or so much of it as the public convenience requires, to the purposes for which the market was granted.—*PRINCE v. Pltfs., the corpn. of a borough, were entitled to a market, & a local Act gave them market tolls & imposed a penalty on persons selling or exposing to sale corn, etc., within the borough in any place other than the market place. Deft.'s son, acting on his behalf, came on a market day to the house of H., occupying a house & shop in the borough near to the market place, & there sold by sample to H. twenty sacks of oats, which were not at the time exposed for sale in bulk, but were brought into the borough & delivered to H. by deft. on a subsequent market day. The Earl of L. was the owner of the market in Oct. 1838, & in Feb. 1839 he demised it to pltf.; but the market being afterwards obstructed by the building, this action was brought:—Held: defts. were liable for continuing the nuisance, although they had no right to enter upon the land to remove it, & the action was therefore maintainable.—THOMPSON v. It was proved that this would seriously interfere with the access to the market, which had been recently enlarged by throwing into it the site of houses which had been pulled down belonging to pltf.:—Held: such an exercise of the board's powers would be an interference with the rights & privileges vested in pltf. in reference to a market within the exception contained in Metropolitan Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 91, & an injunction was granted restraining the proposed action of the board.—HORNER v. C. What Constitutes a Rival Market.

322. Question of fact—Intention immaterial.]—Pltf. was the lessee of a market, granted in 1698 by Royal Charter, for weekly sales of horses & cattle, the grant & also the lease including the right to receive the market tolls; & weekly sales were regularly conducted at the market accordingly. In 1902 deft., who was an auctioneer & had been in the habit of holding auction sales of horses & cattle at the weekly market, took a field near the market for the purpose of holding sales there of horses & cattle, & then advertised that an auction sale of Welsh ponies would be held by him there upon a particular market day. On that day, after concluding his usual sale of horses & cattle at the market, he induced several of the persons present to leave the market & accompany him to the sale in his field, & the sale then took place. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. for an injunction, deft. disclaimed any intention of setting up a rival market, & excused himself by saying that the market was for various reasons an unsuitable place for the sale of the ponies, which were wild & unbroken:—Held: deft.'s acts constituted such a disturbance of pltf.'s market & invasion of his market rights as might be restrained by injunction, the question of intention being immaterial.—WILCOX v. STEEL, [1904] 1 Ch. 212; 73 L. J. Ch. 217; 89 L. T. 640; 68 J. P. 146; 20 T. L. R. 78; 2 L. G. R. 105, C. A.

329. Sales on days other than market days.]—Pltfs. were, down to 1855, possessed of an ancient cattle market in the city of London, & also a grant from the Crown, in 1326, that no market from thenceforth should be granted by the Crown to any within seven miles of the said city. In 1855 this market was closed, & a new market at Islington, without the city, opened by pltfs., under the powers given to them by, & the provisions contained in, Metropolitan Market Act, 1851 (c. 61), which expressed that the new market was to be in lieu of the old.

This Act was repealed, but substantially re-enacted with fuller provisions by Metropolitan Market Act, 1857 (c. 135), by sect. 15 of which it was provided that no new market should be opened within seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral in the city of London. The new market was within this radius. The elder deft. in 1855, before the opening of the new market, established lairs for cattle in its immediate vicinity. In the interval between one market of pltfs.' & the next a considerable number of cattle were sold in these lairs by private sale, some by the owners with the knowledge of defts., others by defts. selling on commission; cattle so sold did not find their way into pltfs.' market, & pltfs. lost the tolls on them. One uniform charge was made for lairage, whether the cattle were sold in defts.' lairs or not.

As far back as living memory goes, & down to the closing of the old market, there had been thirteen lairs within the seven mile radius in which sales had taken place as before mentioned. In the case of four of these adjoining the old market, including one of defts.', pltfs. had specific knowledge of such sales; in the cases of the others, the arbitrator found that they had the same knowledge:—Held: (1) the ct. could not presume any legal origin, in the absence of proof thereof, to the practice of selling cattle in the lairs, so as to give the owners of such lairs a right as against the owners of the old market to have such sales made in the lairs; at the most it amounted merely to a revocable licence which had been revoked. Even if such a right existed as against the owner of the old market, it could not be set up as against the owners of the new market, there being nothing in Metropolitan Market Acts to transfer such a right to Islington; (2) the acts of defts. amounted to a disturbance of pltfs.' market; but, qu., whether they were such as to constitute opening a new market.—LONDON CORPN. v. But a claim by immemorial custom to exclude others from selling such commodities on the market day, except in the market place, is valid in law. Where a market for meat, etc. was proved to have been in existence in the reign of James I., proof that the grantees of the market had for the last hundred years appointed market lookers, that no butchers' shops had existed out of the market place until 1810, & that the shops then

339. ——— Or prescription.]—The grant of a market, with the addition of the words with all liberties & free customs to such a market belonging, does not imply a right in the grantee to prevent persons selling marketable articles on market days within the limits of the franchise. Such a right may be gained by immemorial enjoyment or prescription.

Pltf. claimed to be entitled by prescription to a meat market within a borough, & as incident thereto they claimed the right to prevent butchers from selling meat in their own shops on market days within the limits of the franchise. The evidence was that from the time of living memory down to 1862 butchers who had shops in the borough closed them on market days, & resorted to the market & sold there, paying stallage: that in 1862 two butchers refused to do this, but on actions being brought submitted, & thenceforth paid toll for keeping their shops open on market days, & that deft. had paid a similar toll for some years before 1875, when he declined to continue the payment:—Held: the evidence was sufficient to support the claim to prevent the owners of shop from selling in them on market days.—PENRYN CORPN. v. borough which they should appropriate as market places, & to charge any tolls not exceeding those mentioned in the schedule to the Act, which were higher than the old accustomed tolls, & to make certain charges for weighing which could not have been made under the old franchise:—Held: there being under the Act a change of time, a change of place, an alteration of the old charges, an imposition of new charges, & an extension of the market from the township to the borough, the effect of the Act was to give the corpn. new rights of holding markets in substitution for the old franchise, & the old franchise was extinguished.

(2) The corpn. brought an action to restrain defts. from selling eggs & dried fish on market days in their shop. The shop was situated in a street which adjoined one side of one of plths.' markets, & was on the opposite side of the street from, but not opposite to, the entrance from that street to the market. 343. — Private sale yard set up by individuals.]—By virtue of a consolidating statute of 1883 the corpn. of Birmingham had the sole right to establish, & had in fact, a market for pigs. Under sect. 90 of this Act penalties were imposed upon any person selling or exposing for sale within the borough, any animals or articles, in respect of which tolls were authorised to be taken "except in some market or fair lawfully authorised, or in his own dwelling-place, shop, or place of business . . . or on any farm or land in his occupation." Defts. were an assocn. of six individuals who had set up within the borough a sale yard or private market for pigs, to which the public had access during market hours, & at which the pigs of anyone might be sold. In this sale yard there were common ways, & a common room provided for the frequenters of the market. All the sales of pigs were, however, effected through the individual members of the assocn., to whom alone the various stalls were let as yearly tenants; & a charge of 2d. had to be paid by them to the assocn. for every pig sold, whether on the premises or not. There was evidence that sales took place on portions of the yard not let to individual defts.:—Held: what defts. were doing as an assocn. & as individuals was not within the exceptions in the Act of 1883, but amounted to a disturbance of the market rights of plths., which must be restrained by an injunction.—*BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. (3) Where the first charter purported to be granted "de assensu prælatorum, comitum, etc., in instanti Parlamento convocato," a new charter granted to hold a market within the prescribed distance would be void, & would be repealable by sci. fa. The words stated would have the effect of giving the first charter the authority of an Act of Parliament.

In 1876 resp. sold fish in M. street, which then was a main thoroughfare of the town of R., but in 1882 its site was green fields; M. street was not within the market places of R.:—Held: the word "town," as used in the local Act, meant the collection of buildings from time to time called the town of R., & resp. had been guilty of an offence against that Act.—*COLLIER v. 356. — — — — — Boundaries of borough subsequently extended by statute.—By a local Act of 1822, s. 42, it is an offence punishable on summary conviction with a fine not exceeding £5 for any person to sell within "the town of Rochdale," other than within the limits of the market place there, except in the vendor's private dwelling-house or the shop any . . . vegetables or other marketable commodities or provisions, etc. Resp. sold a quantity of potatoes in a street or place within the present municipal & Parliamentary borough of Rochdale, about a mile from & not within the said market place. The limits of the town are not defined in the Act of 1822, nor has any subsequent Act defined the meaning of the expression "town of Rochdale" as used in that Act; but since 1822 the town has increased, & is now, & for many years has been, a municipal & Parliamentary borough, the boundaries of which have been extended & defined by Royal Charter & various Acts of Parliament, & the borough as now existing was constituted by a local Act of 1872 by sect. 8 of which Act the boundaries of the town & borough were extended & made co-extensive with those of the Parliamentary borough as specified in the Boundary Act, 1868 (c. 46), & the provisions of the Act of 1872, & of various other Acts specified in sect. 8, & "of all other Acts at present applying to & in force in & in relation to the existing town & borough," were to "apply to & be in force & in relation to the borough." The street or place where the sale took place was an aggregation of about a dozen houses, & was within the extended boundaries; but prior to 1822 it was outside the then municipal borough, & though there were one or more detached houses here & there along the road leading from the market places to the spot in question, there was no continuous line of buildings on any part of the road.

The justices were of opinion that the prohibition in sect. 42 of the Act of 1822 was limited to the town as it existed in 1822, & that the spot in question was not within the "town of Rochdale" within the meaning of the Act, & that the extension of the borough for municipal purposes did not give a wider meaning to the expression "town of Rochdale" so as to extend the market rights to the extended borough, & the local Act of 1872 did not extend the provisions of any local Acts to the extended borough, but only applied all municipal & general Acts relating to sanitary & local government matters in the old borough to the extended borough; & they accordingly declined to convict resp. of an offence within that sect.:—Held: the justices were wrong in not convicting resp., inasmuch as the Act of 1822 must have contemplated a growing town, & the expression "town of Rochdale" in sect. 42 was intended to include not merely the then existing but the increasing town of coming years & that, under the Act of 1872, the provisions of the Act of 1822 apply to & are in force within the extended boundaries so as to make the "town of Rochdale" mentioned in the earlier Act comprise, for all the purposes of that Act, the whole of the municipal borough as constituted by the later Act of 1872.—*KILLMISTER v. Dead pigs were tollable articles:—Held: the word "sell" in Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 13 is to be understood in a popular & not its strict legal sense; for the purpose of that sect. the pigs were sold where the agreement was made, notwithstanding that the property did not then pass; & the seller had consequently not committed an offence within the sect.—*LAMBERT v. a certain structure was not a "shop" within the meaning of the sect., because: (a) It was not of a stable & substantial character; (b) It was merely a stall, altered to evade this Act; (c) Though it was possible for a customer to go inside to purchase, yet, from its size & arrangement, it was obviously intended that the seller should stand inside, & the buyer outside. (d) It did not afford protection from rain, & goods could not be safely left there at night:—Held: though no one of these reasons was singly conclusive, yet the justices rightly considered them all as material elements in the case, & the terms for which the premises were let was also an element to be considered. Semble: the word "shop" means a place fit, not only for the sale, but also for the storing of articles, according to the nature of the business there carried on; but where, from such a cause as the perishable nature of the articles, room for storing is not required, this definition does not hold.—*POPE v. By a schedule to the Act a toll was imposed on horses:—Held: (1) a horse was an "article" within the above sect.; (2) a sale by auction of horses by A., a licensed auctioneer, in a yard attached to the dwelling-house of B., within the district, was an offence against the Act.—*LLAN-DAFF & CANTON DISTRICT MARKET CO. v. The justices dismissed the information on the ground that resp. kept a "shop":—Held: as the object of the Act was to prevent the setting up of a market which would be a rival to the corpn. market, the stall was not a "shop" within the meaning of the Act, & the justices ought to have convicted resp.—*PIKE v. 388. large yard adjoining his residence, in which were sheds & other places for sale of cattle & sheep, & he exposed there for sale two hundred sheep. The entrance to the yard was from the street through double doors. After passing through the doors there is a place about 30 feet by 20 feet, covered in by beams & flooring. Applt. resided in a small house, supported by pillars on either side of this place, the floor of his house forming the ceiling of this under space; the yard extended further back without a ceiling, to about 158 feet from the doors. There were stairs from the dwelling-house down into the covered space, & this was the communication between the yard & sheds & the house:—Held: the yard & sheds were not the dwelling-place or shop of applt., & he was rightly convicted.—*McHOLE v. 390. Large wholesale warehouse—Used for sales on commission.—The Southwark Borough market was founded by a local Act, & by an amending Act it was provided that if any poulterer, country chapman, victualler, gardener, fruiterer, fish-seller, or any other person, should sell or expose for sale by way of hawking or otherwise any poultry, fish, fruit, herbs, oatmeal, or other victuals or provision whatsoever, in any private house, lane, alley, inn, warehouse, street, stall, common passage, or other place whatsoever, within 1,000 yards of the market, but only in his own shop or shops, or in the public market place, he should be liable to a penalty. In modern times the market had become a fruit & vegetable market only, & the business carried on there was wholesale. A former salesman at the market obtained a lease of a large four storeyed building fronting the market. He used the ground floor for the sale of fruit & vegetables, the second & third floors for the storage of goods intended for immediate sale & for the ripening of bananas, & the fourth floor for domestic purposes. The business which he carried on on these premises was a wholesale business, & he sold goods on commission as well as goods of his own. In an action by the market authorities for an injunction to restrain him from carrying on this business:—Held: deft. was carrying on business in his own shop within the meaning of the Act & the action failed.—HAYNES v. FORD, [1911] 2 Ch. 237; 80 L. J. Ch. 490; 104 L. T. 696; 75 J. P. 401; 27 T. L. R. 416; 9 L. G. R. 702, C. A.

392. Whether mode of sale material—Sale by auction.—A local market Act imposed a penalty on “every person who shall sell or expose for sale at any place within the limits of the Act, other than in an existing market place, etc., or in his own dwelling-house, or in any shop attached to & being part of any dwelling-house, any article in respect of which tolls are by the act authorised to be taken,” etc. Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), incorporated in the local Act, except so far as it is expressly varied thereby, by sect. 13, imposes a penalty on any one “who shall sell, etc., except in his own dwelling-house or shop,” & is therefore varied as above by the local Act. Resp. sold goods by auction in a room in a house which was not his own dwelling-house:—Held: he was within the exemption of the local Act, the evidence being that the room was a “shop”; & it made no difference that the sale was a sale by auction.

If it was a shop, the mode of selling therein cannot deprive it of the ordinary privilege attached to a shop (BYLES, J.).—WILTSHIRE v. WILLETT (1861), 11 C. B. N. S. 240; 31 L. J. M. C. 8; 5 L. T. 355; 26 J. P. 312; 10 W. R. 44; 142 E. R. 788.

395. ———.—(1) The Comrs. of a town were by their Act incorporating the Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), empowered to set up a market and take tolls for articles sold therein. Sect. 47 of the local Act imposed tolls on all persons selling except on premises in their own occupation. Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 13, imposes penalties on all persons selling except in their own dwellings or shops:—Held: an auctioneer holding sales on a field in his own occupation could not be sued for disturbance of the market, though apart from the special Act that mode of sale would have been a disturbance of an ancient market.

(2) Where the privileges of a market have been enlarged by statute, the common law rights in respect of the market as an ancient market are gone, & its privileges are those of a modern market, as conferred by the statutory provisions. Where, therefore, upon the construction of the statutes authorising & regulating a market, the owner of land adjoining the market was not liable either for tolls or penalties for holding a rival market upon that land:—Held: the owners of the statutory market could not maintain an action for disturbance of their market by the adjoining owner but, on the other hand, must be restrained from interfering with his market by attempting to exact tolls from persons using the same.

In 1914 deft. acquired land, & occupied the same within the limits over which pltf. co.'s rights extended, & he erected thereon buildings which were used for cattle & other animals, in respect of which tolls were payable when sold in pltf. co.'s market & for selling purposes. Deft. held auction sales of such cattle & other animals every third Tuesday:—Held: the acts of deft. being confined to excepted land—that was to say, land belonging to him or in his occupation within the meaning of sect. 42 of the private Act—& the same being on days other than market days, pltf. were not entitled to an injunction restraining him from establishing a market on such land.—HAILSHAM CATTLE MARKET CO. v. 425. —.]—A franchise right to a market or fair with the tolls belonging thereto, imports a holding by the owner of the right under the Crown, either upon foot of an extent charter or by prescription which assumes the former existence of such a charter, & such a right of market is in its very nature an exclusive right, & one which imports not merely a title in the grantee to enjoy the benefits conferred upon him by the grant under which he claims title, but also a correlative obligation to provide proper accommodation for the market, & for its due regulation, & the grant is held by the grantee subject to an implied liability to its being recalled by the Crown, by proceedings by sci. fa., in case of his failure to properly discharge its accompanying obligations. But if after such a grant has been made by the Crown the three estates, which jointly constitute Parliament, step in, whether on the solicitation of the grantee or otherwise, & by their joint act create the same rights or larger or different rights of the same nature & character in favour of the grantee, it seems to me that of necessity these Parliamentary rights, emanating as they do from a paramount authority, must supersede those which the grantee was previously holding from the Crown alone, & that after the passing of such an Act there can be no continuing tenure by the grantee under his original title, nor a continuance of his prior accountability on foot thereof to the Crown (LITTLE, V.-C.).—*MANCHESTER CORPN. v. ## PART VIII. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.

d. Does not operate as ground for granting new charter to another.]—The principle that whilst the grant of a fair or market remains unrepealed the default of finding proper accommodation for the public cannot operate in point of law as a ground for granting a new charter to another to hold a market within the common law distance, applies equally to other breaches of duty involving forfeiture of grant, such as holding a fair or market on days other than those appointed by the charter.—MIDDLETON (LORD) v. POWER (1886), 19 L. R. Ir. 1.—IR.

PART IX. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.

428 i. Common law rule.]—A market duly established by a municipal council under & by virtue of Local Government Act, 1874, s. 451, is a market overt, so that the property in chattels sold therein passes, though they may have been stolen from the true owner.—WARD v. STEPHENS (1886), 12 V. L. R. 378.—AUS.

428 ii. —.]—The town of Saint John's is a market overt, & therefore the lien of the supplying merchant upon the produce of the voyage is divested by a bona fide sale of such produce in Saint John's.—BAINE, JOHNSTON & Co. v. CHAMBERS (1819), 1 Nfld. L. R. 154.—NFLD.

428 iii. —.]—A bona fide purchaser at a public market of stolen property

(c) Place of Sale.

461. What constitutes a shop—Question of fact.—The custom of the City of London with regard to sales in market overt is that every open sale in a shop or sale in an open shop in the City of London of such goods as by the trade of the owner are put there for sale, is a sale in market overt; & whether the premises in which goods are sold constitute a "shop" within the meaning of the custom is a question of fact in each case.

Pltf.'s watch was stolen & pledged with a pawnbroker, & was afterwards sold as an unredeemed pledge by public auction by auctioneers at their City auction rooms on the first floor of a building in the City of London. It was bought by a bonâ fide purchaser, & was afterwards sent to deft., a jeweller, for examination, & deft. claimed to retain it for his customer who had sent it to him. In an action by pltf. for the return of the watch or its value & damages:—Held: upon the facts of the case, the City auction rooms were not a "shop" & the sale of the watch thereat was not a sale in market overt according to the custom, & did not divest pltf. of his property in the watch.—CLAYTON v. LE ROY, [1911] 2 K. B. 1031; 81 L. J. K. B. 49; 104 L. T. 419; 75 J. P. 229; 27 T. L. R. 206; reversd. on other grounds, [1911] 2 K. B. 1046, C. A.

464. ——Need not be open to observation.]—A sale within the City of London, in an open shop, of goods usually dealt in there, is a sale in market overt, though the premises are described in evidence as a warehouse, & are not sufficiently open to the street for a person on the outside to see what passes within.—LYONS v. DE PASS (1840), 11 Ad. & El. 326; 9 C. & P. 68; 3 Per. & Dav. 177; 9 L. J. Q. B. 51; 4 Jur. 505; 113 E. R. 439; sub nom. SCILLY v. LYON, 4 J. P. 41.

467. Sale on wharf.—The owner of goods sends them to a wharf in the borough of Southwark where goods of the same sort are usually sold. The wharfinger, without any authority, sells them to a bonâ fide purchaser, who duly pays for them. This is not a sale in market overt to change the property & trover lies for the goods at the suit of the owner against the purchaser.—WILKINSON v. KING (1809), 2 Camp. 335, N. P.

486. Restitution of goods obtained by false pretences.]—The owner of goods, induced by fraud, parted with them under a voluntary contract of sale which vested the property in the fraudulent purchasers. The goods were then sold in market overt to a purchaser without notice of the fraud. The fraudulent purchasers were afterwards, upon the prosecution of the original owner convicted of obtaining the goods by false pretences. The judge before whom the prisoners were tried refused to make an order of restitution:—Held: under Larceny Act, 1861 (c. 96), s. 100, the property in the goods revested in the original owner upon conviction, & he was entitled to recover them from the innocent purchaser.—BENTLEY v. annual licensing meeting for the renewal to him of the license of a beerhouse licensed before & continuously since May 1, 1869, but it was refused on the ground of the disorderly character of the house. From this refusal H. appealed to quarter sessions, & the appeal was dismissed after a full hearing. After the expiration of the license H. applied to the special sessions for a new license in his own name, which was refused on the same grounds after a full hearing. H. appealed to quarter sessions, who refused to rehear the evidence, & dismissed the appeal as res judicata. #### F. Alteration of Entry of Order.

1571. Special entry—Showing reasons for judgment.]—R. v. DEVON JJ., No. 1495, ante.*

1572. — Showing quashing on formal grounds.]—When quarter sessions, on appeal, have quashed an order of removal generally, this ct. will not compel them by mandamus to enter their reasons as the order to quash, though it appear by affidavit that the justices in sessions made their order on the ground of informality, but refused a special entry for the purpose of preventing a second removal.—R. v. LANCASHIRE JJ. (1843), 3 Q. B. 367; 2 Gal. & Dav. 714; 12 L. J. M. C. 76; 1 L. T. O. S. 167; 7 J. P. 626; 7 Jur. 490; 114 E. R. 547.

1573. Alteration of verdict.]—The ct. will not grant a mandamus to the justices or clerk of the peace to enter up judgment upon the verdict of a jury otherwise than in the terms in which it is given by the jury, even though it appear by affidavit that in considering the amount of damages to be assessed by them, they took into consideration matters not properly within their jurisdiction. So, though it should appear upon the face of the proceedings that the jury have assessed separate damages in respect of matters foreign to their jurisdiction. But such a finding would be a nullity & could not be enforced.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ. (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 563; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 802; 2 Nev. & M. M. C. 391; 3 L. J. M. C. 117; 110 E. 1574. —.]—This ct. will not issue a mandamus to a ct. of criminal jurisdiction, to alter the minutes of a verdict according to the fact, or to cancel an alteration in such minutes, on a representation that the verdict was erroneously entered at the trial. As where a jury at sessions, on an indictment for poisoning horses, found a verdict of "Guilty by mischance," & were then told by the chairman that they must say either guilty or not guilty, whereupon they brought deft. in guilty, & recommended him to mercy on the ground that he had no malicious intent but administered the material to benefit the condition of the horses; upon which finding & explanation a verdict of guilty was entered.

I have always understood that this ct. might send a mandamus to an inferior ct. to do its duty in general terms, but not to do a particular thing as to make an alteration here or there in the clerk of the peace's minutes (PARTESON, J.).—R. v. HEWES (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 725; 5 L. J. M. C. 45; 111 E. R. 589; sub nom. R. v. HUGHES, 1 Har. & W. 313.

1577. —.]—Where sessions make an entry that an order is quashed, not on the merits, where in point of law it was quashed on the merits, this ct. cannot interfere to compel them to erase such entry.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ. (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 154.

1578. —.]—An order of removal had been served, & notice & grounds of appeal sent in time for trial at the Oct. sessions, but in consequence of an arrangement made with the attorney for appls., by the agent of the attorney for resps., it was agreed that the trial of the appeal should be postponed until the Epiphany sessions. The attorney for resps., being in ignorance of this arrangement, & on a certificate by the clerk of the peace that no appeal was entered, filed the order of removal, & had it confirmed at the Oct. sessions, & immediately after the pauper was removed under the order. On an application by appls. to enter & respite an appeal against the same order at the Epiphany sessions, the clerk of the peace refused to do so, as there was already an order confirming it on the files of the ct. On a mandamus to erase the entry of the order made at the Oct. sessions, the ct. refused the rule as the sessions had jurisdiction by the entry of the appeal.—R. v. GLAMORGANSHIRE JJ. (1846), 15 L. J. M. C. 110; 10 J. P. 617; 10 Jur. 809.

1579. — Manifestly false & without jurisdiction.]—The ct. of quarter sessions has no power of its own authority to erase an entry from the records of a past sessions. But a mandamus will go directing it to do so where an entry has been made which is manifestly false & made without jurisdiction.—*R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ., SHEFFIELD v. obtained a licence from the corpn. of B., hawked fish within that borough, & when summoned for so doing, contended that he was exempt from all licences by Hawkers Act, 1888 (c. 33), s. 3. The justices discharged resp.:—Held: resp. was only exempt under Hawkers Act, 1888 (c. 33), from having to take out an excise licence, & he was liable to the penalty provided under the local Acts for hawking fish without having first obtained a licence from the corpn., & should have been convicted.—*OPENSHAW v. 516. ———.]—By a local Act, s. 55, it was provided that nothing in the Act should interfere with the lawful exercise of their calling by pedlars & hawkers duly licenced or certificated under any Act relating to such calling. An information was laid against resp. under a local Act for selling tomatoes from a hand barrow in a street in the county borough of D. without having obtained a licence as required by the Act from the corpn. Under the Act tomatoes were included amongst the articles in respect of the sale of which in a market place the corpn. were entitled to take a toll. Resp. had taken out a licence under Hawkers Act, 1888 (c. 33). The justices dismissed the information:—Held: the mere fact that resp. had taken out a hawker's licence under Hawkers Act, 1888 (c. 33), was not sufficient to relieve him from the necessity of taking out a licence from the corpn. of D. under the local Act for the sale of the articles in question, since in selling the same he was not acting under his hawker's licence & the exemption granted by the local Act, s. 55, did not apply to hawkers as a class, but only to hawkers in the lawful exercise of their calling as hawkers.—*LEE v. workers or makers of goods, etc. of Great Britain, or by their children, apprentices, etc. usually residing with them. Manufacturers on a large scale, employing workmen on premises where they do not reside, & doing no manual labour themselves, are makers within the exemption. The servant of such manufacturers, not residing with them, travelled with goods of the manufactory to a town, where he sold them in a public room, having advertised the goods as those of his employers, to be disposed of by him according to their instructions. One of the proprietors was present, gave directions, noted the purchases, & received money, but no one was informed who he was:—Held: the seller, though not licenced, was exempt from penalty, the sale being substantially a sale by the master.—*R. v. ## SUB-SECT. 3.—REGULATION BY BYE-LAWS.

528. Whether valid—Hawking prohibited in great part of city.]—A municipal power of regulation, or of making bye-laws for good government, without express words of prohibition, does not authorise a bye-law making it unlawful to carry on a lawful trade in a lawful manner; & therefore, where a municipal council had power to make bye-laws for "regulating & governing" hawkers, etc.:—Held: they had not power to prohibit hawkers from plying their trade at all in a substantial & important part of the city, no question of any apprehended nuisance being raised, & a bye-law to that effect was ultra vires.—*TORONTO (CITY) MUNICIPAL CORPN. v. 529. — Hawkers restricted to part of seashore—Permit required on payment of fee—Permits limited to inhabitants.]—By a local Act, the B. urban district council might from time to time for the prevention of danger, obstruction, nuisance, or annoyance to persons using the seashore make & enforce bye-laws for regulating the selling & hawking of any article, commodity or thing on the seashore. A bye-law made in pursuance of this Act provided that where any part or parts of the seashore has or have, by notices affixed in conspicuous positions on the seashore, been set apart by the council for the sale & hawking of such articles, commodities, or things as may be specified in the notices, no person shall offer for sale or hawk any article, commodity, or thing so specified on any other part of the seashore. The council set apart a portion of the seashore for the sale & hawking of specified articles, & by the notice affixed sought to charge 2s. 6d. a week for licences to sell, & licences were only granted to residents in the urban district of B. Applt. was summoned & convicted for selling articles included in the notice on part of the seashore not set apart for such sale by the notices:—Held: the conviction must be quashed, as the bye-law was bad, inasmuch as it must be taken to incorporate the notice & the conditions thereof.—MOORMAN v. JONES (1913), 108 L. T. 806; 77 J. P. 197; 11 L. G. R. 488; 23 Cox, C. C. 372, D. C.

pedlars applies only to individuals not to corps.—R. (NALDER) v. BARLOW, [1923] 1 D. L. R. 262; 19 Alta. L. R. 66; [1922] 3 W. W. R. 1195.—CAN.

SUB-SECT. 2.—PROCEDURE.

See, generally, CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. XVI., pp. 323 et seq.

1580. Time for application.]—If an appeal be given to the sessions within six months after the cause of complaint, & a motion is made there within that time to enter & respite one, which is denied, the ct. will not grant a mandamus to the justices to receive it after the six months are elapsed.—R. v. DERBYSHIRE JJ. (1791), Nolan, 29; 4 Term Rep. 488; 100 E. R. 1134.

1581. —.]—A certiorari to remove an order of quarter sessions had been quashed because the affidavit on which it had issued omitted to state that the justices on whom it was served had been present at the sessions at the making of the order pursuant to 13 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 5. On motion for a fresh certiorari to remove the same order after the six months had expired:—Held: the writ had not been moved or applied for within the meaning of the Act by the former application, & the present was a fresh motion & consequently out of time.—R. v. CARTWORTH (INHABITANTS) (1843), 1 Dow. & L. 837, 842; 8 Jur. 61; 8 J. P. 104; sub nom. — v. —, 13 L. J. M. C. 28.

1582. Evidence in support of application—Contents of affidavit.]—Before a mandamus is granted to compel sessions to enter continuances & hear an appeal they have refused to hear, it is essential that the affidavits of applts. show that the practice of the particular sessions with respect to the time of notice of appeal has been observed.—R. v. WARWICKSHIRE JJ. (1845), 6 Q. B. 750; 1 New Mag. Cas. 193; 1 New Sess. Cas. 463; 14 L. J. M. C. 39; 4 L. T. O. S. 291; 9 J. P. 179; 9 Jur. 131; 115 E. R. 283.

1583. —.]—The affidavits on motion for a mandamus to sessions to hear an appeal should state all the material facts that occurred at the sessions.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ., St. Pancras v. Bradford (1845), 3 Dow. & L. 152; 2 New Sess. Cas. 1; 14 L. J. M. C. 119; 5 L. T. O. S. 152; 9 J. P. 822; 9 Jur. 790.

1584. Contents of case—Agreement of parties to submit to decision of court.]—A case stated for the opinion of the Q. B. Div., under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 11, should contain a statement of the agreement of the parties that judgment in conformity with the decision of the ct. may be entered at quarter sessions in the manner provided by the sect.—PETERBOROUGH CORPN. v. THURLBY OVERSEERS (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 586, D. C.

1585. Practice of King's Bench Division—One counsel only heard on each side.]—(1) On the hearing of a special case in an appeal stated for the opinion of one of the superior cts. under Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (c. 45), s. 11, the counsel for the party in support of the rate is entitled to begin.

(2) Upon such hearing the ct. refused to hear more than one counsel upon either side.—BEDFORDSHIRE JJ. v. ST. PAUL, BEDFORD (1852), 7 Exch. 650; 21 L. J. M. C. 228; 16 J. P. 538; 155 E. R. 1109.

B. or not. Even though the appeal should be one in which in the proper exercise of their discretion they ought undoubtedly to grant a case in order that their judgment may be reviewed, if they refuse to do so; there are no means of compelling them (COCKBURN, C.J.).—*R. v. 1456. To enrol order of petty sessions—Allegation of fraud.]—The ct. will not issue a peremptory mandamus to enrol an order of sessions, in respect to which there is an allegation of fraud; but will enjoin the inferior ct. to hear & determine upon the merits of the question.

Upon a rule for a mandamus to compel the sessions to enrol an order of petty sessions, for stopping up a footway, there being fair ground for believing that many persons had been misled by the published description of the footway, & had therefore neglected to give notice of appeal, the ct. made a rule to let in the appeal.—R. v. SUFFOLK JJ. (1826), 6 B. & C. 110; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 111; 4 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 215; 5 L. J. O. S. M. C. 27; 108 E. R. 394.

1457. To issue distress warrant for costs.]—(1) In case of an appeal against a conviction, the informer, & not the justice, is the party appealed against, though the notice of appeal is to be served upon the latter; &, although the informer do not appear at the sessions to support the conviction, costs may be awarded to applt. against him. (2) If the sessions award such costs, the Ct. of K. B. will, by mandamus, compel them to issue a warrant of distress for their payment.—R. v. HANTS JJ. (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 654; 9 L. J. O. S. M. 1458. To issue process—To enforce judgment of previous sessions.]—In the absence of any particular restriction, a subsequent quarter session has power to enforce by process the judgment of a preceding one; & this ct. will grant a mandamus to the subsequent session to issue such process, if there appears to have been no unnecessary delay in applying for it. A party convicted by a justice under Vagrancy Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 3, appealed under sect. 14, which gives an appeal to the next general or quarter sessions, & enacts that the ct. at such general or quarter sessions shall hear & determine the appeal, &, if the conviction be affirmed, shall issue process for the apprehension & punishment of the offender. The conviction was quashed, subject to a case which the justice brought up by certiorari; & this ct. sent it back to be reheard by the sessions. They, in July, 1833, affirmed the conviction, again subject to a case; but a question being raised before this ct. on motion, whether or not the party convicted was bound to take out a certiorari to remove the case as restated, none was sent up, & the time for suing out a certiorari expired. Afterwards, this ct. decided against the convicted party on the point of practice; & a motion was made to the next sessions, July, 1834, for process to enforce the conviction, which being refused, this ct. was applied to, in the next term, for a mandamus:—Held: the appeal had not been heard & determined within the statute, before the last-mentioned decision of this ct.; & the sessions, in July, 1834, ought to have issued the process. Mandamus granted.—*R. v. ## B. Exercise of Discretion by Sessions.

See, generally, CROWN PRACTICE, Vol. XVI., pp. 309 et seq.

1462. General rule.]—Where the quarter sessions have a discretion, this ct. has no jurisdiction to control it. Where, therefore, the quarter sessions have, by their practice, a discretion as to allowing or refusing the entry of appeals after the time fixed by their rules, & in the injudicious exercise of that discretion refuse to allow an appeal to be entered, this ct. will not order them to receive it. Where, however, it was left in doubt what the practice of the sessions on the subject was, & whether it had been acted upon in the particular case, this ct. granted a rule for a mandamus to the justices to receive the appeal.—R. v. DERBYSHIRE JJ. (1852), Bail Ct. Cas. 113; 22 L. J. M. C. 31; 17 J. P. 86; 16 Jur. 1071; sub nom. R. v. DERBYSHIRE JJ., Ex p. GREEN, 20 L. T. O. S. 116.

1463. Refusal to respite.]—Applt. against an order of filiation, moved the ct. of quarter sessions for a postponement of the appeal, on account of the absence of material witnesses. They rejected the application, upon which applt. declined going into his case, & the order was confirmed. On motion for a mandamus to the justices to hear the appeal, & affidavits tending to show that they had acted unjustly in not granting the postponement, this ct. refused to interfere, the matter being one peculiarly within the discretion of the magistrates.—Ex p. BECKE (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 704; 110 E. R. 257; sub nom. R. v. MIDDLESEX JJ., Ex p. BECKE, 1 L. J. M. C. 95.

These parties were not served with the notice; & the sessions refused to respite the appeal for the purpose of such service, & dismissed the appeal with costs. The Ct. of Q. 1664. —.]—It has been said that the ct. may presume fraud in the first taking; but there is no rule better established than that fraud is never to be presumed; & I believe in a case sent for the opinion of this ct. which was pregnant with fraud, they would not presume fraud, because it was not stated (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—R. v. 1665. —.]—It is not for this ct. to draw the conclusion of fraud from the facts stated. It was a question for the justices at sessions, whether there was fraud or not. . . . TILLINGHAM (INHABITANTS) (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 180; 9 L. J. O. S. M. C. 3; 109 E. R. 754.

1666. — Remission for restatement.]—Where fraud is not expressly found by sessions, this ct. cannot infer it from any state of facts. But in case where the facts stated were such as to render it almost certain that the decision of the justices at sessions must have proceeded on the ground of fraud, the ct. sent back the case to be restated.—R. v. LLANFIHANGEL-ABERCOWIN (INHABITANTS) (1835), 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 355; 2 Nev. & M. M. C. 531.

(c) Remission and Restatement.

1667. Remission—For restatement—Formal objection—Court able to decide on merits.]—A deed, coming out of the hands of the opposite party after notice to produce it, must prima facie be taken to be duly executed, & must be received in evidence without proof of the execution. The ct. will not send a case down to the sessions to be restated on a mere formal objection, if enough appear to enable them to decide according to the merits of the case.—R. v. MIDDLEZOY (INHABITANTS) (1787), 2 Term Rep. 41; 100 E. R. 23.

1668. — Judgment warranted by facts.]—Where, upon a special case, facts are stated which warrant the judgment of the ct. below, but that ct. has drawn an inference which is not warranted by the statement, the order will be confirmed without sending the case back to be restated.—R. v. RICKINGHALL-SUPERIOR (INHABITANTS) (1832), 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 47; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 36; 2 L. J. M. C. 22.

1669. — Doubt whether chairman signed case.]—Where it has been referred to the chairman at sessions, on an appeal, to state a case, & a case has afterwards, on certiorari, been returned to this ct. by the clerk of the peace, purporting to be signed by the chairman, this ct. will not send it back to be restated, or quash the certiorari, on the ground of the chairman having said that he did not recollect signing the case, & upon a suggestion by the attorney for one of the litigating parties, in an affidavit, that such case does not agree with the facts proved, & that deponent believes the chairman did not settle the case.—R. v. B., on argument, sends back the case to be restated, it is the duty of those contesting the original order to give notice to those who support it, before proceeding to have the case reheard; & where an order had been so quashed, & the case stated & sent back, & resps., without giving notice of trial, attended the sessions, & in the absence of appls., obtained a confirmation of the order, this ct., on certiorari, quashed the last mentioned order, though resps. had given appls. notice of the order of this ct. sending the case back for restatement.—R. v. 1672. — To find further facts.]—As the widow was not only entitled, but bound by law, to take out administration, there was no fraud in the transaction which could prevent her from taking, as administratrix, her husband's interest as yearly tenant, & thereby acquiring a settlement. But the ct. referred it back to the sessions as a question of fact, whether the widow, after administration granted, continued a weekly tenant, or became a tenant from year to year, in her husband's right.—R. v. GREAT GLENN (INHABITANTS) (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 188; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 91; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 158; 2 L. J. M. C. 69; 110 E. R. 762.

"When I was fifteen years old, I was bound apprentice to J. of Playden, until the age of twenty-one years, & I produce the indenture dated Aug. 30, 1821, executed by both parties & by my father; the consideration was £15. I served the whole time & resided in my master's house at Playden during the service." Appls. delivered the following notice of the grounds of their appeal against the order of removal, "that the said pauper did not acquire a settlement in the parish of Playden, by reason of his being bound an apprentice by indenture, dated Aug. 30, 1821, to J. & serving under the same indenture, because the premium of £15 paid to the said J. was paid by the parish officers of R. & not by the father of the said pauper, & that the requisites of the statute made for the regulation & binding of parish apprentices then in force had not been complied with." At the hearing of the appeal, appls. required resps. to prove the execution of the indenture of apprenticeship as a part of their case, & resps. not being prepared to do so, the ct. of quarter sessions quashed the order of removal without going into the merits, but granted a special case stating the above objection, & directing that if the opinion of the sessions was wrong in requiring the evidence, the case was to be sent back to be reheard:—Held: (1) the decision of the sessions was wrong, because the grounds of appeal admitted the execution of the indenture of apprenticeship; (2) this ct. would not send down the case to be reheard by the court of quarter sessions.—*R. v. 1691. Jurisdiction of sessions—After order quashed in High Court.—A. having appealed to the quarter sessions against an order of two justices, convicting him of a nuisance, & prohibiting its continuance; the ct. of quarter sessions, on hearing the appeal on Jan. 3, 1859, made an order confirming the conviction, subject to the case, & ordering that the costs of the appeal should abide the result of the decision of the Ct. of Q. B. The order & case were brought up by certiorari, & removed into the Q. B., & after argument that ct. quashed the order, saying nothing about costs. A protracted negotiation about the costs took place between the attorneys of A. & B., resp. in which it was for a long time assumed on both sides, that B. was liable to pay costs; but B. afterwards protesting against such liability, the clerk of the peace refused to tax the costs, & in Apr. 1862, the ct. of quarter sessions refused to order such taxation, considering that they had no longer any jurisdiction:—Held: the taxation of the costs could only be ordered as ancillary to the giving of final judgment; &, as there remained nothing of a judicial nature to be done by the ct. of quarter sessions in the matter of the appeal, the order having been removed from that ct. & entirely quashed, that ct. had no longer any power to tax the costs.—R. v. 1692. ——The quarter sessions, on appeal, quashed an order made against deft. by the petty sessions subject to a case for the consideration of the Q. B. Div., & further ordered that the costs of the appeal then before it should abide the event of the decision of that ct. The case, which was stated & signed by the chairman of the quarter sessions, after stating the question submitted to the Q. B. Div., contained (inter alia) the following clause: "The ct. are . . . in all respects to exercise the power of the sessions to confirm, amend, alter, vary, modify, or reverse their decision in such manner & to such extent as to such ct. shall seem expedient & proper; costs to follow the event." At the hearing of the case the Q. B. Div. quashed the order of the quarter sessions, but the judgment was silent as to costs. In an action brought to recover the

By the order of reference the costs of the appeal & reference were to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator determined the matter of the appeal in favour of resps. & awarded them the costs of the appeal & reference. The award was thereupon entered as the judgment of the sessions under the above sect., & the costs having been taxed after the sessions, an order of sessions was subsequently drawn up confirming the rate & ordering appls. to pay the costs so ascertained by taxation. 1716. When payable to borough fund.]—By Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (c. 76), s. 126, all penalties recovered before any justice of a borough, except those under any Act relating (inter alia) to trade or navigation, go to the borough fund. By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 62, which regulates merchant seamen, a moiety of all penalties recovered thereunder goes to the seamen's hospital society:—Held: 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, was an Act relating to trade or navigation, & the penalties recovered under it fell within the proviso to Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (c. 76), s. 126, & do not go to the borough fund.—*SEAMEN'S HOSPITAL SOCIETY v. 1717. — Or to county fund.]—By Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (c. 43), s. 31, when persons are convicted by justices under statutes which contain no directions for the payment of the penalties to any person, the penalties are to be paid to the clerk of the division for which the justices usually act, & he is to pay them over to the treasurer of the county, riding, . . . city, borough, or place, for which such justices shall have acted; & a return is to be made by the clerk to the clerk of the peace for the county, borough, etc., in which the division is situate, when & as the ct. of quarter sessions for the same shall order. The municipal borough of R., in the county of S., has no separate commission of the peace, & no ct. of quarter sessions. The mayor & ex-mayor of R. have jurisdiction in R. as justices, & the justices of the county at large have concurrent jurisdiction. There is a treasurer for the borough:—Held: the justices in & for the borough acted as county justices, with their powers limited to a particular locality; & the word "borough" in above sect. meant a borough which has a ct. of quarter sessions; & therefore penalties imposed by justices acting in & for the borough were to be paid to the treasurer of the county, & not to the treasurer of the borough.—*REIGATE CORPN. v. Penalties imposed by such justices, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, & not awarded to prosecutor under s. 20 of that Act, are to be paid to the treasurer of the county & not of the borough, notwithstanding Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act, 1861 (c. 75), s. 4.—*WINN v. By Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1840 (c. 84), s. 6, any two justices having jurisdiction within the metropolitan police district shall have, while sitting together publicly in the petty sessions court or room, except in divisions assigned to the police courts, all the powers, privileges, & duties which any one magistrate of the police cts. has by Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839 (c. 71), s. 47:—Held: this did not make penalties, which were recovered before two justices sitting as above, penalties recovered before a police magistrate; & therefore the shares of such penalties unappropriated to the informer or party aggrieved did not go to the receiver of the metropolitan police district.—*METROPOLITAN POLICE DISTRICT RECEIVER v. It is entirely supported by a rate in the nature of a county rate levied on the inhabitants of the liberty, who do not contribute to the general county rate. commission, which does not give them exclusive jurisdiction. There is a ct. of quarter sessions held for the liberty. The commission under which the justices of the county of H. act gives them jurisdiction as well within liberties as without:—Held: the county justices sitting out of the liberty were authorised to commit to the house of correction of the liberty a person guilty of an assault within the liberty, & were not bound to send him to the county house of correction. Qu: whether they could commit to the liberty gaol for offences committed out of the liberty.

The justices heard the case, adjudged the party to pay a fine & costs immediately, & on the same day, before any demand or notice, ordered him to be committed for non-payment to the house of correction, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, ss. 27, 33:—Held: the justices might order the payment to be made either “immediately,” which means in this statute “on the spot,” or might give time, in their discretion; & as they had ordered immediate payment, they were authorised, the money not being then paid, at once to order the party’s committal before any demand, & without serving him with any summons to show cause why he should not be committed.—*ARNOLD v. continuances & hear the said appeal, on the ground that they were bound to respite for the purpose of notice being served on all the parties interested. Applt. then gave a second notice, in which the schedule, & the objections in respect of the parties named therein, were omitted. The sessions, when the appeal came on for hearing, held that this was not a proper notice, & dismissed the appeal with costs:—Held: they were right in so doing, inasmuch as, by the omission of the schedule & the objections in respect of the parties named therein, the character of the appeal was materially altered, so that it was not the said appeal which the sessions were ordered to hear & determine.—*R. v. 1465. Refusal to state case.—Where the ct. of quarter sessions decided clearly against law holding that a hiring for a less period than a year conferred a settlement, & refused to grant a case for the opinion of the Ct. of Q. B., the latter ct. refused to interfere by mandamus to compel a case to be stated.—Ex p. JARVIN (INHABITANTS) (1840), 9 Dowl. 120; Woll. 67.

1466. Refusal to convict surveyor—Highway out of repair.—When an information is laid under the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 94, that a highway is out of repair, & the magistrates, pursuant to that sect., appoint a viewer who reports it out of repair, the magistrates at the special sessions are not bound by that report, but may exercise their discretion whether they will convict the surveyor or not.—*R. v. 1467. Refusal to entertain appeal—Non-compliance with statute.—Where an appeal came on to be heard before the justices at quarter sessions, it appeared the order of removal had been obtained on the ground that the pauper had acquired a settlement in applt. parish by renting a tenement. The pauper's examination which was sent to applt. stated, that the tenancy commenced in June, 1827, & terminated in June, 1828, but the first witness that was called, proved that the tenancy commenced in June, 1828, & terminated in Aug. 1829. The sessions held this variance between the proof & the examination of the pauper not to be a compliance with the provisions of Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (c. 76), s. 81, & therefore refused to hear the appeal. An application was now made for a mandamus to compel the sessions to enter continuances & hear the appeal, but refused on the ground that the sessions had a discretionary power in these matters, & having exercised that power on the present occasion, the Ct. of Q. B. would not call it in question.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ. (1840), 10 Ad. & El. 685; 3 Per. & Dav. 462; 4 J. P. 333; 4 Jur. 533; 113 E. R. 260; *sub nom. R. v. WEST RIDING JJ., Ex p. 1469. Refusal to widen bridge—Bridges Act, 1808 (c. 59), s. 2.—The above sect. provides that where any bridge repaired at the expense of the county shall be narrow & inconvenient, it shall

& may be lawful for the justices at their general quarter sessions to order & direct such bridge to be widened, etc., & that no money shall be applied to the alteration of any such bridge until presentment shall have been made according to one of the statutes relating to public bridges:—Held: the power so given to the justices is discretionary, & the ct. therefore refused a mandamus to compel them to widen a bridge.—Re NEWPORT BRIDGE (1859), 2 E. & E. 377; 29 L. J. M. C. 52; 24 J. P. 133; 6 Jur. N. S. 97; 121 E. R. 142; sub nom. Re MONMOUTHSHIRE JJ., 1 L. T. 131; 8 W. R. 62.

1470. Conditional exercise—Acceded to by appellant.—On an appeal against an order of removal, a notice of appeal having been given in due time, but to the wrong sessions, for county instead of a borough, the notice was amended too late for the next sessions, & application was made to enter & respite the appeal, which was acceded to conditionally on the ct. at the next sessions, being of opinion that the notice for those sessions would not be too late, & the ct. at such sessions held that it was, & refused to hear the appeal:—Held: it was discretionary to grant the application; & there had not been a declining to exercise a discretion, but a conditional exercise of it, which had been accepted by applt., & a mandamus to the sessions to hear the appeal was refused.—R. v. BERWICK RECORDER (1863), 7 L. T. 670; 27 J. P. 87; 11 W. R. 265.

1471. Refusal to award costs.—The writ of mandamus will not lie to compel a ct. of quarter sessions to award costs under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 29, to justices who appear & actively oppose an appeal from their decision in a licensing case; for such justices are a party to the appeal, & under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, 1879 (c. 49), & 1884 (c. 43), the ct. has a discretion to give or refuse costs inter partes as it thinks just.

Licensing justices, who either do not appear on an appeal, or appear only to inform the ct. of the grounds of their decision, are not a party to the appeal, & are entitled to their costs under 9 Geo. 4, c. 61, s. 29. But the question whether they have made themselves a party to an appeal or not is one which the ct. of quarter sessions has jurisdiction to decide; & if it decides that question, however, erroneously, in the affirmative, & refuses costs, its decision cannot be reviewed by the High Ct. upon an application for a mandamus to award costs.—*R. v. 1. Legal process.]—If a serjeant at mace of London arrest A. on a plaint in the sheriff's ct., & A. tenders him good bail, which he refuses to accept, A. may have an action on the case for refusing the bail ; but he cannot maintain trespass for false imprisonment, the caption being by legal process.—*SALMON v. 2. —.]—(1) There is no similitude or analogy between an action of trespass, or false imprisonment, & this kind of action. An action of trespass is for deft.'s having done that, which, upon the stating of it, is manifestly illegal. This kind of action is for a prosecution, which, upon the stating of it, is manifestly legal. The essential ground of this action is, that a legal prosecution was carried on without a probable cause. We say this is emphatically the essential ground ; because every other allegation may be implied from this ; but this must be substantively & expressly proved, & cannot be implied. From the want of probable cause, malice may be, & most commonly is, implied. The knowledge of deft. is also implied. From the most express malice, the want of probable cause cannot be implied. A man, from a malicious motive, may take up a prosecution for real guilt, or he may, from circumstances which he really believes, proceed upon apparent guilt ; & in neither case is he liable to this kind of action. After a verdict, the presumption is, that such parts of the declaration, without proof of which pltf. ought not to have had a verdict, were proved to the satisfaction of the jury. In this case, to support the verdict, there was nothing necessary to be proved, but that there was no probable cause, from whence the jury might imply malice, & might imply that deft. knew there was no probable cause (per CUR.).

(2) The question of probable cause is a mixed proposition of law & fact. Whether the circumstances alleged to show it probable, or not probable, are true & existed, is a matter of fact; but whether, supposing them true, they amount to a probable cause, is a question of law; & upon this distinction proceeded the case of *Reynolds v. 3. Intervention of judicial proceedings.]—(1) A declaration in an action for a malicious prosecution for felony, must state that the prosecution is at an end; & alleging "that pltf. was discharged from his imprisonment" is not sufficient.

Saying that pltf. was "discharged" is not sufficient; it is not equal to the word "acquitted" which has a definite meaning. Where the word "acquitted" is used, it must be understood in the legal sense, namely, by a jury on the trial. But there are various ways by which a man may be discharged from his imprisonment without putting an end to the suit (BULLER, J.).

(2) The distinction between the actions of trespass & case has long been settled. . . . The gravamen in the present case is, that deft. personally took & arrested pltf. illegally, & imprisoned him; this is false imprisonment, & is an immediate injury to the person of pltf. . . . The grounds of a malicious prosecution are, that it was done maliciously; & without probable cause. The want of probable cause is the gist of the action (BULLER, J.).

The general distinction is this: where the immediate act of imprisonment proceeds from deft., the action must be trespass, & trespass only; but where the act of imprisonment by one person is in consequence of information from another, there an action upon the case is the proper remedy, because the injury is sustained in consequence of the wrongful act of that other (ASHHURST, J.).—*MORGAN v. A positive oath that a felony is actually committed, is not necessary to justify a magistrate in granting his warrant to search the premises, & apprehend the person of a party suspected of felony; & though it may be trespass in the magistrate to grant an illegal warrant, yet it is case in the person who causes & procures such warrant to issue, if it is done maliciously, & without reasonable or probable cause.—*ELSEE v. WARBURTON (1863), 1 New Rep. 371; 32 L. J. Q. B. 104; 7 L. T. 722; 11 W. R. 384.

12. —.]—Plaint in a county ct. for false imprisonment. Evidence that pltf. was given into custody by deft. on a groundless charge of felony; that deft. signed the charge sheet, without which, as he knew, the police would not have detained pltf., & that, when taken before a magistrate, pltf. was discharged:—Held: the evidence, though it would support a charge of malicious prosecution, was severable, & there was good evidence of a false imprisonment up to the time of pltf. being taken before the magistrate.

The distinction between false imprisonment & malicious prosecution is well illustrated by the case where, parties being before a magistrate, one makes a charge against another, whereupon the magistrate orders the person charged to be taken into custody & detained until the matter can be investigated. The party making the charge is not liable to an action for false imprisonment, because he does not set a ministerial officer in motion, but a judicial officer. The opinion & judgment of a judicial officer are interposed between the charge & the imprisonment. There is, therefore, at once a line drawn between the end of the imprisonment by the ministerial officer & the commencement of the proceedings before the judicial officer. It is fallacious to inquire whether or not the one is severable from the other, until you find some inseparable connection between them. It may very well happen in the superior cts., which have jurisdiction over both descriptions of action, where pltf., having been at once taken before a magistrate, may be content to bring his action for false imprisonment only. In such a case, which must be within the memory of all of us, the judge would tell the jury to give damages for the false imprisonment only, & not for what came under the cognisance of the magistrate (WILLES, J.).—AUSTIN v. DOWLING (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 534; 39 L. J. C. P. 260; 22 L. T. 721; 18 W. R. 1003.

The debt had in fact been paid at the solr.'s country office, to a clerk having authority to receive it, on the same day as, & about three hours before, the writ of fi. fa. was sued out. Neither the solr. nor his client knew of the payment of the debt. Execution having been levied on pltf.'s goods, the solr. was then informed that the debt had been paid, & he withdrew the execution. In an action against the solr. & his client on the case to recover damages for improperly levying execution, & in the alternative for trespass, it was found that neither the client nor the solr. who sued out the writ acted maliciously:—Held: defts. were liable in trespass, though in the absence of malice they were not liable in an action on the case.—CLISSOLD v. (2) I should define reasonable & probable cause to be, an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent & cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. There must be: first, an honest belief of the accuser in the guilt of the accused; secondly, such belief must be based on an honest conviction of the existence of the circumstances which led the accuser to that conclusion; thirdly, such secondly mentioned belief must be based upon reasonable grounds; by this I mean such grounds as lead any fairly cautious man in deft.'s situation so to believe; fourthly, the circumstances so believed & relied on by the accuser must be such as amount to reasonable ground for belief in the guilt of the accused. The belief of the accuser in the guilt of the accused; his belief in the existence of the facts on which he acted, & the reasonableness of such last-mentioned belief, are questions of fact for the jury, whose findings upon them become so many facts from which the judge is to draw the inference, & determine whether they do or do not amount to reasonable & probable cause. This also is an inference of fact, not of law as is sometimes erroneously supposed; & the judge is to draw it from all the circumstances of the case. . . . The question of reasonable & probable cause depends in all cases, not upon the actual existence, but upon the reasonable bond fide belief in the existence of such a state of things as would amount to a justification of the course pursued in making the accusation complained of, no matter whether this belief arises out of the recollection & memory of the accuser, or out of information furnished to him by another (HAWKINS, J.).

(3) It is true, as a general proposition, that want of probable cause is evidence of malice; but this general proposition is apt to be misunderstood. In an action of this description the question of malice is an independent one, of fact purely, & altogether for the consideration of the jury, & not at all for the judge. The malice necessary to be established is not even malice in law such as may be assumed from the intentional doing of a wrongful act, but malice in fact, malus animus; indicating that the party was actuated either by spite or ill-will towards an individual, or by indirect or improper motives, though these may be wholly unconnected with any uncharitable feeling towards anybody. . . . Want of reasonable cause is for the judge alone to determine, upon the facts found by the jury (HAWKINS, J.).—HICKS v. FAULKNER (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 167; 51 L. J. Q. B. 268; 46 L. T. 127; 46 J. P. 420; 30 W. R. 545, D. C.; affd. (1882), 46 L. T. 130, C. A.

T. O. S. 189.

Part II.—Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Criminal Proceedings.

SECT. 1.—WHAT IS A PROSECUTION.

20. General rule.]—"Laying" a prosecution, in common parlance, means, not bringing an action, but preferring an indictment or information (PATTESON, J.).—RAWLINS v. JENKINS (1843). 4 Q. B. 419; 1 Dav. & Mer. 219; 12 L. J. Q. B. 151; 7 Jur. 153, 114 E. R. 956.

21. Preferring indictment.]—(1) An action will lie for falsely & maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause presenting a petition under Companies Acts, 1862 (c. 89), 1867 (c. 131), to wind up a trading co., even although no pecuniary loss or special damage to the co. can be proved, for the presentation of the petition is, from its very nature, calculated to injure the credit of the co.

Deft., who had been a shareholder in pltf. co., instructed certain brokers to sell his shares, & signed a transfer. The brokers informed him that they could not sell the shares, but the transfer was not returned to him. After waiting ten or eleven days he presented a petition to wind up the co. on the ground of fraud in its formation, & of the impossibility that it could carry on business at a profit. At the time of presenting the petition the co., which was a trading co., had property of a large amount, & its debts were trifling. Deft. was not then in fact a shareholder; his shares had been sold, & the transfer had been registered. Upon discovering that his shares had been sold, he gave notice that the petition would be withdrawn, & it was ultimately dismissed without costs. The co. having brought an action for falsely & maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause presenting the petition, at the trial no proof of damage to the co. was given beyond the liability to pay its own costs of defending itself against the petition; & upon this ground the co. was non-suited at the close of its case:—Held: although the liability to pay "extra costs" was not a ground of legal damage, nevertheless the non-suit was wrong, & a new trial must be had, because an action would lie for falsely & maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause presenting the petition to wind up, which was necessarily injurious to the credit of the co.; as at the time of presenting the petition the co. was an existing & going concern, & had valuable property & was solvent, unless other facts could be shown, there was a want of reasonable & probable cause for presenting the petition, & the opinion of the jury ought to have been taken whether deft. had been actuated by malice; if deft. as a matter of business ought, in the opinion of the jury, to have inferred from the failure of the brokers to return the transfer, that the shares had been sold, deft. would have had no reasonable or probable cause to suppose that he was still a shareholder.

(2) I entirely agree that even although civil proceedings are taken falsely & maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause, nevertheless no action will lie in respect of them, unless they produce some damage of which the law will take notice. . . . The obligation to pay extra costs is not damage of that kind (BRETT, M.R.).

(3) It is not a good answer to an action for maliciously procuring an adjudication in bkpcy. to say, that the alleged creditor has only asked for a judicial decision. It seems to me that an action can be maintained for maliciously procuring an adjudication under Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (c. 71), because by the petition, which is the first process, the credit of the person against whom it is presented is injured before he can show that the accusation made against him is false; he is injured in his fair fame, even although he does not suffer a pecuniary loss. By proceedings in bkpcy. a man's fair fame is injured just as much since Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (c. 71), as it was before, because he is openly charged with insolvency before he can defend himself (BRETT, M.R.).

(4) Before a judge can rule as matter of law, whether or not there has been a want of reasonable & probable cause, he must ask of the jury a question as to the facts. . . . Whenever in an action for malicious prosecution the judge holds that there is a want of reasonable & probable cause, there is evidence to go to the jury of malice. When there is no other evidence of malice except what the judge has stated to be in his opinion a want of reasonable or probable cause, I incline to agree with HUDDLESTON, B., & HAWKINS, J., in Hicks v. Faulkner, No. 18, ante, that upon the question of malice the jury are not bound by the holding of the judge as to the absence of reasonable cause, but they may consider whether in their own view there was a want of reasonable or probable cause (BRETT, M.R.).

(5) In its very nature the presentation or the prosecution of an indictment involves damage, which cannot be afterwards repaired by the failure of the proceedings, to the fair fame of the person assailed, & for that reason, as it seems to me, the law considers that to present & prosecute an indictment falsely & without reasonable or probable cause, is a foundation for a subsequent action for a malicious prosecution (BOWEN, L.J.).—QUARTZ HILL GOLD MINING CO. v. EYRE (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 674; 52 L. J. Q. B. 488; 49 L. T. 249; 31 W. R. 668, C. A.

22. — When bill thrown out by grand jury.]—An action will lie for maliciously prosecuting a man for felony, although the grand jury throw out the bill.—PAYNE v. PORTER (1618), Cro. Jac. 490; 79 E. R. 418.

25. — —.]—(1) Where there is no probability of guilt, nor reasonable cause, nor honest occasion of complaint, but yet, though this must be the case to maintain the action, it is not necessary to be expressly alleged in the declaration, nor need pltf. use the words sine probabili causa or sine rationabili causa. . . . When it is alleged to be false & malicious, to add after it sine probabili causa be but tautology. In conspiracy for falsely & maliciously indicting a man, it is never laid to be sine rationabili or probabili causa, & yet a reasonable cause is as much an excuse there, as in an action upon the case (PARKER, C.J.).

(2) The expense upon an indictment for a rescue is as good a ground for an action on the case, as the slander upon an indictment for a matter scandalous. . . . The damage that a man may sustain by a false accusation is of three sorts: in his person, imprisonment; in his fame, scandal; in his property, expense. Any one of these three sorts of damage, without any one of the other, is sufficient to entitle pltf. to his action (PARKER, C.J.).

(3) In all cases before an action, unless brought for a malicious prosecution, the prosecution must be either determined or deserted. . . . If there be an indictment which is bad, & upon not guilty pleaded is falsified, this is a good determination of that prosecution, & a good acquittal from the indictment tiel quell (PARKER, C.J.).

(4) When an indictment is preferred, there may be, & frequently are, three cases, wherein there can be no acquittal which can be pleaded in bar: if the bill be returned ignoramus; if it be coram non judice, there not being a complete authority; if the indictment be insufficient. In an action for a malicious prosecution the slander is only the damage, & wrong is the malice, & therefore if the matter were probable, nay if there were any just grounds to complain, deft. shall be acquitted on not guilty (PARKER, C.J.).—JONES v. GIVIN (1713), Gilb. 185; 93 E. R. 300; sub nom. JONES v. GWYNN, 10 Mod. Rep. 214.

26. — —.]—Where in an action for maliciously indicting for an assault, pltf. gave no other evidence than the bill returned "not found," & was thereupon nonsuited, the ct. refused to set aside the nonsuit.

I feel a difficulty to understand how pltf. could recover in the present action, wherein he could recover no damages, because he clearly has not proved that he has sustained any: I can understand the ground upon which an action shall be maintained for an indictment which contains scandal, but this contains none, nor does any danger of imprisonment result from it (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—*BYNE v. 37. Proceedings under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 95.]—A complaint under above sect. against the occupier of a house for non-compliance with a notice stating that a nuisance existed at the house arising from the want of cleansing of certain rooms, & requiring him to abate the same by stripping the paper off the walls & cleansing & distempering the ceilings & walls of the rooms, is not a proceeding necessarily & naturally involving damage to his fair fame or putting him in peril or losing his liberty, sufficient to support an action by him for malicious prosecution in the event of the complaint having been preferred maliciously & without reasonable & probable cause.

An action for malicious prosecution will lie under the circumstances stated by LORD HOLT, C.J., in Savile v. Roberts, No. 510, post. There are three sorts of damage, any one of which is sufficient to support this action. First, damage to a man's fame, as if the matter whereof he is accused be scandalous. Secondly, damage to his person, as where a man is put in danger to lose his life, limb, or liberty. Thirdly, damage to his property, as where he is forced to expend money in necessary charges to acquit himself of the crime of which he is accused. The action is maintainable if & only if it falls within one or other of those three heads. An action for malicious prosecution may lie where the proceedings are civil & not criminal. But, as was pointed out by BOWEN, L.J., in Quartz Hill Gold Mining Co. v. Eyre, No. 21, ante, it is in very few cases that an action for malicious prosecution will lie where the matter is one of civil proceedings. . . . So the exception of civil proceedings, so far as they are excepted, depends, not upon any essential difference between civil & criminal proceedings, but upon the fact that in civil proceedings the poison & the antidote are presented

33 i. — Though not acted upon.]—It is not necessary, in order to maintain an action for malicious prosecution, that the charge was acted upon by the magistrate; it is enough if the charge was made to the magistrate with a view of inducing him to entertain it.—*AHMEDBHAI v. ## SECT. 2.—WHO MAY BE LIABLE AS PROSECUTOR.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

38. Person representing himself as prosecutor—Though expenses borne by others.]—(1) In an action for malicious prosecution, a person is liable who gives evidence in support of the charge, & who represents himself as preferring it, although it is preferred at some other persons' expense, & such other persons have told him that he shall be a witness only, & they employ the counsel & solr.; & if it be shown that, during the examination on the charge, such person is in his hearing repeatedly alluded to as prosecutor, & does not deny that character, this is evidence from which a jury may infer that he represented himself as the person preferring the charge.

(2) Similarity of handwriting is not, per se, & without other circumstances, "probable cause" for preferring a charge of forgery against a person whose handwriting is like that of a forged instrument.—CLEMENTS v. OHRLY (1847), 2 Car. & Kir. 686.

50. ——— Not liable if information given bonâ fide.]—If a complainant does not go beyond giving what he believes to be correct information to the police, & the police, without further interference on his part, except giving such honest assistance as the police may require, think fit to prosecute, he is not responsible in an action for malicious prosecution; but if the charge is false to the knowledge of complainant, if he misleads the police by bringing suborned witnesses to support it, if he influences the police to assist him in sending an innocent man for trial, he cannot escape liability because the prosecution has not technically been conducted by him.—PANDIT GAYA PARSHAD TEWARI v. SARDAR BHAGAT SINGH (1908), 24 T. L. R. 884, P. C.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PERSONS BOUND OVER TO PROSECUTE.

51. General rule.]—Being bound by recognisance to prosecute is no answer to an action for malicious prosecution.

As to the point of law respecting the recognisance, we are clearly of opinion, that being bound by recognisance to prosecute does not exempt a prosecutor from an action for malice. This fact was before the jury, & it was for them to allow it due weight in fixing the amount of damages (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—BOYCE v. KEITH (1840), 4 J. P. 58.

54. ———.]—A party bound over to prosecute on a charge made by himself, is not liable to an action for going before the grand jury & preferring a bill of indictment, which is returned a true bill, his conduct before the grand jury not being malicious, although he was aware of the innocence of the prisoner a day or two after the committal.—HUGGINS v. BAILEY (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 311; previous proceedings (1847), 11 J. P. 680.

55. ——— & not making charge.]—A person having been robbed of his watch, while in a state of intoxication, was, on the following morning, compelled to go before a magistrate, by whom he was bound over to prosecute pltf. He gave no evidence, & made no charge, merely stating the fact that he had lost his watch; & the suspected party was committed for trial on the testimony of another person:—Held: an action for a malicious prosecution was not sustainable, as no malice was proved, & it did not appear that the person robbed had put the law in motion.—BROWNE v. STRADLING (1836), 5 L. J. C. P. 295.

57. ———.]—BOYCE v. KEITH, No. 51, ante.

58. ——— Though prosecution ordered by judge.]—M. sued F. in the county ct. for a debt. F. claimed a set-off, in answer to which M. produced his ledger containing an acknowledgment signed, as he swore, by F. F. denied the signature, which he averred to be a forgery; but the judge, induced partly by the statement of M. & partly by the conduct of F. before him, disbelieving F.'s denial, committed him for trial for perjury, under Criminal Procedure Act, 1851 (c. 100), s. 19, & bound M. over to prosecute. F. was accordingly tried for perjury, & acquitted. F. then brought an action against M. for maliciously & without probable cause causing him to be prosecuted on an unfounded charge:—Held: the action was maintainable; the committal of F., & his prosecution for perjury, being the result of the wrongful & malicious act of M.

In my opinion a prosecution, though in the outset not malicious . . . from having been commenced under a bonâ fide belief in the guilt of the accused may nevertheless become malicious in any of the stages through which it has to pass, if the prosecutor, having acquired positive knowledge of the innocence of the accused, possess malo animo in the prosecution, with the intention of procuring per nefas a conviction of the accused (COCKBURN, C.J.).—FITZJOHN v. MACKINDER (1861), 9 C. B. N. S. 505; 30 L. J. C. P. 257; 4 L. T. 149; 25 J. P. 244; 7 Jur. N. S. 1283; 9 W. R. 477; 142 E. R. 199, Ex. Ch.

59. Joint recognisance — Several liability.]—(1) In an action for malicious prosecution against A. & B., if it appear that both A. & B. entered into a joint recognisance to prosecute & give evidence, but if it also appear that A. only employed the attorney, & that B. attended before the magistrate & the grand jury at the request of the attorney, the judge will direct the acquittal of B.

(2) If C. be entrusted to receive money for A., with a written direction for its application, & C. write a letter to A. stating that he has not received it, when in fact he has, this is sufficient evidence of probable cause to render a prosecution of C., under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 49, not malicious.—*EAGAR v. In the cases alluded to of judges & jurors it cannot apply, because the law gives faith to credence to what they do; & therefore there must always, in what they do, be cause for it: & there can never be any malice in what they do (EYRE, B.).—*SUTTON v. Such record is a defence in such a form of action, not only to the justices, but to the landlord, & all persons acting bonâ fide under the authority of their jurisdiction. Semble: under such circumstances, the tenant may maintain an action on the case against the landlord, for causing the justices to take the proceedings.—*ASHCROFT v. 63. Liability of principal—Agent acting under express authority.]—Pltf., having become tenant to deft., who resided in W., of a house & lands in C., together with the exclusive right of sporting over certain lands adjacent, belonging to deft., fished one of the ponds by cutting down the dam, & but few fish having been caught, one D., who was deft.’s local agent, suggested to pltf. that he might fish a certain pond on the estate by cutting down the bank & placing a net to catch the fish; which the pltf. accordingly afterwards did during the tenancy, & a few fish were taken. Disputes having afterwards arisen between pltf. & deft., D. laid an information before magistrates against pltf. for unlawfully & maliciously breaking down the dam & destroying the fish, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 15, & D. having been examined, the magistrates required pltf. to find bail to appear to an indictment for that offence at the next assizes, where a bill was preferred but ignored. Deft. was not present at the hearing of the information, nor was there any evidence to show that he knew that D. had given pltf. permission. At the trial, the judge asked the jury whether in their opinion D. had given permission, & they found that he had; they also found that D. acted under deft.’s authority in instituting the proceedings; & the judge having expressed his opinion that there was an absence of reasonable & probable cause:—Held: (1) he was correct in so deciding; (2) independently of the permission given by D., there was no reasonable or probable cause for instituting the proceedings.

As to there being no reasonable or probable cause, I think the true way of viewing a case is this: that the judge has a right to act upon all the uncontradicted facts of the case, & that it is not necessary specifically to leave every fact to the jury, to ask them, for instance, “Do you believe this?” “Do you believe that?” “Do you think that was so & so?” It is only where some doubt is attempted to be thrown upon the credibility of the witnesses, or where some contradiction occurs, or some inference is attempted to be drawn from some former fact not distinctly sworn to, that the judge is called upon to submit any question to the jury (ALDERSON, B.).—*MICHELL v. The order appeared to have been suspended, & on appeal against the present order, it was objected, on the hearing, that the examinations did not show that the suspension had been regularly taken off, or the order of removal executed. The sessions held the objections fatal; but, to give an opportunity of removing again, they entered on their records that the order was discharged not on the merits; the applts.' counsel objecting, & insisting on their right to have the appeal fully tried, so as finally to dispose of the ground of removal. On motion for a mandamus to the sessions to erase the words not on the merit, or to enter continuances & hear the appeal:—Held: (1) the entry was wrong, for that the decision was a conclusive one upon the point of settlement; (2) this ct. had no power to order an erasure of the entry; (3) a mandamus to hear the appeal could not be granted for that the sessions had already heard & determined it.—*Ex p. 1478. —.]—At the trial applts. were called upon to prove their notice & grounds of appeal. An objection was then taken to the notice as purporting to have been given by the overseers of the parish instead of the township. Pending the argument applts. applied to respite the appeal, which was assented to by resps., on the terms of payment of costs. This applts. refused, whereupon the sessions confirmed the order of removal. Upon an application to the ct. for a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances, & hear the appeal:—Held: the application for respite was no admission of the validity of the objection, & the sessions ought still to have given judgment upon it; (2) the ct. would not interfere by mandamus to compel the sessions to hear the appeal, as upon the facts stated, it did not appear that they had not decided what they were called upon to do.—R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ., SPROTBROUGH v. ATTERCLIFFE CUM DARNALL (1844), 1 New Sess. Cas. 64; 2 L. T. O. S. 368; 8 J. P. 774.

1479. —.]—The decision of the sessions upon a question of fact properly before them is final, & will not be interfered with by the ct.

An appeal against an order of removal was signed by the overseers of a township. Upon an objection at the sessions that the notice was badly signed, inasmuch as it did not purport to have been signed by a majority of the parish officers, evidence was adduced on the part of applts. to show that the township was one out of several of which the parish was composed, & that each township managed its own poor distinct from the other townships. The sessions, however, after hearing all the evidence upon this fact, decided against applts. upon this point, & confirmed the order of removal. Upon motion for a mandamus to compel the sessions to enter continuances & hear the appeal:—Held: as sessions had decided upon a fact properly before them, the ct. would not interfere.—R. v. FLINTSHIRE JJ. (1847), 4 Dow. & L. 644; 2 New Mag. Cas. 160; 2 New Sess. Cas. 572; 1 Saund. & C. 331; 16 L. J. M. C. 55; 8 L. T. O. S. 395; 11 Jur. 185; 11 J. P. Jo. 104.

1481. —.]—An order of removal having been made, applts. entered & respited an appeal, & subsequently gave resps. notice of their intention, at the next session, "to enter, prosecute, & try" the appeal. The attorney for applts., fearing, however, that this notice might be deemed bad as containing the words to enter, caused another notice to be served, similar to the former, but withdrawing it, & omitting the words to enter. At the sessions applts. proposed to stand upon their first notice, whereupon resps. produced the second notice, & applts. not being in a position to prove the time of its service, the sessions dismissed the appeal. On motion for a mandamus to enter continuances & hear:—Held: the sessions were right; also, their decision being upon a fact properly before them, the ct. could not interfere.—*R. v. 75. When action will be stayed—Previous action compromised.—Declaration contained a count for libel, & two for malicious prosecution. The cause was tried in 1852, & a verdict found for pltf. with £5 damages for the libel, & £15 for the malicious prosecution. Deft. obtained a rule nisi for a new trial, upon the ground of misdirection in respect of the malicious prosecution, & the ct. were ready to make the rule absolute but suggested an arrangement between the parties. It was accordingly arranged that the rule for a new trial should be discharged, pltf. undertaking to enter a nolle prosequi on the counts for malicious prosecution. The costs were taxed, & with the £5 damages, paid to pltf. In 1855 pltf. commenced the present action for malicious prosecution, upon the same facts :—Held : deft. was entitled to stay all further proceedings thereon.—PONTING v. WATSON (1855), 26 L. T. ## SECT. 1.—WHETHER ACTION MAINTAINABLE.

78. In what circumstances maintainable.]—QUARTZ HILL GOLD MINING CO. v. EYRE, No. 21, ante.

79. —.].—The reason, it would seem, that an action for malicious prosecution or arrest would not lie, without averring determination of proceedings in pltf.'s favour, is that as long as the proceedings stood adverse to pltf's. they are evidence of reasonable & probable cause, or, in other words, negative the absence of reasonable & probable cause, which is the duty of pltf's. to establish. It is usual before commencing an action for malicious prosecution, to get proceedings set aside if adverse to pltf., for it is a rule of law, as stated in Gilding v. Eyre, No. 150, post, that no one shall be allowed to allege of a still-depending action that it is unjust, & that this can only be decided by a judicial determination or other final event of the suit itself in its regular course. The present case is not an ordinary action for malicious prosecution or arrest; it is an action for maliciously, & without reasonable & probable cause, using the process of the ct. Subsequently, A. was taken on another writ, which was set aside, but the sheriff detained him under the writ of B. A. then wrote to him for his consent, but he merely answered, that he had not authorised his detainer; afterwards, on a summons, he indorsed his consent:—Held: an action on the case against B. for maliciously & negligently refusing to consent to his discharge, would not lie, even though he acted through malicious motives.

Deft. was not bound to do anything at all towards withdrawing his writ from the hands of the sheriff. He had lost his money by the insolvency of pltf., & he was not bound to take any steps which might involve any further expense. Deft. was bound to do nothing, & he had a right to do nothing. His motives for doing nothing at all, if the law allowed him to do nothing, & did not call upon him to take any step, are perfectly immaterial (POLLOCK, C.B.).—HOLLOWAY v. #### PART IV. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.— B. (a).

133 i. General rule—Proceedings must have terminated.]—No action is maintainable for the malicious use of legal process in suit instituted in any ct. of competent jurisdiction, whether local or foreign, until that suit, in so far as it relates to the matter complained of, has terminated in pltf.'s favour, where such a termination is legally possible.—VARAWA v. HOWARD SMITH CO. (1911), 13 C. L. R. 35.—AUS.

139. ———.]—WILKINSON v. HOWEL, No. 175, post.

140. ———.]—In an action for maliciously suing out a commission of bkpt., it must be averred & proved that the commission was superseded before the commencement of the action: & if this fact be not proved, pltf. ought to be nonsuited, though it was not averred in the declaration, & though deft., who might have demurred for the omission, has not done so.

There is no distinction between an action for malicious prosecution by indictment, as for a malicious arrest, & one for maliciously suing out a commission of bkpt. In all of them, it is necessary to show that the original proceeding which formed the alleged ground of the action is at an end (LITLEDALE, J.).—WHITWORTH v. HALL (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 695; 9 L. 141. ———.]—In case for a malicious arrest, the declaration averred that deft. did not prosecute his suit, but voluntarily suffered the same to be discontinued for want of prosecution thereof, & thereupon it was considered by the ct., that deft. should take nothing by his writ. Deft. pleaded not guilty:—Held: the averment of the discontinuance of the suit was a material allegation, which deft. should have taken issue upon by his plea, & not having done so, the discontinuance was admitted on the record.

The plea of not guilty, in such a case, merely puts in issue the wrongful act, viz. the malicious arrest without probable cause.

Qu.: whether the averment, that pltf. suffered the suit to be discontinued, is proved by the production of the rule to discontinue, & proof of payment of the costs thereon, without proof of the judgment of discontinuance.

As the action cannot be maintained until the former suit is terminated, the discontinuance is a material allegation which deft. should have denied (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—WATKINS v. LEE (1839), 5 M. & W. 270; 7 Dowl. 498; 8 L. J. Ex. 266; 3 Jur. 484; 151 E. R. 115.

in the suit in the mayor's ct. had been brought to a termination.

The suit or proceeding need not in every case terminate in pltf.'s favour, because this is not in every case possible, as in the case cited of articles of the peace maliciously exhibited against pltf.; & it need not be a final determination on the cause of action, as in the case of a nonsuit, but it must be final so far as the suit or proceeding itself is concerned (BLACKBURN, J.).—PARTON v. HILL (1864), 4 New Rep. 103; 10 L. T. 414; 12 W. R. 755.

145. ———.]—A. having issued a writ of summons against B. specially indorsed for £28, B., without appearing to the writ, paid £10 to A., on account of the debt. A. afterwards, under C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 27, signed judgment for default of appearance for the full amount of £28 & costs & issued a ca. sa. indorsed for that amount, under which B. was arrested, & paid the sum demanded. B. having brought an action against A. for maliciously & without probable cause signing judgment & issuing execution:—Held: whilst the judgment stood for the full amount, it estopped pltf. from denying the correctness of the judgment or of the execution. Qu.: whether if the judgment had been rectified by reducing it to the amount for which it ought to have been signed, the action would have been maintainable.—HUFFER v. ALLEN (1866), L. R. 2 Exch. 15; 4 H. & C. 634; 36 L. J. Ex. 17; 15 L. T. 225; 12 Jur. N. S. 930; 15 W. R. 281.

146. ———.]—A writ of ne exeat against a deft. was obtained by pltf. immediately after the commencement of an action. Deft. was arrested, but was discharged upon payment to the sheriff of the sum for which the writ was marked. By his statement of defence deft. alleged that the writ had been improperly obtained, & claimed damages for his arrest, & at the trial he insisted upon this claim:—Held: as deft. had not moved to discharge the writ, it must be taken to have been properly issued, & consequently, deft. was not entitled to any damages.—LEES v. PATTERSON (1878), 7 Ch. D. 866; 47 L. J. Ch. 616; 38 L. T. 451; 26 W. R. 399.

149. Abusing process of law — To effect improper object.]—In an action for abusing the process of the ct. in order illegally to compel a party to give up his property, it is not necessary to prove that the action in which the process was improperly employed has been determined, or to aver that the process was sued out without reasonable or probable cause.—GRAINGER v. HILL (1838), 4 Bing. N. C. 212; 1 Arn. 42; 5 Scott, 561; 7 L. J. C. P. 85; 132 E. R. 769; sub nom. GRANGER v. HILL, 2 Jur. 235.

150. ——— Execution levied for excessive amount.]—The declaration stated that defts., the one, A., acting as attorney for B., the other, recovered a judgment against pltf. for £30 7s. 4d., that pltf. paid & satisfied to B. the debt recovered by such judgment except the sum of 15s. 8d., & that defts. sued out a ca. sa. upon the judgment, & wrongfully & maliciously, & without any reasonable or probable cause, indorsed the said writ with directions to levy £5 14s. 8d., & interest, & £1 7s. for the costs of execution; that pltf. tendered & offered to pay to defts. £3 8s., which was sufficient to pay & discharge all that was recoverable against pltf. upon the judgment & writ, together with the costs of the writ of execution & all other legal & incidental expenses; & that defts. wrongfully & maliciously, & without any reasonable or probable cause, procured the sheriff to arrest pltf., & detain him until he paid £7 6s. 9d., whereas £3 8s. & no more was due & owing from & recoverable against pltf. upon the said judgment:—Held: the declaration disclosed a good cause of action, & it was not necessary for pltf. to allege that he had obtained his discharge by order of the ct. or a judge, so as to show that the proceedings had terminated in his favour.—GILDING v. EYRE (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 592; 31 L. J. C. P. 174; 5 L. T. 136; 7 Jur. N. S. 1105; 142 E. R. 584; sub nom. GELDING v. EYRE, 9 W. R. 946.

151. Proceedings in foreign court.]—The principle that, in an action for maliciously & without reasonable & probable cause setting the law of this country in motion to the damage of pltf., it is essential to show that the proceeding alleged to be instituted maliciously & without reasonable & probable cause has terminated in favour of pltf., if from its nature it be capable of such a termination, applies where an action is brought for falsely & fraudulently causing a proceeding to be taken in a foreign ct. to the damage of pltf. A declaration therefore in such an action, on the face of which it appears that the foreign ct. was one of competent jurisdiction in the proceeding, & gave therein a judgment in rem to the damage of the now pltf., which judgment remains unreversed; & it does not appear that the now pltf., though he was not an original party to the proceeding, might not have intervened, or did not in fact intervene, & obtain a hearing therein; is bad on demurrer.

It is essential to show that the proceeding alleged to be instituted maliciously & without probable cause has terminated in favour of pltf., if, from its nature, it be capable of such a termination. The reason seems to be that if, in the proceeding complained of, the decision was against pltf. & was still unreversed, it would not be consistent with the principle on which law is administered for another ct., not being a Ct. of Appeal to hold that the decision was to come to without reasonable & probable cause (CROMPTON, J.).—CASTRIQUE v. BEHRENS (1861), 3 E. & E. 709; 30 L. J. Q. B. 163; 4 L. T. 52; 7 Jur. N. S. 1028; 1 Mar. L. C. 45; 121 E. R. 608.

(b) Ex parte Proceedings.

164. It is manifestly impossible to say, under those circumstances, that the existence of the proceedings, & the fact that they have not ended favourably to pltf., is evidence of reasonable & probable cause for deft.'s instituting them (WILLIAMS, J.).—STEWART v. GROMETT (1859), 7 C. B. N. S. 191, 29 L. J. C. P. 170; 6 Jur. N. S. 776; 141 E. R. 788.

168. Entry of nolle prosequi.]—A declaration for maliciously indicting pltf. for barratry without probable cause, stating, that he was in due manner thereupon discharged, is not maintained by evidence that he was discharged by means of a nolle prosequi entered by the A.-G.; but if he had pleaded not guilty, & the A.-G. had confessed the plea, that would have maintained the declaration.—GODDARD v. SMITH (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 261; Bull. N. P. 14; 1 Salk. 21; 3 Salk. 245; 11 Mod. Rep. 56; Holt, K. B. 497; 87 E. R. 1007.

On Jan. 29 preceding, deft., in that action sued out a writ against pltf., for a malicious arrest, & filed his bill on Feb. 8, & it being objected that the latter account was brought before the first was legally discontinued:—Held: in the negative, & the discontinuance had, upon payment of the costs, relation back to the term when the rule to discontinue was pronounced.—*BRANDT v. 173. —.—Stopping the cause by rule of ct. would not, it is urged, prevent pltf. from bringing another action in another ct.; neither does a nonsuit on the merits; & yet if it were determined that when pltf. in the original cause was nonsuited, no action could be brought against him for maliciously holding to bail, such a determination would be a receipt for a safe mode of indulging in oppression or revenge. A person who had gratified his malice by immuring in a prison a fellow creature for months, by not appearing when an indignant jury were about to deliver a verdict against him, might, if this were law, avoid an action for maliciously holding to bail. All that is required in such an action is, to show that the first action is at an end, not that the cause of such action is finally decided on (BEST, C.J.).—BROOK v. CARPENTER (1825), 3 Bing. 303; 130 E. R. 530.

174. Judgment of non pros.]—In a declaration for a malicious arrest, the termination of the former suit was alleged thus: That defts. did not prosecute their suit, but therein wholly failed & made default, & thereupon it was considered that they should take nothing by their bill, & that their pledges should be in mercy, & pltf. go thereof without day, prout patet per recordum.—Held: the ct. cannot reject the allegation of the judgment of non pros, as, without that, it would not be shown how the suit was terminated.

In all actions for malicious prosecution, whether founded on a civil or criminal proceeding, you must not only show the prior proceeding ended, but must show how; if the judgment be a mere judgment of non pros, which is what is alleged here, the mere judgment is not enough to raise even a presumption of the want of probable cause, as a pltf. may have that judgment against him, from a mistake or from the negligence of his attorney in not proceeding with sufficient dispatch (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—WEBB v. 175. Entry of stet processus—By consent of parties.]—An action for a malicious arrest cannot be maintained where the former cause was terminated by a stet processus by the consent of the parties.

The general rule is, that a party cannot sue for a malicious arrest or prosecution, without showing in his declaration how the proceeding complained of was terminated (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—WILKINSON v. HOWEL (1830), Mood. & M. 495, N. P.

176. Conviction with right of appeal—Failure to exercise right.]—Where, in an action on the case against a party for maliciously, & without probable cause, causing an information to be held against pltf. for trespassing on land in pursuit of game, in the day time, under Game Act, 1831 (c. 32), & thereby causing him to be convicted & imprisoned by a justices of the peace, pltf. did not appeal against the conviction, pursuant to Game Act, 1831 (c. 32), s. 44, but suffered the imprisonment under the conviction, & the conviction was still subsisting.—Held: the action was not maintainable; & pltf. having been nonsuited, the ct. refused to set it aside.—MELLOR v. BADDELEY (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 675; 4 Tyr. 962; 3 Nev. & M. M. C. 137; 3 L. J. Ex. 217.

177. Removal to superior court—Habeas corpus.]—Proof that a pltf. had not declared in an action removed by habeas corpus within two terms, is not sufficient evidence of a determination of the suit to support an action for malicious arrest.

Qu.: whether an action for a malicious arrest can be maintained when the cause has been removed from an inferior ct. by habeas corpus [at instance of deft.].

Qu.: whether in an action for a malicious arrest, the mode in which the original action is determined must be such as in itself shows a want of reasonable cause.—NORRISH v. RICHARDS (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 733; 9 Nev. & M. K. B. 268; 1 Har. & W. 437; 4 L. J. K. B. 254; 111 E. R. 592.

178. Discharge of plaintiff—Through delay of defendant.]—An action on the case lies for maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause, arresting pltf., & detaining him until discharged by a judge's order, pending a former suit by deft. for the same cause of action, in which pltf. had been arrested & discharged out of custody by reason of deft.'s delay in declaring. To such action it is no defence that the second suit is still pending. Semble: the action lies, although the party arresting had a good cause of action. Qu.: whether it lies where deft. obtained a judge's order for the second arrest.—HEYWOOD v. COLLINGE (1838), 9 Ad. & El. 268; 1 Per. & Dav. 202; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 702; 8 L. J. Q. B. 6; 2 Jur. 1038; 112 E. R. 1213.

179. Conviction without right of appeal—Summary conviction.]—The rule that, in an action for maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause putting the law in motion to pltf.'s damage, it is essential to aver that the proceeding alleged to have been instituted maliciously, & without reasonable or probable cause, has terminated in favour of pltf., if from its nature it be capable of such a termination, applies to a case in which pltf. has been summarily convicted under a statute giving no power of appeal.

I think we should be disturbing foundations if we were to admit that there is any doubt that the criminal proceeding must be determined in favour of the accused before he can maintain an action for a malicious prosecution. If this were not so, almost every case would have to be tried over again upon its merits. In my judgment it makes no difference that the party convicted has no power of appealing (BYLES, J.).—BASÉBÉ v.

180. Dismissal of charge — By magistrate—Without prejudice to either party.]—In an action for maliciously prosecuting pltf. for an assault before a magistrate, the declaration alleged that the magistrate adjudged that pltf. was not guilty, & caused him to be discharged fully acquitted & that the said complaint & prosecution was wholly ended & determined :—Held : these allegations were sufficiently sustained by proof that the magistrate dismissed the charge without prejudice to either party.

The allegation, if material, was proved. The magistrate did all that he thought fit to do in the case ; so that the prosecution before him was at an end (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—AMISS v. CUNNINGTON (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 341 ; sub nom. AMES v. CUNNINGHAM, 15 J. P. Jo. 37.

184. —.]—A conspiracy ought not to be only false, but malitiose contrived, otherwise it will not be a conspiracy, & such malice ought to be proved : for if a poor man travelling upon the highway, be robbed by another man, & he knows not the party, if afterwards he do accuse such a one of the robbery, & the party accused be found not guilty ; he shall not have an action of conspiracy against the accuser ; for although he was falsely accused, yet he was not maliciously accused ; & it might be, that he took him to be the offender, because he was like unto him who Appls. then proposed to abandon that ground of appeal & proceed on the others, but the sessions refused to permit them to do so, & dismissed the appeal. The ct. discharged a rule for a mandamus to compel the justices to hear the appeal.

If a document is capable of the construction which has been put upon it by a ct. of quarter sessions, this ct. will not on an application for a mandamus exercise a power of review. When the sessions decided in favour of resps. appls. then proposed to abandon that ground of appeal & proceed on the others, but the sessions were of opinion that it was unsafe to permit them to do so. This appears to me a matter which it was competent for the sessions to decide, & I do not feel called upon to interfere with such decision (ERLE, J.).—NEWMARKET RY. CO. v. DULLINGHAM (CHURCHWARDENS, ETC.) (1850), 4 New Sess. Cas. 87.

1484. —.]—Two justices made a certificate, under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), for the diversion of a highway. The certificate stated that the justices had on the application of the surveyor of the highways viewed the highway proposed to be diverted, etc., but did not show that the surveyors were authorised to make the application. On appeal, by a party interested, the sessions held the certificate bad on this ground, & refused to proceed further.

A rule nisi having been obtained for a mandamus to enter continuances & hear the appeal:—Held: the appellate jurisdiction, given to the sessions by Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), was not limited to the points mentioned in sect. 89, but was general; & consequently the sessions had jurisdiction to entertain the question whether the certificate was good or bad; but having exercised their jurisdiction, mandamus did not lie, even if they were wrong.—R. v. WORCESTERSHIRE JJ. (1854), 3 E. & B. 477; 2 C. L. R. 1333; 23 L. J. M. C. 113; 22 L. T. O. S. 332, 18 Jur. 424; 18 J. P. Jo. 263; 118 E. R. 1221.

1486. —.]—Applt. was convicted by a metropolitan police magistrate under Vagrancy Act, 1824 (c. 83), s. 4, which makes punishable as a rogue & vagabond "every person . . . using any subtle craft, means, or device, by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive & impose on any of His Majesty's subjects." The conviction described the offence as "unlawfully using certain subtle craft, means & device," omitting the words "by palmistry or otherwise." Upon appeal to the Middlesex sessions, the proceedings commenced with an objection from applt. that the omission of the above words made the conviction bad. The justices, after hearing the point argued, retired, & on their return the assistant judge gave what purported to be the decision of sessions, quashing the conviction on the objection taken to it. Upon application for a mandamus to sessions to hear the appeal on the merits, it was proposed to show by affidavits from the justices that the decision given by the assistant judge was contrary to the opinion of a majority of the justices forming the ct., & that after such opinion had been communicated to him, he persisted in giving his decision as that of sessions:—Held: (1) the order of sessions having been duly recorded, it was too late to inquire whether it did or did not represent the opinion of the majority of the justices; & (2) the decision upon the form of the conviction was not a decision upon a preliminary matter, but a hearing & adjudication upon the merits, which upon a mandamus could not be reviewed.—*R. v. 1487. —.]—Where licensing justices have refused the renewal of a license to the holder thereof in respect of a house which had been continuously licensed from a date before 1869 for the sale of beer to be consumed on the premises, the mere fact that the justices had not in writing stated the grounds for their decision as they are required to do by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, s. 89, does not entitle the holder of the license to have the decision reversed & the license granted.

When in such circumstances the ct. of quarter sessions has overruled the objection that the licensing justices have so failed to state their reasons & has heard the case on its merits, applt. is not entitled to a mandamus to the licensing justices to hear & determine the application. First, if the proceeding be really without foundation; & this must be evidenced by the proceedings having finally terminated in favour of pltf., whether the proceedings be in bkpcy. or by indictment. Secondly, the proceeding must have been taken without reasonable & probable cause. Thirdly, lest persons should be deterred, by fear of the consequences, from enforcing the law with despatch upon bonâ fide suspicion, before a man can be made responsible, it must be shown that, in taking the proceeding, he was actuated by malice or by some bad motive. . . . In considering the question of reasonable & probable cause, it is quite right to take the opinion of the jury whether at the time when the proceeding was taken, deft. really believed it was a well-founded proceeding. . . . I apprehend that the mere fact of deft. taking the proceedings with the knowledge & belief that they could not properly be taken, would be some evidence of malice (CLEASBY, B.).

There was a count for false imprisonment. Pltf. owed for two poor rates before his bkpcy., & for one allowed & published after it. Pltf. obtained protection from arrest under the bkpt. law. 235. Any improper or indirect motive—Not spite or hatred only.]—(1) In an action for a malicious arrest, malice is a question of fact for the jury, who are at liberty, but not bound, to infer it from the want of probable cause; & where a creditor had caused his debtor to be arrested for £45, knowing that there was a set-off to the amount of £16 5s., but instructed the bailiff who made the arrest, to allow the set-off in case the debtor would settle the debt; & the judge, upon the proof of these facts, was of opinion that there was no probable cause for the arrest, & that there was malice in law, inasmuch as the act of causing the party to be arrested for a larger sum than he owed was wrongful, & therefore told the jury that the only question for them was the amount of damages; the ct. granted a new trial, on the ground that it ought to have been left to the jury to find whether there was malice or not.

[In an action for malicious arrest] malice is a question of fact which ought to be left to the jury (TAUNTON, J.).

I have always understood the question of reasonable & probable cause on the facts found to be a question for the opinion of the ct., & malice to be altogether a question for the jury (DENMAN, C.J.).

(2) I have always understood, since the case of Johnstone v. Sutton, No. 2, ante, that no point of law was more clearly settled than that in every action for a malicious prosecution or arrest, pltf. must prove what is averred in the declaration, viz. that the prosecution or arrest was malicious & without reasonable or probable cause; if there be reasonable or probable cause, no malice, however distinctly proved, will make deft. liable; but when there is no reasonable or probable cause, it is for the jury to infer malice from the facts proved. . . . the term malice in this form of action is not to be considered in the sense of spite or hatred against an individual, but of malus animus, & as denoting that the party is actuated by improper & indirect motives (PARKE, J.).—MITCHELL v. JENKINS (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 588; 2 Nev. & M. K. B. 301; 3 L. J. K. B. 35; 110 E. R. 908.

No notice of this was given to the sheriff of Surrey, & he took T. on the other writ of ca. sa. In an action against H. for maliciously omitting to give notice to the sheriff of Surrey, that the judgment had been satisfied by the arrangement with F.:—Held: (1) to support this action, the jury must be satisfied that there was malice; but to constitute malice it was not necessary that H. should have acted from any spite or ill will, or the like, but that, if he acted as he did from any indirect motive, such as to get the debt for his client from T., or to get more costs for himself, that would be malice for this purpose; (2) the mere fact of H. not giving notice to the sheriff of Surrey that the judgment had been satisfied was one from which alone the jury might infer malice; but if they thought that H. had been defrauded when he received the promissory note, or had taken it on a representation that the parties were solvent when they were not so, this would go to negative the malice.—*TEBBUTT v. There may be such plain want of reasonable & probable cause that the jury may come to the conclusion that the prosecutor could not honestly have believed in the charge he made, & in that case want of reasonable & probable cause is evidence of malice. 250. Attempting justification of charge—In gross ignorance of law.—A. takes a bank note in the course of his business, which he pays to B., the note is afterwards stopped at the bank as a forged note, & is brought by an inspector to A. who immediately pays to B. the amount of the note, & refuses to give it up to the inspector, insisting on his right to retain it, in order to recover the amount from the person from whom he received it. The inspector, in the absence of all circumstances of suspicion, is not justified in charging A. before a magistrate with feloniously having the note in his possession, knowing it to be forged for the purpose of compelling him to give up the note. By possession, under Bank Notes Forgery Act, 1805 (c. 99), is meant the original possession of a note acquired in an illegal mode, & not a subsequent possession like the above, where the original possession was legal.

The possession which is made felonious by the statute, is to be understood of an original possession of a note obtained by unlawful means. This I consider to be so clear that to press a commitment, under circumstances like the present, is such a crassa ignorantia that it amounts to malice (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, J.).—BROOKS v. question is, whether the original pltf. had a probable cause of action for the amount for which he held the party to bail; & not whether he had probable cause of action in the particular form of action brought; thus where A. had a good cause of action on a covenant for a sum of £1,150 against B. & C. separately, but not jointly, & he sued B. & C. jointly, & arrested B. in that action, for that amount, it was held that an action for a malicious arrest would not lie by B. against A.

261. Attempt to set up colourable chargeability.]—In an action for maliciously, & without reasonable or probable cause, charging pltf. with & causing him to be apprehended on a warrant for unlawfully running away & leaving his wife & children chargeable to a parish, it appeared that pltf. had left his wife & children with her father, & went, as he alleged, in search of work. Deft., the brother of pltf.'s wife, at her request & with the consent of the father, who was unable to support his daughter, applied to the magistrate's clerk, & by his advice a warrant was issued, & pltf. apprehended, by deft.'s instructions. Before the hearing deft. took pltf.'s wife to the overseer & obtained some relief, & she was taken to the workhouse; but there was some evidence that this was a colourable chargeability, & was done with a view to support the information. The justices dismissed the case, & thereupon the action was brought:—Held: the judge was right in telling the jury that there was no reasonable or probable cause for the arrest, & although deft. acted under a mistake, the jury might infer malice from his subsequently endeavouring to set up a colourable chargeability.—HEATH v. HEAPE (1856), 1 H. & N. 478; 26

267. Perseverance in prosecution—After representation as to probable innocence of accused.]—A. having reasonable & probable cause for supposing that B. made an assault on him with intent to rob him, went for a constable, who, on coming to the place, recognised B., & assured A. that he was a respectable man, & that he would be answerable for his coming forward to meet the charge. A., nevertheless, persisted in giving B. into custody, & on the following day preferred the same charge against him before a justice, who dismissed it. In an action by B. against A. for maliciously & without probable cause making such charge before the justice, the judge stated to the jury, that pltf. had reasonable & probable cause for suspicion in the first instance, but that he thought that, on the explanation given by the constable, that reasonable & probable cause ceased; & that if the jury were of opinion that deft. was satisfied with such explanation, but persevered in the charge from obstinacy or wounded pride, they should find for the pltf.:—Held: that this direction was wrong; for as the facts remained unaltered, the representation of the constable could not take away the reasonable & probable cause afforded by those facts.

To support an action of this kind, there must be both malice in deft., & a want of reasonable & probable cause. It is admitted that even if there be excessive malice, if it is combined with probable cause, the action cannot be supported. So also, it is admitted that a total want of probable cause is sufficient evidence from which the jury may infer malice, inasmuch as in such case the party could have no ground for proceeding in the charge but a malicious one. But, on the other hand, from any degree of malice you cannot infer a want of probable cause; that stands upon a class of facts to be looked at by themselves (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).

With respect to the question of malice, if deft. went on, though believing that there was no reasonable or probable cause, I should doubt whether it might not properly go to the jury whether his conduct was not malicious. If he was Pltf. was taken & kept in the lock-up; when brought before the magistrate, the magistrate not being able to attend to the matter till the evening, it was postponed, when the deft. said he could not wait, & got the matter remanded till the following Monday, when no prosecutor appearing he was discharged. Subsequently deft. went before another magistrate & took out a warrant, & some correspondence took place between pltf.'s solr., who always declared himself ready to produce pltf. & meet the charge, deft. & the officer who held the warrant, the latter cautioning deft. not to arrest pltf., as he would make himself responsible. Pltf. surrendered, but no prosecutor appeared, & he was discharged. There was also evidence that deft. had urged pltf. to stop the action, each party paying his own costs, & stated that he deft. would then withdraw from the prosecution:—Held: the remand till Monday was a judicial act of the magistrate, & therefore there was no false imprisonment. Pltf. must give some evidence of the want of reasonable & probable cause, & the mere discontinuance of the proceedings is not sufficient evidence of that. But pltf. here, having negatived, as far as he could, the evidence of reasonable & probable cause, it was for defts. to make it out, if there was any (CLEASLY, B.).—HENDERSON v. MIDLAND RY. CO. 273. Prosecution to prevent action for wrongful dismissal.]—S., a bank clerk, had initialed the paying-in book of Y., a customer of defts., for the receipt of a sum of money, as to which no entry was made in the bank books either by S. or any other clerk. This was discovered owing to S.'s having called the attention of the bank manager to the fact that Y.'s account was overdrawn. S. admitted having received the money, & said that he recollected having put it with a slip relating to it on the desk of a fellow clerk. The directors of the bank having considered the facts, ordered that the managing directors should arrange the matter. S. offered to pay the money on condition that he was removed to another branch of defts.' bank, & that a proper inquiry be instituted as to the conduct of business at that at which he had been employed. Finding that he was dismissed & accused of dishonesty, S. brought an action of wrongful dismissal against defts., who then immediately instituted criminal proceedings against him. They withdrew from such prosecution on seeing a written confession made by S.'s fellow clerk that he had stolen the money. In an action of malicious prosecution brought by S. the judge held that the bankers, not having taken any proper steps to ascertain how far the fact of one of their clerks having initialed a customer's paying-in book was proof of his having had the money, so paid in, in his possession & as to the allegation made by S. that he had placed the amount in question on the desk of his fellow clerk, showed an absence of reasonable & probable cause for their prosecuting S., & the jury found that they had been actuated by an indirect motive. On a motion for a new trial:—Held: the ruling as to the absence of reasonable & probable cause was right, & the jury were justified in finding malice in defts., as there was evidence from which it might reasonably be inferred that the criminal prosecution had been instituted by them with a view to stop pltf.'s action against them for wrongful dismissal.—SPRINGETT v. After his discharge from that arrest, E. went into the county of L., & was again arrested on the following day, upon the ca. sa. issued into the latter county, & was detained in custody for about twelve days. A notice was sent to A.'s office on Nov. 3, that E. had been arrested & paid the debt & costs to the sheriff of M., but A. was then from home. On Nov. 9, A. was again applied to by the undersheriff of L., but refused to authorise E.'s discharge unless the debt & costs were paid into his hands. But absence of reasonable & probable cause alone will not suffice. There must be evidence of some further indirect motive.

For the purpose of establishing his case of malicious prosecution pltf. had to prove two things, material I mean to the present case. He had to prove that the prosecution had been instituted by defts. with malice. That was entirely a question for the jury. He had to prove that the prosecution had been started & carried on without reasonable & probable cause. That was a question partly for the jury & partly for the judge, for the jury so far as there were any facts in dispute, & for the judge whether, when those facts were found, they constituted in law an absence of reasonable & probable cause. Now, with reference to malice. The jury are, in my opinion, I think this is now quite settled by authority, entitled to take into account circumstances on which the judge may properly arrive at the conclusion that there is in law an absence of reasonable & probable cause (WARRINGTON, L.J.).—*MEERING v. 335. —.]—Deft., a miller, saw a number of sacks partly covered with a tarpaulin lying on a quay alongside a vessel. Seeing his mark on one of the sacks, he cut it open & found it contained pieces of sacks, some new & some old. He removed the tarpaulin, & saw some sacks on which was his mark, & on others it was cut away. Being informed that the sacks were about to be shipped by pltf. for the manufacture of paper, he laid an information before a magistrate that he had reason to suspect, & did suspect, that some sacks, his property, had been stolen, & were then in the possession of pltf. Thereupon the magistrate issued a warrant to search for the goods, & if they should be found, to bring them & pltf. before him, to be dealt with according to law. Pltf. was accordingly apprehended & taken before the magistrate who dismissed the charge. In an action for maliciously causing the search warrant to be issued & pltf. apprehended:—Held: (1) the magistrate was justified in issuing a warrant in that form, since the application for a search warrant involved an application to arrest; (2) there was no absence of reasonable & probable cause for the information, & consequently deft. was not liable either in respect of the search warrant or arrest.—*WYATT v. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—WHAT AMOUNTS TO REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE.

A. In General.

362. General rule.]—The disbelief of the party making a charge before a magistrate is some evidence of want of probable cause, notwithstanding other evidence has shown that there was prima facie probable cause for making the charge.

In order to justify deft., there must be a reasonable cause, such as would operate on the mind of a discreet man; there must also be a probable cause, such as would operate on the mind of a reasonable man; at all events such as would operate on the mind of the party making the charge; otherwise there is no probable cause for him (TINDAL, C.J.).

Reasonable & probable cause is a mixed question of law & fact; the facts being found or undisputed, the judge determines whether they amount to reasonable & probable cause; but if the facts are doubtful, the jury must come to the conclusion of fact before the judge determines the effect of it in law. The principle is sufficiently clear; the difficulty is in the application (BOSANQUET, J.).

PART IV. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

362 i. General rule.]—In an action for malicious prosecution reasonable & probable cause is an honest belief in the guilt of the accused, based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances which assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinary prudent & cautious man placed in the position of the accuser to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed.—COLWILL v. JOHNSON (N.W.T.) (1905), 1 W. L. R. 218.—CAN.

362 iii. —.]—In an action for malicious prosecution there is want of reasonable & probable cause for a charge of felony if there is a want of belief on the part of the person making the charge that the person charged has committed the felony.—MCLEOD v. REEVES (1882), 1 N. Z. L. R. 50 (S. C.).—N.Z.

362 iv. —.]—If deft. in an action for malicious prosecution did not honestly believe in the full charge which he made against pltf., he had not reasonable & probable cause for the prosecution.—HARCOURT v. AIKEN (1902), 22 N. Z. L. R. 389.—N.Z.

q. Reliance on legal opinion.—Counsel.]—In an action for malicious prosecution where deft. has laid a bond fide statement of the material facts of the case before counsel, & has acted bond fide on the opinion obtained, there is reasonable & probable cause.—FELLOWES v. HUTCHINSON (1855), 12 U. C. R. 633.—CAN.

r. —.]—A sutor taking legal advice upon a question of law, & acting thereon apparently bond fide, is

Where the facts or inferences are doubtful, it must be determined by the jury (COLTMAN, J.).

It would be a monstrous proposition, that a party who did not believe the guilt of accused should be said to have reasonable & probable cause for making the charge (ERSKINE, J.).—BROAD v. HAM (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 722; 8 Scott, 40; 8 L. J. C. P. 357, 132 E. R. 1278.

363. —.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution of pltf. for obtaining goods from deft. by false pretences, there having been considerable delay on the part of deft. before he made any charge:—Held: although the goods had been obtained from deft. by false pretences, still, if the jury were of opinion that deft., when he went before the magistrate & made his complaint, did not bond fide believe that pltf. intended to defraud him, there was an absence of reasonable & probable cause.—WILLIAMS v. 364. —.]—HICKS v. FAULKNER, No. 18, ante.

365. —.]—Take the familiar instance of an action for malicious prosecution. It is not a wrongful act for any person who honestly believes that he has reasonable & probable cause, though he has it not in fact, to put the criminal law in motion against another; but if to the absence of such reasonable & probable cause a malicious motive operating upon the mind of such prosecutor is added, that which would have been a rightful, in the sense of a justifiable, act if done without malice becomes with malice wrongful & actionable. What would constitute such malice it is not material for the purposes of this case to define. Of course, if when he instituted criminal proceedings the prosecutor knew he had no reasonable ground for the steps he was taking, the definition of malice given by BAYLEY, J., in Bromage v. Prosser, No. 232, ante, would distinctly apply, & no further proof of malice would be required; but if he really believed he had such reasonable cause, although in fact he had it not, & was actuated not by such belief alone, but also by personal spite or a desire to bring about the imprisonment of or other harm to the accused, or to accomplish some other sinister object of his own, that personal enmity or sinister motive would be quite sufficient to establish the malice required by law to complete a cause of action—not responsible; nor can an action for maliciously taking such proceeding be successfully prosecuted against him.—CRAWFORD v. McLAREN (1859), 9 C. P. 215.—CAN.

t. —.]—Opinion of counsel will not protect from an action for malicious prosecution unless the party uses reasonable care to ascertain the facts & lays them before counsel.—WILSON v. WINNIPEG CITY (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 193.—CAN.

a. —.]—If a party lays all the facts of his case fairly before counsel, & acts bond fide upon the opinion given by that counsel, he is not liable to an action for malicious prosecution.—R. v. STEWART (1889), 6 Man. L. R. 257.—CAN.

A robbery had been committed by S., who immediately absconded. Pltf., his fellow-workman, had said that he had heard, a few hours after the robbery, that S. had absconded ; & that S. had previously told him that he intended to go to Australia. S. had also been seen, early in the morning after the robbery, coming from a public entry leading to the back door of pltf.'s house. Deft., pltf.'s master, having been informed of these circumstances, caused him to be apprehended, & charged before magistrates with the robbery :—Held : no evidence of reasonable or probable cause justifying deft. in making the charge.

In the case of malicious prosecution proof that there was in reality no ground for imputing the crime to pltf. shows that the prosecution was instituted without probable cause, & malice may be inferred from thence (GIBBS, C.J.).—BURLEY v. It eventually appeared that C.'s statement was untrue, & pltf. was discharged by judge's order. At the trial of the action against defts. for arresting pltf. maliciously, & without reasonable & probable cause, the agent was called on the part of defts., & he swore that he believed, without further inquiry, the statement in C.'s affidavit to be true at the time that he applied for & obtained the order to hold pltf. to bail, & thereupon the judge directed the verdict to be entered for defts. on the ground that there was reasonable & probable cause for the arrest, & the action could only be maintained on proof, (a) of malice on the part of defts., & (b) of want of reasonable & probable cause:—Held: there was reasonable & probable cause for the arrest, & there was no duty on defts.,

388. — Possession of goods—Bonâ fide belief in ownership.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution for sheep stealing, it appeared at the trial that pltf. was possessed of a sheep which deft. claimed as one of a lot stolen from him. Pltf. gave an account of the way he became possessed of it, which, if the sheep was deft.'s, must have been wilfully false. Deft. took away the sheep. Pltf. sued him for so doing in the county ct. To stop the action deft. indicted pltf., who was acquitted. There was evidence both ways; but it appeared that the sheep really never was deft.'s, though deft. bonâ fide believed it was. The judge, assuming these facts to be true, asked the jury if deft. had reasonable grounds for his belief. On their finding that he had, he ruled that there was reasonable & probable cause for the indictment:—Held: under the circumstances, the finding of the jury on that one point, in addition to the facts beyond dispute, made out a complete case of reasonable & probable cause.

The duty of the judge was to decide whether there was reasonable & probable cause, taking into account all the undisputed facts & leaving the disputed material facts to the jury (CROMPTON, J.).—DOUGLAS v. CORBETT (1856), 6 E. & B. 511; 27 L. T. O. S. 134; 2 Jur. N. S. 1247; 119 E. R. 955.

The cashier signed the charge-sheet, & pltf. was remanded from time to time at the instance of defts. While he was so under remand defts. received information as to the alibi which was to be set up in the case, but acting on counsel's opinion they went on with the prosecution. Having been subsequently advised that pltf., even if committed for trial, would probably be ultimately acquitted of the charge, defts. at once gave notice of their intention of withdrawing from the prosecution. Pltf. subsequently brought an action against them to recover damages from them for false imprisonment & malicious prosecution, & obtained a verdict:—Held: pltf. having been identified by defts.' cashier as the man who had uttered the cheque, they were not bound to make any inquiries as to the alibi, they had acted reasonably, & therefore there was no want of reasonable & probable cause.—*HARRISON v. There was conflicting testimony as to the degree of violence used by pltf. Pltf. was indicted by deft. for the assault, & acquitted. On the trial of the action the learned judge directed the jury, that if deft. preferred the indictment with a consciousness that he was in the wrong, there was no reasonable or probable cause for the indictment:—Held: the mere fact of pltf. having assaulted deft. did not of itself constitute reasonable & probable cause without reference to the other circumstances of the case, & the direction of the judge was substantially correct.—HINTON v. The evidence on which perjury was assigned was given against deft. in an action in which he was deft., & in which the evidence for him contradicted that of the then pltf. Deft., on being told of the now pltf.'s evidence, said he would indict him for perjury. Deft.'s informant said he thought there was no ground for such indictment; but deft. replied that he should move for a new trial in the then action, & the indictment would stop the mouths of the now pltf. & the opposite party for a time:—Held: (1) the jury were properly asked whether deft. believed there was reasonable & probable cause for the prosecution, & they having found that he did not, the judge was right in ruling that there was no such cause; (2) the jury were rightly told that, if, upon the above evidence, they believed that deft. acted from an improper motive, they might infer malice; (3) the acquittal was admitted on the record.

D. Knowledge of Good Faith of Plaintiff.

414. Implies absence of probable cause—Knowledge that act done under bonâ fide claim of right.]—

(1) The mere fact of obstructing the airway of a mine is not sufficient to constitute reasonable & probable cause for prosecuting the party who has done the act under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 6, so as to warrant the judge in an action for a malicious prosecution in withdrawing the question as to reasonable & probable cause from the jury, where the act has been done under a claim of right, & after notice given.

If deft. was aware at the time of making the charge of all the circumstances under which the act was done & that pltf. acted bonâ fide in the assertion of a right it could not be said that deft. had reasonable & probable cause (DENMAN, C.J.).

(2) Whether, in an action for a malicious prosecution, the question of reasonable & probable cause is to be submitted to the jury, or decided by the judge, depends upon the circumstances of the particular case & not upon any general rule.—JAMES v. PHELPS (1840), 11 Ad. & El. 483; 3 Per. & Dav. 231; 9 L. J. Q. B. 106; 4 J. P. 74; 113 E. R. 499.

Annotation:—Generally, Mentd. Fletcher v. Calthrop (1845), 6 Q. B. 880.

415. ———.]—In an action for maliciously causing pltf. to be arrested, it appeared that pltf. was employed to work up some timber into spars, under a contract with H., by which he was to be paid £48 by weekly instalments during the progress of the work, & the balance on the completion of it. Before the work was completed H. assigned all his goods to deft. & others for the benefit of his creditors generally. At this time about £19 remained due to pltf. as the value of the work done up to that time. Pltf. went to deft.'s yard where the spars were & asked for them, & on deft.'s foreman refusing to give them up, he took them away the next morning at 4 o'clock a.m. His attorney then wrote to deft.'s attorney to say that he claimed a lien on the spars. Deft. demanded them back, but pltf. refused to give them up. Pltf. was then taken into custody for stealing the spars on the information & complaint of deft. He asked deft. why he gave him into custody, to which deft. replied: "You had no right to take the spars away, I think you merely fetched them away to get what was your due"—Held: there was evidence of the absence of reasonable & probable cause for the charge.

The expression alleged by pltf. to have been used by deft., showing that he did not think that pltf. meant to steal the goods, was not denied or explained. It is therefore impossible to say that there was no evidence of the absence of reasonable & probable cause for the charge (POLLOCK, C.B.).—HUNTLEY v. SIMSON (1857), 2 H. & N. 600; 27 L. J. Ex. 134; 30 L. T. O. S. 157; 22 J. P. 86; 6 W. R. 106; 157 E. R. 247.

417. Absence of probable cause not implied—Bill ignored by grand jury.]—The fact of a bill being thrown out [by grand jury] was no proof of a want of probable cause (PARK, J.).—FREEMAN v. ARKELL (1824), 1 C. & P. 326.

418. ———.]—(1) In an action for malicious prosecution the burden of proof as to all the issues arising therein lies upon pltf.; & although pltf. proves that he was innocent of the charge laid against him, & although the judge in order to enable himself to determine the issue of reasonable & probable cause, leaves subsidiary questions of fact to the jury, nevertheless the onus of proving the existence of such facts as tend to establish the want of reasonable & probable cause on the part of deft., rests upon pltf.

(2) Pltf., a surgeon, had attended M. for bodily injuries alleged to have been sustained in a collision upon defts.' railway. M. brought an action against defts., which was compromised by defts. paying a large sum for damages & costs. Subsequently the directors of defts.' co., having received certain information, caused the statements of certain persons to be taken by a solr.; these statements tended to show that the injuries of which M. complained were not caused at the collision, but were produced wilfully by pltf., with the consent of M., for the purpose of defrauding defts. These statements were laid before counsel, who advised that there was good ground for prosecuting pltf. & M. for conspiracy. Defts. accordingly prosecuted pltf., but he was acquitted. In an action for malicious prosecution, the judge directed the jury to find whether defts. had taken reasonable care to inform themselves of the true state of the case, & whether they honestly believed the case which they laid before the magistrates; the jury having answered these questions in the affirmative, the judge entered the judgment for defts.:—Held: the direction to the jury was correct, upon the facts & the findings of the jury, defts. had reasonable & probable cause for prosecuting pltf., & the judge had rightly entered the judgment for defts.

(3) The question, whether reasonable care has or has not been taken by a prosecutor to inform himself of the real state of the case, is not merely a piece of evidence to prove some fact, but it is a question which is itself to be decided by evidence, & upon which evidence to prove & disprove it may be given. It is a necessary part of the question whether there was reasonable & probable cause, because if there has been a want of reasonable care on the part of the prosecutor to inform himself of the true state of the case, then there must be a want of reasonable & probable cause. It is one of those facts for which I have tried to find a proper designation, but I have not succeeded in finding one satisfactory to my mind; it may be described as a fundamental fact, in order to try to distinguish it from a fact which is merely evidence of something else. It is a fact which it would be necessary to allege & prove, & it is not merely a fact which is evidence of something which is to be alleged & proved (BRETT, M.R.).

PART IV. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.—D.

t. Implies absence of probable cause.]—TORRANCE v. JARVIS (1852), 13 U. C. R. 120.—CAN.

(4) In an action for malicious prosecution pltf. has to prove (a) that he was innocent & that his innocence was pronounced by the tribunal before which the accusation was made; (b) that there was a want of reasonable & probable cause for the prosecution, or, as it may be otherwise stated, that the circumstances of the case were such as to be in the eyes of the judge inconsistent with the existence of reasonable & probable cause; & (c) that the proceedings of which he complains were initiated in a malicious spirit, that is, from an indirect & improper motive, & not in furtherance of justice. All those three propositions pltf. has to make out, & if any step is necessary, to make out any one of those three propositions, the burden of making good that step rests upon pltf. (BOWEN, L.J.).

(5) Something has been said about innocence being proof, prima facie, of want of reasonable & probable cause. I do not think it is. When mere innocence wears that aspect, it is because the fact of innocence involves with it other circumstances which show that there was the want of reasonable & probable cause; as, for example, when prosecutor must know whether the story which he is telling against the man whom he is prosecuting, is false or true. In such a case, if accused is innocent, it follows that prosecutor must be telling a falsehood, & there must be want of reasonable & probable cause. Or if the circumstances proved are such that prosecutor must know whether accused is guilty or innocent, if he exercises reasonable care, it is only an identical proposition to infer that if accused is innocent there must be a want of reasonable & proper care. Except in cases of that kind, it never is true that mere innocence is proof of want of reasonable & probable cause. It must be innocence accompanied by such circumstances as raise the presumption that there was a want of reasonable & probable cause (BOWEN, L.J.).—ABRATH v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1883), 11 Q. #### SUB-SECT. 4.—QUESTION FOR JUDGE AND JURY.

A. In General.

432. Mixed question of law & fact.]—JOHNSTONE v. SUTTON, No. 2, ante.

433. ———.]—The question of probable cause is a mixed question of law & fact: if you believe such & such facts, then I tell you there is probable cause; & if you think the motives of the prosecutor were such, then there is no probable cause: so that the question is rightly left to the jury, to judge of the motive which actuated deft. in instituting the prosecution (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).

I have always understood the rule as laid down in Johnstone v. Sutton, No. 2, ante, is correct. That rule is this, that the evidence given is for the consideration of the jury, for them to say, whether they give credit to the witnesses, & whether the particular facts induce a particular inference or not. They are to judge of the weight & bearing of evidence; but, if it is believed by them, it is for the judge to say whether the evidence amounts to proof of want of probable cause. If it had been wished to put the objection in the way in which it is now put, pltf. should have assigned as error, that the facts proved did not amount to a want of probable cause. That would have taken issue in law on the whole of the case (TAUNTON, J.).—TAYLOR v. WILLANS (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 845; 1 L. J. K. B. 17; 109 E. R. 1357.

ALISON (1846), 3 C. B. 181; 7 L. T. O. S. 209; 136 E. R. 73.

444. ———.]—In an action for malicious prosecution, the facts material to the question of probable cause must be found by the jury; & the judge is then to decide, as a point of law, whether the facts so found establish probable cause or want of it: among these facts are deft.'s knowledge of the alleged ground of accusation at the time when he prosecuted; & his belief, at that time, that the conduct forming such ground of accusation amounted to the offence charged. If deft. did not so believe, the want of reasonable & probable cause is established, though the imputed offence appear prima facie to have been committed by pltf., & the fact to have been known to deft., before the charge was made. The absence of belief must be proved by pltf., & if it be not proved, the defect is not supplied, for the purpose of showing want of probable cause, by evidence that deft. made use of the charge as a means of obtaining an unfair advantage over pltf.

The prevailing law of reasonable & probable cause is this, that the jury are to ascertain certain facts, & that the judge is to decide whether those facts amount to such cause. But among the facts to be ascertained is the knowledge of deft. of the existence of those which tend to show reasonable & probable cause, because without knowing them he could not act on them, & also deft.'s belief that the facts amounted to the offence which he charged, because otherwise he would have made that a pretext for prosecution without even entertaining an opinion that he had a right to do so; in other words, the reasonable & probable cause must appear not only to be deducible in point of law from the facts, but to have existed in deft.'s mind at the time of the proceedings; & perhaps, whether they did so or not, is rather an independent question for the jury, to be decided on their view of all the particulars of deft.'s conduct, than for the judge, to whom the legal effects of the facts only is more properly referred (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).

446. ———.]—It has been, from the very earliest period of time, the established doctrine that the judge is bound to state, & it is for that purpose made matter of law, whether there was or was not probable cause for that proceeding which is complained of as having been malicious. In order to sustain such an action against a party for having prosecuted maliciously & without probable cause, two things must be made out, that the prosecution was malicious, & that it was without probable cause. Whether it is malicious or not is purely a question for the jury. Whether there was or was not probable cause is a question of law for the judge. To enable the judge to arrive at a decision upon that question of law, he may, if the circumstances of the case call for it, ask the jury any fact leading or not to a particular conclusion. Did the party do so & so? because upon your answer "aye" or "no," I come to the conclusion whether there was or was not probable cause (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—FRASER v. HILL (1853), 1 C. L. it appear that there was any rule of practice on the subject at those sessions. An appeal under the statute, of which due notice had been given, was respited, & came on at a subsequent session, pursuant to the respite. Applt. was called upon to prove that he had given notice of trial of the respited appeal, & on his failing to do so the appeal was dismissed:—Held: the sessions were wrong in requiring such notice, & the case was one in which this ct. might overrule their decision. Mandamus granted to hear the appeal.

apprehended for felony. P. was tried & acquitted, & brought an action for a malicious prosecution. Whether L. saw R. before, or only after, the apprehension, was a matter of contradictory evidence at the trial. The jury found that he had not seen R. before ordering P.'s apprehension. The judge directed the jury that that being so, he considered L. to have acted on hearsay evidence alone, & therefore without reasonable & probable cause, & consequently that P. was entitled to the verdict:—Held: this was a misdirection, & there must be a new trial.

There can be no doubt since the case of Panton v. Williams, No. 441, ante, in which the question was solemnly decided in the Exch. Chamber, that what is reasonable & probable cause in an action for malicious prosecution, or for false imprisonment, is to be determined by the judge. In what other sense it is properly called a question of law I am at a loss to understand. No definite rule can be laid down for the exercise of the judge's judgment. Each case must depend upon its own circumstances, & the result is a conclusion drawn by each judge for himself, whether the facts found by the jury, in his opinion, constitute a defence to the action. The verdict in cases of this description, therefore, is only nominally the verdict of a jury (LORD CHELMSFORD).

The existence of "reasonable & probable cause" is an inference of fact. It must be derived from all the circumstances of the case. I regret, therefore, to find the law to be, that it is an inference to be drawn by the judge, & not by the jury. I think it ought to be the other way (LORD WESTBURY).—LISTER v. PERRYMAN (1870), L. 459. General rule — Judge to decide on undisputed facts.—Upon the trial of an action for maliciously indicting pltf., without reasonable or probable cause, pltf. proved a case, which, in the opinion of the learned judge, showed that there was no reasonable or probable cause for preferring the indictment. Deft. then called a witness to prove an additional fact, & that being proved, the learned judge was of opinion, that there was reasonable & probable cause for preferring the indictment:—Held: there being no contradictory testimony as to that fact, & there being nothing in the demeanour of the witness who proved it to impeach his credit, the learned judge was not bound to leave it to the jury to find the fact, but that he might act upon it as a fact proved, & nonsuit pltf.—*DAVIS v. 490. ———.] — In an action for malicious prosecution the judge, at the close of pltf.'s case, & against the protest of deft.'s counsel, asked the jury whether they thought deft. had acted with malice. The jury returned an answer in the affirmative, contrary to the expectation of the judge, & the case proceeded, the judge refusing to rule expressly that there was reasonable & probable cause. On the conclusion of deft.'s case the jury found that deft. had acted with malice, & had not himself believed in the existence of any circumstances justifying the charge he had made, & judgment was thereupon given for pltf., the damages having been assessed at £250 :—Held : (1) though, if the jury found that deft. had acted bonâ fide, the question of reasonable & probable cause was for the judge, yet, where deft. was found by them not to have believed in circumstances justifying his action, the question of reasonable & probable cause could not be ruled in his favour. Reasonable & probable cause in the mind of the judge was not sufficient ; there must have been reasonable & probable cause moving deft.

No doubt a deft. may believe there is reasonable & probable cause, if he is a hasty man or a very suspicious man ; but if he believe there is reasonable & probable cause, the judge is not therefore bound to say that there was reasonable & probable cause. The judge must form his own judgment ; & if the question as to the deft.'s belief had been answered in the affirmative, that would not have entitled the judge to say that upon the facts disclosed or admitted there was reasonable & probable cause (DENMAN, J.).

These actions are only maintainable on acquittal, because a man may prosecute successfully, & he may have reasonable & probable cause, whether he believed it or not ; but if a man believes that another is not guilty of a criminal charge, & prosecutes unsuccessfully, I confess I have the greatest difficulty in seeing that such a man can be held to have had reasonable & probable cause for prosecuting (LINDLEY, J.).

they honestly believed in the case which they laid before the magistrates. Where, therefore, a declaration alleged that A. & B., intending to extort money from C., maliciously & vexatiously, & without reasonable or probable cause, conspired together to commence, & did maliciously, etc., commence, an unfounded action against C., in the name of D., but for their own benefit, knowing D. to be a pauper; & that, in further pursuance of the said conspiracy, etc., they maliciously, etc., prosecuted the action until afterwards, to wit, on etc., when D. was nonsuited therein; & then proceeded to allege that afterwards it was considered by the ct. that D. should take nothing by his writ, but that he & his pledges to prosecute should be in mercy, etc., whereupon & whereby the said suit was & is wholly ended & determined; & that, by means of the premises, C. had been put to costs, which, by reason of D.'s insolvency, he had been unable to obtain:—Held: no cause of action was disclosed, the declaration showing no award of costs of the nonsuit in the action against C.; & extra costs, ex concessis, forming no ground of legal damage.

In an action for a malicious prosecution, or for a conspiracy to bring an action or to institute a prosecution, it is necessary to show that the action or the prosecution was determined (MAULE, J.).

It is clear that no action will lie for improperly putting the process of the law in motion in the name of a third person, unless it is alleged & proved to have been done maliciously & without reasonable or probable cause; but, if there be malice & want of reasonable or probable cause, no doubt the action will lie, provided there be also a legal damage (WILLIAMS, J.).

The mere expenditure of money by pltf. in the defence of the action brought against him does not constitute such legal damage; but the only measure of damage is, the costs ascertained by the usual course of law (TALFOURD, J.).—COTTERELL v. JONES (1851), 11 C. #### SUB-SECT. 2.—WHAT AMOUNTS TO.

A. Damage to Reputation.

510. General rule.]—An action lies for a malicious indictment which puts the party to expense though the charge it contains neither scandalises him nor endangers his personal security.

There are three sorts of damages, any of which would be sufficient ground to support this action. (a) The damage to a man's fame, as if the matter whereof he is accused be scandalous. (b) The second sort of damages, which would support such an action, are such as are done to the person; as where a man is put in danger to lose his life, or limb, or liberty, which has been always allowed a good foundation of such an action. (c) The third sort of damages, which will support such an action, is damage to a man's property, as where he is forced to expend his money in necessary charges, to acquit himself of the crime of which he is accused, which is the present charge. That a man in such case is put to expenses, is without doubt, which is an injury to his property, & if that injury is done to him maliciously, it is reasonable that he shall have an action to repair himself (HOLT, C.J.).

Unless the bill be found, no action will lie, for that the party is not damaged, neither is it a good resulted.—BAYNE v. BLAKE (1909), 9 C. L. R. 374.—AUS.

In the present case, the indictment did certainly contain a charge of a scandalous nature, & as to that, the question in the first place is whether it was necessary that the wife should be joined in this action. As to that I agree, that in an action for words spoken against the wife, she must be joined; but in the present case she need not; because by preferring this prosecution against the wife as well as the husband, there might be a special damage to the husband by this means; & therefore this case may be resembled to that of a battery committed on the wife, per quod the husband consortium amisit (LORD HARDWICKE, C.J.).—SMITH v. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—ABSENCE OF REASONABLE AND PROBABLE CAUSE.

535. Burden lies on plaintiff—Shifted by prima facie evidence.]—In an action on the case for a malicious prosecution, pltf. is to give prima facie evidence of want of probable cause, which deft. may rebut, if he can, by showing the existence of probable cause. Deft. presented two bills for perjury against pltf., but did not appear himself before the grand jury, & the bills were ignored. He presented a third, & on his own testimony the bill was found. This prosecution he kept suspended for three years, till pltf., taking the record down to trial, & deft. declining to appear as a witness, although in ct., & called on, pltf. was acquitted:—Held: sufficient prima facie evidence of want of probable cause.

This is an action for indicting pltf. without probable cause. It is true, as admitted on both sides, that, in order to support such an action, there must be a concurrence of malice in deft. & want of probable cause. Malice alone is not sufficient, because a person actuated by the plainest malice may nevertheless have a justifiable reason for prosecution. On the other hand, the substantiating the accusation is not essential to exonerate the accuser from liability to an action; for he may have had good reason to make the charge, & yet be compelled to abandon the prosecution by the death or absence of witnesses, or the difficulty of producing adequate legal proof. The law, therefore, only renders him responsible where malice is combined with want of probable cause.

Who is to decide what shall be esteemed probable cause? That is a question of law for the judge, as it arises from the facts disclosed; & if there be any discrepancy in the testimony, or imputations on the credit of the witnesses, those are matters for the decision of the jury; so that, as in questions touching reasonable notice & the like, the judge must pronounce his opinion on the facts when found by the jury.

. Burden lies on plaintiff—by prima facie evidence.]—In

537 iv. —.]—CUNNINGHAM v. EVANS,

The other question which has been discussed is, Who is to show the absence of probable cause?

Pltf. must take the first step; because it is not to be presumed that any one has acted illegally. There must, therefore, be some evidence of want of probable cause, before the deft. can be called on to justify his conduct (TINDAL, C.J.).

Although LORD KENYON said in Smith v. Macdonald, No. 371, ante, that if the evidence offered to the jury by a prosecutor, on the trial of an indictment, be sufficient to cause them to pause, he should hold it to be a probable cause, I cannot accede to that doctrine, for a person might then suffer from the prejudices or capricious feelings of a jury (PARK, J.).—WILLANS v. He further proved, that shortly before the commission was taken out, he had removed some goods under circumstances which did not make the removal an act of bkpcy., but were probably relied on by deft. as having that effect. It was not shown that this was the fact upon which the comrs. made their adjudication, or by which deft. supported his plea in the former action:—Held: this was sufficient evidence to throw on deft. the onus of proving probable cause.

(2) What amounts to probable cause for suing out a commission, is a question for the judge alone, if the facts relied upon to amount to probable cause are not in dispute.—COTTON v. JAMES (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 128; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 345; 109 E. R. 735.

578. Counsel for prosecution—To prove alteration of book during prosecution.]—The rule as to privileged communications between counsel or attorney & client does not extend to facts of which the counsel or attorney of themselves obtain knowledge in the course of trial.

Counsel attended before a magistrate on behalf of a person charged with embezzlement, & a book was produced by the prosecutor in which it was the duty of the person charged to have entered a sum of money received by him, & there was no such entry. On a second examination, the book was again produced when the entry was found. The party charged having brought an action for a malicious prosecution:—Held: the counsel might give evidence as to whether the entry was in the book at the time of the first examination, since the state of the book was not information communicated to him by his client, but knowledge which he acquired by his own observation.—BROWN v. FOSTER (1857), 1 H. & N. 736; 26 L. J. Ex. 249; 28 L. T. O. S. 274; 21 J. P. 214; 3 Jur. N. S. 245; 5 W. R. 292; 156 E. R. 1397.

—Held: looking at the whole declaration, what followed the making of the charge & obtaining the warrant, was attributable to that charge & done under the warrant & was therefore the subject-matter of an action upon the case, & although it might be bad on special demurrer for informality in not alleging more particularly that it was done under the warrant, it was no misjoinder of case & trespass.—HENSORTH v. f. When action lies.]—In an action for malicious prosecution if the prosecutor has had a search warrant issued & executed in order to obtain evidence in support of his charge, pltf., in a subsequent action for malicious prosecution, will have a right to have that considered in aggravation of damages in the event of his getting a verdict in the action; but, if he fails, he can have no separate cause of action based on the issue or execution of the search warrant.—RENTON v. 1516. — On ground of absence of notice—Usual practice of sessions to allow appeals without notice.—Poor Relief Act, 1744 (c. 39), s. 4, does not make it imperative on the justices to hear & determine an appeal at the sessions next following the publication of the rate, but they may adjourn it to the next sessions. Where a rate was published on Sept. 16, & the appeal was entered at the Michaelmas Sessions, but deft. did not give notice of his intentions to try his appeal at those sessions, & the justices adjourned it as a matter of course to the Epiphany Sessions, according to the usual practice, & applt. gave notice of her intention to try his appeal at the Epiphany Sessions, when the justices refused to hear it, on the ground that it ought to have been heard & determined at the preceeding sessions, this ct. granted a mandamus to compel them to hear the appeal.—R. v. of the complaint in the order was sufficient, the ct. granted a mandamus to compel the sessions to enter continuances & hear the appeal.

There was a refusal to entertain the question. If not, it may be so returned; at all events there is enough to induce us to call upon the justices to make a return (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—R. v. SUSSEX JJ. (1844), 1 New Sess. Cas. 438; 9 J. P. 103.

The plea then proceeded to state, that the several imprisonments in this action are the same as those in the former action; & that all the grievances in this action were directed by the judge to be taken into consideration by the jury in the first action; & that they were taken into their consideration; & that they are the same damages in respect of which & on occasion whereof the damages were given by the jury in the first action:—Held: the causes of action were perfectly distinct & different, & the plea was bad.—*GUEST v. 605. ———— Aggravation—Justification of count of slander.—In an action for malicious prosecution & false imprisonment the declaration contained a count for slander averring the reiteration by deft. of the charges upon which he prosecuted pltf. Deft. pleaded various pleas to the counts for malicious prosecution & false imprisonment, & in addition pleaded justification to the count for slander. On the trial no evidence was given on either side on the issue raised by the count & plea in slander, & pltf. recovered a verdict with damages generally. On motion for a rule nisi for a new trial on the ground that the jury had been misdirected, inasmuch as they had been charged to dismiss from their consideration the aggravation of the original slander in pleading the justification:—Held: under the circumstances the operation of the rule that pleading a justification which fails to be supported by evidence is an aggravation of the tort charged was excluded here, & the direction was therefore right.—*BROOKE v. 7. Market “legally established” under Hawkers Act, 1810 (c. 41)—Whether market de facto included.—A daily market was held at W., & had been for upwards of twenty years; but the only legal grant authorising a market was for one on Fridays, & the owner of the soil had taken the tolls as for a market on Friday upwards of twenty years:—Held: this was a legal market within above Act, s. 5, only on Fridays; & therefore a person hawking on Saturday without a licence was rightly given into custody, & taken before a magistrate.—BENJAMIN v. ANDREWS (1858), 5 C. B. N. S. 299; 27 L. J. M. C. 310; 22 J. P. 464; 4 Jur. N. S. 976; 6 W. R. 692; 141 E. R. 119.

8. Franchise.—JEWEL'S CASE, No. 70, post.

9. —.— Distinct from franchise of market.—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. WORKSOP URBAN COUNCIL, No. 176, post.

10. Distinguished from statute sessions for hiring servants.—Applt. placed a stall for refreshments upon a public footpath during a statute sessions for the hiring of servants, which took place close by. These statute sessions had been held regularly every year for nearly fifty years, & it had been the custom on these occasions to have stalls on this footpath. Justices at petty sessions convicted applt. of obstructing a highway under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 72:—Held: the conviction was proper; this claim of right by applt. did not oust the justices' jurisdiction; & there could not be a legal origin for such a custom.

“In the case of a regular market or fair for the sale of goods, there may be a valid right of persons to erect stalls in the market place or street. But these statute sessions are not on the same footing as a fair for the sale of commodities” (BLACKBURN, J.).—SIMPSON v. WELLS (1872), L. R. 7

11. Whether confined to place for buying & selling—Construction of local Act.—A local Act by sect. 126 imposed a penalty upon any occupier of land within the borough who held or permitted to be held any market or fair thereon, without the licence of the corpn. Deft., being the occupier of certain land within the borough of Walsall, on certain days, one being a regular fair day, without the licence of the corpn., brought on to his land & used certain swing boats, roundabouts, shooting galleries, & many other contrivances for the amusement of the people. These contrivances were the property of different persons, & it was not proved that such persons made any payment to deft. for the use of the land, or that there was any buying or selling of goods, or exposing the same for sale thereon. Deft. was convicted under the sect. of permitting the holding of a “fair” on his land:—Held: [BRUCE, J. having withdrawn his opinion] deft. was properly convicted, as the word “fair” has a wider meaning than that of a fair in the ordinary sense as a place for buying & selling, & although buying & selling are the chief idea in the word, yet it would include places where amusements of the kind in question were provided, although there was no buying & selling; (2) (BRUCE, J.) he ought not to have been convicted as the word “fair” in the sect. was used in its proper sense as a mart or gathering for the selling of goods & would not include gatherings where amusements only were provided.—COLLINS v. COOPER (1893), 68 L. T. 450; 9 T. L. R. 250; 37 Sol. Jo. 387; 17 Cox, C. C. 647; 5 R. 256; sub nom. COOPER v. COLLINS, 57 J. P. 248, D. C.

12. Amusements & shows—Whether fairs—Within local Act—Swings, roundabouts, etc.—COLLINS v. COOPER, No. 11, ante.

13. —.— —.— Horseraces.—A local Act of 1774 authorised the corpn. at the request of the stewards & wardens from time to time to grant leases of parts of the Town Moor for the purpose of improving the same, but s. 7 enacted that no lease should be granted of that part of the Town Moor called the Cowhill & such part adjoining the same as should be necessary for holding the Cowhill fairs, nor of another part of the moor called the Race ground, nor of any part of the moor where any booths, stalls & other erections had been set up during the holding of the said fairs or horse races, but the same should be reserved for fairs & horse races as theretofore. The local Act of 1870, s. 6, constituted a committee of the stewards & wardens, to be elected annually, to act for the stewards & wardens & for the freemen & widows of freemen for all purposes relating to the Town Moor, & s. 8 authorised the committee & the corpn. from time to time to enter into agreements for the appropriation of parts of the Town Moor for not exceeding ten days at a time for agricultural shows or other public purposes.

PART I. SECT. 1.

11. Royal prerogative.—The right to set up a market or fair is a prerogative right, which can only be granted by the Crown, after a preliminary inquiry under a writ of ad quod damnum.—DOWNSHIRE (MARQUIS) v. O'BRIEN unopposed, the magistrates quashed the order appealed against. Upon a rule for a mandamus to the justices to enter continuances & hear & determine the appeal:—Held: (1) although, on the dissolution of the highway district, the highway board ceased to be the highway authority for all purposes connected with the control & management of the highways, they nevertheless continued to exist as a corporate body for other purposes, viz., preparing & stating their accounts, getting in debts & other moneys due, distributing the funds in hand to the proper recipients, & generally winding up their affairs, & they were therefore proper resps. in the appeal, & entitled to be heard accordingly; (2) there had been no hearing & determination of the appeal on its merits, but merely an erroneous decision of the justices upon a preliminary objection, & therefore the rule for a mandamus must be made absolute.—R. v. ESSEX JJ. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 704; 49 L. T. 394; 32 W. R. 220; sub nom. Re BILLERICAY HIGHWAY BOARD, R. v. ESSEX JJ., 52 L. J. M. C. 124, C.A.

(1887), 19 L. R. Ir. 380.—IR.

111. —.—]—PIETERMARITZBURG MUNICIPALITY v. LISTER (1889), 10 N. L. R. 36.—S. AF.

1524. Refusal to enter judgment—On agreement of parties.]—The London County Council, objecting to the totals of the assessments of certain parishes within their jurisdiction as too low, appealed to quarter sessions of the County of London. A compromise was, however, effected, & the magistrates were asked to enter judgment in accordance with the agreement, & to alter the totals in the valuation list to those agreed upon. This they refused to do in the absence of detailed accounts, showing how the new totals were arrived at:—Held: the magistrates, in regarding the incongruity between the totals & the details, which would result from the alterations agreed upon, acted upon a consideration apart from the facts which they ought not to have taken into account & had therefore not heard & determined according to law.—R. v. EDLIN, ETC. JJ. (1891), 65 L. T. 83; 55 J. P. 790; 7 T. L. R. 483, D. C.

(c) Dismissal on Formal Grounds.

1525. Objection that appeal out of time.]—An appeal to the next sessions after an inclosure made by virtue of an inquisition taken on a writ of ad quod damnum is too late, if those sessions be not the next after the inquisition taken & entered & recorded at the sessions; therefore where the sessions dismissed such appeal as being out of time this ct. refused a mandamus to them to enter continuances, etc.—R. v. BUCKS JJ. (1813), 2 M. & S. 230; 105 E. R. 368.

1526. —.]—An order of removal, with grounds, was served on applts. on Nov. 21; on Dec. 9, they applied for a copy of the depositions & received it on Dec. 12: on Dec. 24 resps. received a notice that applts. would commence & prosecute the appeal at quarter sessions next after the expiration of fourteen days at least from the service of notice. By the practice of sessions ten days' notice of appeal was required. At the Epiphany sessions, on Jan. 5, no appeal was entered. The pauper was removed on Feb. 17. On Mar. 16, resps. received grounds of appeal: & at sessions on Apr. 5, applts. entered the appeal; but, on an objection that it was too late, sessions refused to hear it. On mandamus to the justices to hear the appeal:—Held: they were right, inasmuch as applts., if not bound to try at sessions in Jan., ought to have entered & respited at those sessions.—R. v. WEST RIDING JJ. (1858), E. B. & E. 713; 31 L. T. O. S. 232; 6 W. R. 681; 120 E. R. 677; sub nom. R. v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE JJ.,

BROMSGROVE v. HALIFAX, 27 L. J. M. C. 269; 23 J. P. 148; 5 Jur. N. S. 17.

1527. —.]—On an appeal to quarter sessions against an order of removal it is the duty of the ct. of quarter sessions to consider the question whether sessions at which the appeal has been entered are the next practicable sessions after the date of the order, & they are not necessarily precluded from hearing an appeal on the ground that there has been some delay on the part of applts. in applying for a copy of the depositions & giving notice of appeal which delay had prevented the appeal from being heard at a preceding session. A mandamus to enter continuances & hear an appeal will not be granted if it clearly appears that the sessions preceding those at which the appeal is entered were the next practicable sessions.—R. v. DERBYSHIRE JJ. (1871), 25 L. T. 161; 35 J. P. 663; 19 W. R. 876.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Norfolk JJ., Ex p. Wayland Union (1908), 78 L. J. K. B. 236.

1528. —.]—(1) The question whether Licensing Act, 1872 (c. 94), s. 52 (3), has been complied with is a question of fact to be determined by quarter sessions.

The ct. of quarter sessions having held that a delay of four days unaccounted for was sufficient to show that the statute had not been complied with, the Q. B. Div. refused to interfere by mandamus.

(2) The word “immediately” means the same thing as “forthwith” & implies prompt action & as speedy as the circumstances reasonably admit of.—R. v. BERKSHIRE JJ. (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 469; 48 L. J. M. C. 137; 27 W. R. 798; sub nom. Ex p. TUCK, 43 J. P. 607, D. C.

1530. —.]—R. v. MIDDLESEX JJ. (1837), 1 J. P. 370.

—.]—A notice of appeal against an order of removal was in the following terms: “take notice, that we being a majority of & acting for & on behalf of the churchwardens & overseers of,” etc., “& that the grounds of our appeal,” etc., & was signed by one person, “churchwarden of,” etc., & by four persons, “overseers of,” etc. It appeared that there were two churchwardens & four overseers of applt. parish, & no more. Quarter sessions having decided that the notice was insufficient, refused to hear the appeal:—Held: the notice was good, as sufficiently showing that it was an appeal by & on behalf of the whole body of parish officers; & the decision of quarter sessions on the point was a decision on a preliminary objection, & therefore, the ct. would grant a mandamus, commanding them to enter continuances & hear the appeal.—R. v. SURREY JJ. (1846), 3 Dow. & L. 573; 2 New Sess. Cas. 245; 1 Saund. & C. 12; *sub nom. R. v. SURREY JJ., ST. ANNE'S, WESTMINSTER (CHURCHWARDENS & OVERSEERS) v. ST. Prior to 1882 horse races with attendant roundabouts & shows had for many years been held on the race ground on the Town Moor, but in that year they were & ever since had been held elsewhere. From 1882 down to 1912 a temperance festival with attendant roundabouts & shows was annually held on the old race ground on the moor with the joint consent of the committee & of the corp'n., & had grown into a very large gathering of many thousands of people. In 1912 the heavy traction engines used by defts. to bring their roundabouts & shows to the festival cut up the surface of the moor & seriously damaged the herbage; consequently, in 1913 the committee, while consenting to the festival being held as usual on the moor, declined to join with the corp'n. in granting a licence to defts. to bring their roundabouts & shows on the moor for the festival. The corp'n. nevertheless granted defts. a licence for that purpose, & damage ensued to the herbage. Most of the holders of stint tickets for the years 1912 & 1913 were not freemen, but persons who had purchased tickets from freemen. In an action by the committee against defts. for an injunction to restrain them from bringing their roundabouts & shows on to the moor, & for damages, the corp'n. not being parties to the action:—Held: neither the horse races nor the temperance festival with the attendant roundabouts & shows was a fair within s. 7 of the Act of 1774, & the corp'n. had no power under either of the Acts to grant the licence to defts. without the consent of pl'ts.—*WALKER v. 16. Grant by letters patent — Grant by Crown as Duke of Lancaster—Fair in possessions of Duchy—Whether sealed with Great Seal or Duchy Seal.—

(1) The grant of a fair, newly created within the possession of the Duchy of Lancaster, by letters patent need not be under the Duchy Seal.

There is a distinction between possession & prerogatives. Possessions ought to pass under the Duchy Seal but Royal franchises, such as a fair, out of the County Palatine & within the Duchy ought to pass by the Great Seal.

(2) A fair is a royal franchise derived out of the Crown.—ASTILL v. CLARKE (1697), 2 Lut. 1233, 1 Ld. Raym. 341; 125 E. R. 684.

17. Grant by charter.]—Where, by a royal charter two markets, two fairs, a court-house, & a booth-hall, for the sale of merchandises, together with the tolls & profits of the market are granted to a corp'n. to be held ad usum et proficuum burgi et burgentium, this cannot be considered as a grant for a charitable purpose, but must be applied to the public use of the corp'n.; but to what use it must be applied the members of the corp'n. are the judges uncontrolled by this ct.—A.-G. v. WARWICK CORPN. (1737), West temp. Hard. 55; 25 E. R. 817.

18. — — — “With the assent” of Parliament—Effect.—A charter of 1327 made by the King with the assent of the prelates, earls, barons & all the commons of our realm assembled in our present Parliament, granted to the citizens of the city of London certain privileges, & among them “that no market within seven miles round about the city shall be granted by us or our heirs to any one.” By letters patent in 1682, reciting an inquisition founded on a writ of ad quod damnum, the King granted to resps.’ predecessor in title the right of holding markets on Thursday & Saturday in every week in Spittal Square, within the seven miles.

User of the market was proved since 1723. Applt. co. set up a depot or row of stalls at their terminus within 300 yards of Spittal Square & let them to dealers for the purpose of selling fruit & vegetables brought up by their railway, & justified their depot on the ground that resps.’ market was very crowded, that it was difficult for dealers to get stalls there, & that if any persons other than resps.’ tenants wished to sell in resps.’ market there would be no room for them; & that resps.’ market infringed the provisions of certain Paving Acts:—Held: (1) the charter of 1327 had, at the most, the force of a private or personal statute, & concerned the corp'n. of London only & not the general public; (2) the consent of the corp'n. was to be presumed to the letters patent of 1682; (3) the letters patent of 1682 conferred a valid right of market; (4) the co.’s depot was in fact a rival market, & a disturbance of resps.’ right of market, & entitled resps.’ to an injunction to restrain the co. from using their depot in the above manner or so as to interfere with resps.’ rights, & even if the co. had proved that there was not sufficient accommodation in resps.’ market, or that the Paving Acts had been infringed, those circumstances would have afforded no answer to the action for an injunction.

This ancient & immemorial corp'n. had certain market rights within the limits of the city, which market right according to the general presumption of law would be entitled to a certain amount of protection, prima facie extending to a distance of nearly 7 miles from the places in which they might

Sect. 24 authorised the erection of a market house on land described in the deposited plans, & by sect. 25 the co. were enabled to alter & widen streets in the way pointed out on the deposited plans, & by sect. 30, to buy additional lands, not exceeding two acres. A. was the owner of land on the west side of one of the streets on the western boundary of the area spoken of in the preamble, & his land was described in the deposited plans, but it did not thereby appear that more was intended to be taken than enough to widen one of the streets named in sect. 25. The co. proceeded to take the whole land of A. compulsorily, & to build upon it a covered building, in addition to the market house authorised by sect. 24, whereupon A. filed his bill for an injunction, which was granted, the judge deciding that the co. could only erect one market house, & not two, & that on the east side; & that although the preamble could not control the enactment it might be resorted to to remove obscurity. The co. appealed:—Held: as the land of pltf. was described in the plan, & as therefore it might be wanted, the co. were Afterwards the corpn., as the urban authority, established a cattle market in the borough, & published a list of tolls. Applt. was convicted for selling cattle, for which no toll had been paid, in his sale yard, within the borough, but not within the limits of the market:—Held: (1) the corpn. had not derogated from their grant by establishing a market; (2) applt. had not by virtue of the leases acquired any right to sell cattle within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 166, which the urban authority could not interfere with by establishing a market, & was therefore liable to a penalty under Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 13; (3) by the use of the words "within their district" in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 166, the district of the urban authority was constituted "the prescribed limits" within Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 13.—*SPURLING v. 39. Restriction on interfering with rights, powers & privileges—What rights, etc., protected—Erection of private "market" for auction sales—With approval of local authority.]—A market was duly opened in 1871 by the local board, under Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), & Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14). Resp. was charged by applt. with infringing sect. 13 of the latter Act by selling twelve sheep in a place other than the market not being his own dwelling-place or shop. The justices refused to convict under the following facts: Resp. had erected in 1865, under the approval of the local board, a large building called the Agricultural Hall, capable of holding one hundred head of cattle, with a large open yard with fixed pens capable of holding fourteen hundred sheep. The hall & yard were the private property of resp., & in his own occupation. Resp.'s dwelling-house adjoined & communicated with the yard. Resp. was in the habit of advertising & holding sales by public auction every Monday, which was the market day, the average sale each Monday being about one hundred cattle & one thousand sheep. The cattle & sheep so sold were the property of farmers & others, resp. charging the vendors a commission & guaranteeing payment of the amount of the sales. The offence proved was the sale of twelve sheep in the hall on a Monday, the hall being within the district of the board, & tolls being taken for the sale of sheep in the market:—Held: (1) the justices ought to have convicted, for the sale was not within resp.'s own shop within Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 13; (2) resp. by the establishment of his business under the approval of the local board, had not acquired any right, power, or privilege within Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 50.—*FEARON v. By an Act of 48 Geo. 3, after reciting the letters patent, it was enacted that it should be lawful for the person entitled to keep the market to take tollage of markets holden on Wednesday & Saturday. On June 13, 1887, the market rights were conveyed & assigned to the W. Local Board. In 1888 bye-laws were made regulating the use of the market place. Bye-law 15 provided that a market for the sale of goods, meat, fish, poultry, provisions, fruit, vegetables, plants, flowers, hardware, furniture, apparel, & all other goods, merchandise & marketable commodities should be held on every day except Sunday, Christmas Day, & Good Friday.

By a charter in 1269, a Tuesday market in P. was granted, which became vested in Queen's College, Oxford, who conveyed to pltf. Under Local Government Act, 1899 (c. 14), s. 19, a scheme was made for W. & an Order in Council was made extending the boundaries of W. so as to include P. No provision was made for charging tolls, but power to do so was given by the Woolwich Borough Council Act, 1903 (c. clxxvii), s. 4. Plffs. asked for an injunction to restrain defts. from hawking, selling, or offering or exposing for sale within the borough of W., except in their own dwelling-houses or shops, any articles or commodities usually sold in public markets except in a market place of the borough of W., & after payment of the tolls payable to plths. Some of defts. claimed a right to sell in the market without paying toll, & proved that they had sold without paying toll for a number of years:—Held: (1) as the right to take tolls was not given by the charter, but by the Act of 1903, no right was acquired by non-payment of tolls for a considerable period; (2) the words “rights, powers, or privileges” in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 166, meant rights, powers, or privileges acquired adversely to the rest of the world & peculiar to the individual, & did not include the right of a person simply as a member of the public to sell in the market without payment of tolls.—*WOOLWICH CORPN. v. 45. Whether lost grant presumed — Grant proved for less than claim.]—By letters patent in 1682, the King granted to the predecessor in title of those under whom deft. claimed as lessee the right to hold two markets, one on Thursday & the other on Saturday, in every week, “in or next to Spital Square.” The market place & four inner streets connected therewith were made by the grantee on the square piece of land which had formerly been Spital Square, & which land he had acquired when the charter was granted to him, but he never acquired the adjoining land which surrounded such square piece, & on which, subsequently to the charter, were made certain outer streets, into which the four inner streets ran. By letters patent in 1688, made void by a local Act, a third market was given, viz., on Monday in every week, & a market on Wednesday substituted for that on Thursday.

In proceedings taken at the instance of the local authority to restrain deft. from licencing the sale of goods in either the outer or the inner streets adjoining the market, the local authority relied on certain Paving Acts of George III., which empowered such authority to remove the obstruction caused by selling articles in those specific streets, & deft. proved a usage from the time of living memory to sell vegetables & fruit in any of those streets, & to pay toll to the market owner for so doing, when by reason of the market being so crowded it was impossible to get nearer to the inside market, & he also proved such usage to hold the market on other days of the week besides on Thursday & Saturday:—Held: (1) the market was a market without metes & bounds, & might extend, therefore, from time to time, as the crowded state of the market might require, over any of these surrounding streets, all of which were to be presumed to have been dedicated to the public subject to the exercise of the market franchise, notwithstanding the Paving Acts, as such Acts were not to be construed as interfering with the market rights; (2) the right to hold the market was confined to the two days mentioned in the charter of Charles II., & under the particular circumstances of the case a lost grant for the other days of the week was not to be inferred.

The grant [of franchise of a market] does not assume to grant any land, or any interest in land. It grants the franchise of holding a market & authorises a market to be held. . . . I am of opinion both on principle & authority that the grant of the franchise of a market has nothing to do with the ownership of the land by the person to whom it is granted (BRETT, M.R.).—*A.-G. v. 52. Duty to persons using—To keep in safe condition.]—Defts. were the owners of a cattle market, & in the market place they had erected a statue, round which they had placed a railing as a fence. Pltfs. attended the market with their cattle, & occupied a particular site, for which they paid a toll. A cow belonging to them, in attempting to jump the railing, injured herself, & subsequently died from the injuries. The jury found that the railing was dangerous:—Held: defts. having received toll from pltfs., & invited them to come to the market with their cattle, a duty was imposed on them to keep the market in a safe condition, & therefore an action would lie against defts. for the loss sustained by pltfs.—*LAX v. When a grant of market is not confined to any particular locality, the grantee may, from time to time, change the site in order to suit his own convenience; but it is an implied condition of the exclusive privilege that he shall provide a market place, & that implied condition is satisfied so long as he gives reasonable accommodation to those members of the public who use the market either as buyers or sellers, & the extent of the accommodation which must be afforded in each case must vary with the circumstances (LORD WATSON).—*EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES v. 60. Right to fix method of sale—Sale by auction.—A bye-law made in 1862 by the owners of an ancient public market at Tavistock provided that "no person shall sell or cause to be sold by auction, Dutch auction, or public competition any goods, articles or things whatsoever, without the consent of the superintendent, collector, inspector or surveyor of the markets or his assistant signified in writing under his hand," & imposed a penalty of forty shillings for a breach of the bye-law. Since 1895 sales by auction had become the usual method of disposing of live stock in the market:—Held: according to the common law affecting public markets, those who used & had a right to use the public market upon payment of the dues had the right to fix the manner in which their goods should be offered for sale & the purchaser & the price ascertained, namely, by public auction if they so desired, more especially where that was the ordinary method for effecting sales; & a bye-law, whether it altogether prevented the conduct of sales by auction, or whether, as in this particular case, it only prohibited sales by auction without the consent of the superintendent or other officer of the market, was invalid as being repugnant to the laws of that part of the United Kingdom in which Tavistock was situated, within Markets & Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 14), s. 42.—NICHOLLS v. C., Ord. 16, r. 9, which provides for persons suing or being sued as representing a class, is not confined to persons who have or claim some beneficial proprietary right which they are asserting or defending. To justify a person suing in a representative character, it is enough that he has a common interest with those whom he claims to represent.

Several pltfs. sued on behalf of themselves & all others the growers of fruit, flowers, vegetables, roots & herbs within Covent Garden Market Act, 1828 (c. cviii), to enforce various preferential rights to stands in the markets which they alleged to have been given to the class of growers by the Act. Deft. was the lord of the market:—Held: without prejudging the construction of the Act, pltfs. had an interest in common, & deft. was not entitled to have the action stayed either on the ground that pltfs. had no beneficial proprietary right, or that the joinder of pltfs. claiming separate & different rights under the Act, both personally & as representing a class, would embarrass or delay the trial.—BEDFORD (DUKE) v. 76. ——— In consideration of fine — Invalid.]—The portreeve, etc., of Aberavon were a corpn. from time immemorial, owning freehold estates & a town hall, & were not made subject to the provisions of the Municipal Corporation Act. By the local Act, 1848, the portreeve, etc., were empowered to construct a market, market place, etc., & to levy & receive rents & tolls, which were to be applied, first, in defraying the costs of obtaining the Act; secondly, in making & maintaining the buildings & in paying off borrowed moneys; & thirdly, to such objects as the portreeve, etc., should think fit. In 1860, pending an application by the inhabitants for a charter of incorporation, the portreeve, etc., sold all their property, except the town hall & the market, etc., constructed under the above mentioned Act; & early in 1861, after an intimation that the Lord President would recommend the Queen to grant the charter, they sold the town hall, & agreed to let the rents & tolls of the market to J. for fifty years, at an annual rent of £5, in consideration of a fine of £600. On Mar. 15, 1861, the original information was filed, praying a declaration that the portreeve, etc., were not authorised so to demise or lease the rents & tolls, & that any such demise or lease would be a breach of trust; & praying an injunction accordingly. On July 2, 1861, a new charter was granted to the inhabitants under the Municipal Corporations Amendment Act, & on Feb. 6, 1862, the information was amended by making the mayor, aldermen & burgesses under the new charter defendants, & praying a declaration that the markets, market place, etc., & the lands belonging thereto, & all rights to levy rents & tolls, & all other the property & rights of the portreeve, etc., had become vested in the mayor, etc., under the Municipal Corporations Act, etc.; that the portreeve, etc., might be decreed to deliver up possession thereof, & that inquiries & accounts might be directed to ascertain what property belonged to the portreeve, etc., at the date of the new charter. The portreeve, etc., insisted that there was no trust for the benefit of the inhabitants, & their lordships having come to the conclusion that this was so, except as to the property under Aberavon Market Act, 1848:—Held: the only decree that could be made upon the information was to restrain leases of the market property upon fine.—A.-G. v. 1. Lease of tolls—By corporation —Valid.]—A sale by the corpn. of Fredericton of the right to collect market tolls for a year, is not illegal under the city charter, 22 Vict. c. 8; such sale, being a demise of the tolls, may be by parol.—CITY OF FREDERICTON v. MULLIGAN (1863), 5 All. 571.—CAN.

2. ——— Necessity for registration.]—The right to collect market dues upon a given piece of land is a benefit to arise out of land within Registration Act, 1877, s. 3. A lease of such right for a period of more than one year must be made by registered instru-to raise money by debentures upon the tolls, rents & stallages of the borough markets. The interest upon these debentures was allowed to fall into arrear:—Held: the ct. could grant a receiver of the tolls, but it had no jurisdiction to interfere with the corp'n. in the letting or management of the stalls, etc., in the market place.—DE WINTON v. BRECON CORPN. (1858), 26 Beav. 533; 28 L. J. Ch. 598; 53 E. R. 1004.

Part IV.—Holding of Markets and Fairs.

SECT. 1.—DAYS AND HOURS.

79. Market held on Sunday—Effect of 27 Hen. 8, c. 5.]—A justification in trover that the goods were bought in market overt, impliedly confesses the allegation that they belonged to pltf. In pleading a sale in market overt, it is not necessary to allege the market to be in any certain person, or that it was not held on a Sunday, or that any toll was paid, or that the vendor had a special property in the goods sold.

He [def't.] alleges the prescription to be to hold a fair there every year upon Aug. 29, & he does not except Sunday, as it ought to be. Sed non allocatur. For a fair held upon the Sunday is well enough; although by above Act, there is a penalty inflicted upon the party that sells upon that day, but it makes it not to be void. It is not alleged here that any toll was paid, for otherwise the property is not changed. Sed non allocatur. For it is not of necessity, & in many villis no toll is used to be paid; & if it ought, it should be shown on the other part, to avoid the sale, that there was not any toll paid (per CUR.).—COMYNS v. BOYER (1596), Cro. Eliz. 485; 78 E. R. 736.

PART IV. SECT. 1.

801. Market or fair held on day other than prescribed day—Whether validated by prescription.]—It being objected for def't. that no market could lawfully be held on Good Friday, or May 29, or Oct. 23, which days were required by statute to be kept holy:

the prohibition under the statutes did not affect the prescriptive or chartered rights of persons entitled to markets.—CORK CORPN. v. SHINKWIN (1825), Sm. & Bat. 395, 399.—IR.

Sect. 2.—Place of holding: Sub-sects. 1, 2 & 3.]

an ancient market may, by law, have a right to prevent other persons from selling goods in their private houses situated within the limits of his franchise. Where such a market had been from ancient times held in a public street, but in consequence of the increased population & traffic, persons frequenting the market place were subjected to inconvenience & danger, & the lord had permitted part of the market place to be used for other purposes than for the sale of articles usually sold there; in an action brought by the lord against the owner of a house adjoining to the market place for there opening a shop & selling goods, but who, at the time when he sold the goods, had a stall in the market place, which he might have occupied:—Held: it was properly submitted to the jury to find whether, from the state of the market place, deft. had a reasonable cause for selling in his private house; & a verdict having been found for pltf., the ct. refused to grant a new trial.

He may either permit every place within the specified limits of the market to be the place where articles may be sold or . . . fix upon a particular place & he may say that different places shall be appropriated to the sale of different articles (BAYLEY, J.).

I take it to be implied that the grantee . . . shall fix it in such parts as will yield to the public reasonable accommodation (BAYLEY, J.).—MOSLEY v. WALKER (1827), 7 B. & C. 40; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 863; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 358; 108 E. R. 640.

A, B, all places within the limits so fixed are, by Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (c. 76), s. 8, parts of the borough for all purposes; & an ancient borough market may be lawfully held within such limits, although outside the limits of the old municipal borough.

(2) A market held in the same town with an old market if held upon the same day, is a disturbance by intendment of law, but if it is held on a different day it is only evidence of disturbance for the jury.

(3) To support an action for disturbance of a market, it is not necessary that deft. should have actually sold; any active interference by him in the conduct of the new market or participation in its profits or risk is sufficient.—*DORCHESTER CORPN. v. 97. Market defined by metes & bounds—No power to enlarge.—Re ISLINGTON MARKET BILL, No. 352, post.

98. Express power to enlarge—What amounts to.—(1) It is not essential, to make the grant of a market good, that it should be granted to a person who has the freehold in the land.

(2) A grant of a market "in or near" a certain place contemplates the extension of the market, if the owner of the market rights should see fit, beyond the particular area specified. Semble: such extension cannot go on indefinitely.

(3) Market rights "in or near" a certain place called "S. Square" were granted by letters patent to a person who was at the time lessee of the square & had acquired the greater part of the reversionary interest in it. The square was laid out as a market square, with four internal streets, & the adjoining land was afterwards laid out as four external streets. There was evidence that from the time of living memory the market had, in fact, extended beyond the four internal streets into parts of the four external streets:—Held: it must be presumed that the four external streets were made & dedicated to the public, subject to the market rights "in or near" the square, & with a view to the utilisation of the grant to its full extent & to the whole of its terms.—A.-G. v. HORNER (1885), 11 App. Cas. 66; 55 L. J. Q. B. 193; 54 L. T. 281; 50 J. P. 564; 34 W. R. 641; 2 T. L. R. 202, H. L.

99. — What extension within power — Erection of corn exchange near market.]—(1) In the Cambridge Market Act, 1850, power was given to the mayor, aldermen, & burgesses in council, to “enlarge” as well as improve the market of that borough:—Held: the meaning of the word was not restricted to merely extending the market to streets theretofore forming parts of its sides, but authorised them to extend the market to other streets in its immediate neighbourhood, even though such streets were not mentioned in the Act.

(2) The words in the Act, the “market place,” were not confined to the Market Hill, but extended to streets where de facto the market had been held.

(3) The general object of the Act being to enlarge & improve the market of the borough, the mayor & aldermen, who had the right to hold markets in the borough, though by the Act not authorised to enlarge an existing corn exchange, were held authorised to erect a new corn exchange, & make it adjoin the borough market, such being, in their opinion, a matter of public convenience, & an enlargement and improvement of the market.—A.-G. v. 102. — Grant “in or near”—Market bounded by streets—Dedication subject to market rights presumed.]—A.-G. v. HORNER, No. 98, ante.

103. — Private market—No presumption of dedication subject to market rights.]—In 1682 Charles II. granted to H.’s predecessor in title a right to hold markets on Thursdays & Saturdays. In A.-G. v. Horner, No. 98, ante, it was held that this charter authorised an overflow of the market into the adjoining streets on Thursdays & Saturdays, & that a lost charter for the other days of the week was not to be presumed. H. held markets on all the days of the week, made use of the adjoining streets for the purposes of these markets, & took tolls from the persons who used them; & took tolls from sellers instead of from buyers. An action was brought to restrain him from doing so:—Held: the question of a lost grant of a market on days other than Thursdays & Saturdays could not, after the decision in A.-G. v. Horner, No. 98, ante, be raised in that ct.; deft. had no right in respect of a private market to overflow into the streets on days other than Thursdays & Saturdays; he had always claimed to act under the franchise, & the ct. would not presume a legal origin for a usage which was inconsistent with the right claimed & would not presume that the streets had been dedicated to the public subject to the right of overflow; in the absence of custom or prescription or individual contracts to the contrary, market tolls were payable by the buyers & not by the sellers; the tolls taken were reasonable & there was no obligation on a franchise owner to publish a list of his charges; the fact that other members of the public would be benefited by the continuance of the illegal acts was immaterial.

As a matter of decision, it is now established that there is a franchise of a market without metes & bounds, but not for any days other than Thursdays & Saturdays. Applt. contends, & rightly, that on the other four days of the week it was competent to him to allow sellers & buyers to come upon his ground to traffic, & that in that sense the owner of the land could hold upon those four days that which applt. has called a private market, or proprietary market, or de facto market. This is no doubt so. But it is not a market in a legal sense on those days; he has on those days no right to charge tolls in the streets (BUCKLEY, L.J.).—A.-G. v. HORNER (No. 2), [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 82 L. J. Ch. 339; 108 L. T. 609; 77 J. P. 257; 29 T. L. R. 451; 57 Sol. Jo. 498; 11 L. G. R. 784, C. A.

104. — Market by prescription—Without metes & bounds—Dedication of adjoining modern streets subject to market rights presumed.]—There was in the parish of Whitechapel, which was included in the manor of Stepney, an ancient manorial market without metes & bounds, which was held in a street called High Street. There was evidence from which it might be inferred that the right to hold the market extended to holding it in streets adjoining High Street, when that street was overcrowded. Under an Act of Parliament passed in 1840 two new streets were made adjoining High Street on ground that included the sites of pre-existing streets which adjoined that street. Under an Act of Parliament passed in 1865 another new street, by which an existing street was connected with High Street, was made upon ground previously covered with houses. These streets were all in the parish of Whitechapel. The Acts under which they were respectively made provided that, when the streets were made, the ground laid open into them should form part of the streets, & should be used by the public accordingly. There was evidence that the streets so made had been for many years used for the purposes of the market without interference by the highway authority:—Held: the right to hold the market extended to holding it in these streets, when High Street was overcrowded, & the statutory dedication of them as highways must be taken to be subject to the user of them for the purposes of the market.—GINGELL, SON & FOSKETT, LTD. v. 106 Dedication subject to market rights—Exclusive right of occupation on market days.]—Applt., by virtue of a lease from the corpn. of Wednesbury, had the right to take certain stallage & other dues in a market, which was held under a charter, on specified days, on land within the borough, part of which was dedicated as a highway. The sessions found that on market days
